GOOD FELLOWS, CAN YOU IGNORE THESE PLEAS?

Sick, Hungry Poor Are Paging You.

Mr. Good Fellow's office, 1602 Tribune building, Madison and Dearborn streets, will be open today from 9 until 5. Telephone Central 0100 or call and get the names of families in dire need.

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.

Boy, page Mr. Good Fellow and hurry.

This letter just came in: "Please I am a little girl 12 years of age the oldest of five sisters and Brothers are young Than me. my Brother older than me went to the war and is in the hospital now he lost his mind so now I am the oldest home my father is dead and my mother is sick and not to work right now we have no shoes and wont have no Christmas If Santa Clause don't come to our home. Please don't Forget us. ANNA."

Brother Good Fellows. I was going to throw Anna right at you and see who was lucky enough to get her case. But I've decided to look after Anna myself.

Letter Grips the Heart.

Her scrawling little letter won't let go of you if you once read it. Her father dead and her soldier brother insane. He might have been one of the very men I saw lying stubbornly in their little fox holes upon the Verdun front when the boche was simply rocking the world with his hurricane of heavy shells.

And while brother was being rocked back and forth by the bursting shells and expecting death every moment, he probably thought of his mother and his sister Anna and the other brothers and sisters at home. All that brother could think in those terrible moments when the boche put a barrags fire down on him was probably that some day he would get home and see them all again.

Would Have Sought Death.

If brother could have looked forward to the Christmas of 1921, if he could have read the letter that little Anna would write at that time, he would probably have prayed that the shells, instead of tossing him around like a chip on the ocean and half burying him in mud and dirt, would fall straight into his fox hole and end it all.

Mr. Good Fellow, stand back. There's a lot of other cases you can have, but I'm going to see about Anna. I've got the jump on you. I have the letter and I know where Anna lives. I'll see that Anna has a good Christmas. I don't want to be selfish, and if any of you Good Fellows think I am taking an unfair advantage of you, I'll make you a fair sporting proposition.

Offers to Shake for Anna.

I'll shake you for Anna. Or we'll cut the cards, ace counts low, and the high card gets Anna. That's fair.

But if you lose out on Anna, here's another that you can have.

"I am a poor woman with a family of six children; the oldest is 13 and the youngest 2 years. My husband has not been working steadily, just a day now and then. If you help me in regard to clothes or things to eat for the children I would be very glad. MRS. E."

That's a pretty large order, but one of you Mr. Good Fellows could do the trick. Poor, father out of work, six children, house cold, no food, and not much clothing.

A Job for Some Bachelor.

Some bachelor Mr. Good Fellow ought to take this job. It'll serve him right for not being married and having children of his own. There's no tax on bachelors, but if we set 'em to work taking care of six children every Christmas it will serve 'em right and do the children a lot of good.

And here's one that either Mr. Good Fellow or Mrs. Good Fellow can look after:

"Will some one help a poor family that are in need very much, the wife is not able to work, the father is out of work, three children, one cannot walk."

And you, Mr. Goodfellows that would like to take care of Anna and her brothers and sisters but somebody grabbed her first, what about Nellie?

"We Are Never Happy."

This is what Nellie says: "I am a poor little girl. My father is out of work. My father has fainting spells. We have no coal or wood for our fire, and many times we have no bread to eat. We are in need of clothing. We are never happy. We will not have anything for Christmas, not even our dinner. All I wish for Christmas, Santa Claus, is dinner for my father and mother and myself, and some clothes."

Well, Nellie, I hope you get some-

FRANCE IS FIRM FOR HUGE NAVY, DELEGATE SAYS

Others "Astonished" at Lively Session.

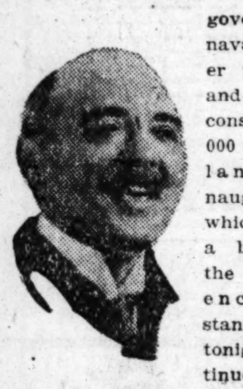
PARIS, Dec. 17.—[United Press.]—France is opposed to the abolition of submarines.

France sees no reason why she should not have a navy as big as Japan's.

In these statements, made here semi-officially today, France takes direct issue with Britain at the Washington arms conference.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The demand of the French government for a naval rating higher than Japan's and the right to construct ten 35,000 ton post-Jutland dreadnaughts by 1935, which struck like a bombshell in the arms conference yesterday, stands unaltered tonight and continues to bewilder the delegates of the other powers who are seeking to bring about a compromise in the French position.



M. ALBERT SARRAUT.

Secretary Hughes is reported to have suggested a naval ratio of 1.75 for France and Italy, which would give each country the capital ship strength of 35 per cent as compared with the United States and Great Britain. France, it is reported, may be willing to accept 2.7, which would give her a maximum of 275,000 tons capital ship strength.

Lively Committee Meeting.

The conference subcommittee of fifteen on naval armament considered the proposal for three hours without result and adjournment was taken until Monday, by which time it is hoped that word from Paris will have been received which will make possible a settlement upon terms of justice to France, taking into consideration her special position due to her inability to construct ships since the beginning of the war.

Today's session, it was learned from an authoritative source, was the most exciting one that has been held since the delegates assembled on Nov. 12, representatives of all the participating powers taking part in the lively discussions which followed an argument for the proposal presented by Albert Sarraut, head of the French delegation.

Mr. Sarraut expressed amazement at the "emotion" the French request had aroused both in the conference and in the press, and sought to impress upon the conference that France desired a theoretical capital ship ratio of 3.7, although not intending to build up to that point at this time.

Cannot Understand Objection.

The three great powers, he said, had settled their ratings after five weeks of consideration, and he did not understand why there should be so much confusion over the position of France, which had been before the conference only twenty-four hours.

France, Mr. Sarraut explained, did not ask to build ten superdreadnaughts next week or next month, but was looking forward to the future and wished to place her prospective needs before the conference in a manner that would be thoroughly understood.

The American and British delegations, it was stated, wish to deal with the naval problem on the basis of actualities, and they are opposed to the French demand, because, if France is permitted to construct ten new capital ships, the ratio agreed upon by the three naval powers, America, Great Britain, and Japan, could only be maintained by an increase in the number of their ships and the expenditure of huge sums of money, throwing out of gear the entire purpose and program of disarmament.

French View Outlined.

The French plea is that France is an ancient nation, one of the greatest in the world, that she has had a navy for hundreds of years and that she feels entitled to the theoretical recognition of her claim for ten new capital ships

"I fail to understand why there should be all this uproar," said Mr. Barraut tonight. "We suggested what we regard as our proper position. That is all. We are here to discuss. We are glad to hear what everyone thinks about it. The French are always open to reason. We want to talk this thing over calmly and see absolutely no reason to get excited about it.

"GOOD TIMES" ARMY ADVANCING, HARDING INFORMS NORTHWEST

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 17.—Confidence that this country is on "the return to good times" is expressed by President Harding in a letter to the editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch, on the occasion of the paper's annual edition, to be published tomorrow.

"I am glad," said President Harding's letter, "to be able to express to the people of the great northwest my firm confidence that conditions are improving and that the country has set its foot forward on the way to the return to good times."

JANITORS WILL TAKE PAY SLASH IF RENTS ARE CUT

More than 2,000 members of the Chicago Flat Janitors' union gathered in Musicians' hall, 175 West Washington street, last night to hear the terms of changes in the basis of their pay proposed by the Chicago Real Estate board when the present agreement ends on Jan. 1. They now receive $4 per month for a flat renting for $60 and $1 more for every additional $15 on the rental. The real estate board proposes to limit their sharing in additional rentals to $100, thereby making their maximum pay for any flat $6 and a fraction. William Quesse, president of the union, pointed out that janitors in some localities would suffer a 60 per cent pay cut.

"We will be willing to accept these terms," he said, "providing rents come down. If that happens, our pay will be cut automatically. But I don't see why they should boost rents and cut us out of our share of the profit."

E. A. Potter, business manager of the Chicago Tenants' Protective league, promised the janitors the full coöperation of his organization. Both he and Quesse declared the public would benefit by dealing directly with owners and eliminating the agents.

REND JR. CHARGES FRAUD BY FATHER

Sues for $350,000 Left by Coal Baron.

Charging that he was defrauded out of $350,000 worth of stock in the W. P. Rend company, James E. Rend Jr., 22 year old grandson of the late William P. Rend, Chicago millionaire who amassed a vast fortune in coal, yesterday filed suit for recovery against his father, James E. Rend, and his mother, Mrs. Mabelle K. Rend.

The suit, filed in the Circuit court by Attorney E. C. Tourje of Olds & Tourje, also names Joseph P. Rend, uncle of the young man and trustee under the provisions of the old coal baron's will.

Attorney Tourje refused to discuss the suit, referring interviewers to his young client, who was a naval aviator during the war and is now a student at Yale.

Leaves "Spendthrift Fund."

William P. Rend died on Nov. 30, 1915. In his will he created, according to the bill, a "spendthrift fund" for his son, James E. Rend. This fund consisted of the $350,000 worth of stocks in question, and it was provided that James E. Rend could not obtain them nor dividends accruing from them until he was 50 years old.

The will further provided that should James E. Rend ever attempt to sell or even negotiate for the sale of these stocks they would at once become the property of his son, James E. Rend Jr., the grandson of William P. Rend.

Young Rend now charges that a year ago his mother and father deliberately schemed to violate the will and place him in possession of the stocks by negotiating their sale.

Signs Bonds to Father.

After accomplishing this, he alleges, they induced him to sign them over to his father so that the latter might obtain the interest accruing from them before he reached the age of 50. James E. Rend is now said to be 45 years old.

"I was at a preparatory school in the east when they called me to Chicago a year ago," said young Rend. "They asked me to sign the paper conveying the stocks to my father, saying it would be best for the whole family, and also necessary in order that I might go to college. I knew nothing about the provisions of my grandfather's will, so I signed.

"Get Out," Father's Order.

"A month ago I wrote my father for money. He made excuses. When I came to him for an explanation he told me to 'get out'—cast me off. Then I decided to start suit."

Mrs. Mabelle K. Rend recently brought suit for divorce and the case is now pending. She has been living at the Ambassador hotel and James E. Rend at the Webster.

Mrs. Rend last night would say only: "I have full confidence in my son. Ask him about it."

"But, Mrs. Rend," the reporter interposed, "your son accuses you in his case. You are on the other side and he can hardly talk for you."

"Perhaps my son is right in the matter," she rejoined with a smile.

Charges Involve Uncle.

After setting forth the charges against his father and mother, young Rend alleges that "divers large sums of money have accrued from the stocks to Joseph P. Rend, trustee," and that "divers sums have been paid by Joseph P. Rend" to his father and his mother, but that the sums so paid "do not equal the amount of the dividends which have accrued," and that an accounting will show that a large amount not paid as dividends by Joseph P. Rend to James E. and Mabelle K. Rend is still due him."

James E. Rend could not be reached at his hotel last night.

COLLEGE GIRLS GOOD WIVES AND MOTHERS, VASSAR DOCTOR SAYS

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Dr. Elizabeth B. Thelberg of Vassar college says that the college girl of today is a marrying girl. Dr. Thelberg, who is a resident physician at Vassar as well as professor of physiology and hygiene, has supervised the health and education of thousands of girls during the last thirty-five years.

"The college girl of today marries as naturally and in just as large numbers as other girls in her class and station," she said. "She has as many children as her noncollege friends, and is much more likely to bring those she bears to maturity by reason of her college training. Our lowered birth rate today is a general economic condition not in any way due to college women."

Germany Faces "Great Danger"; The Teetotaler

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—"The great danger to the country as a result of more and more Germans, especially workmen, becoming teetotalers," was discussed at a special meeting of the brewers' association, according to a Socialist paper, which alleges that the beer makers are planning a campaign against abstainers.

Mousetraps of the Deep Serve This Maryland Man

Chestertown, Md., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Thomas H. White, merchant, deals in fresh oysters. He is bothered by mice. On closing his store he leaves newly fished oysters about. Curious mice peep into the bivalves, their whiskers tickle the mollusc, the shells slam shut, and that mouse is no more.

Farwell Raps So. Shore Club 3 A. M. Dance

How fully do the South Shore Country club's Sunday morning "breakfast dances" conform to the Volstead act?

Does this innovation imply an accompaniment of the prohibited liquids?

The Chicago Law and Order league, per Arthur Burrage Farwell, wants to know.

The first of these alluring 3 a. m. entertainments at the South Shore club was held this morning and Mayor Thompson and Chief of Police Fitzmorris were duly advised of Mr. Farwell's suspicions and an investigation requested.

At Request of Members.

The breakfast dances are announced as a "new feature established at the request of members," according to the program and invitation sent out for this morning's affair. A few excerpts from the printed invitation are as follows:

"A Breakfast Dance, in the dining room, from midnight until 3 a. m. Breakfast served at 1:30 a. m.

"The capacity of our dining room is estimated at 400. On account of limited facilities and the large number of our members who wish to take advantage of this new feature, guests will be limited to one couple per member. (The breakfast dances are unusually popular for the late hours they are given.)

"Table d'Hote, $5.00 per plate. Tables limited to six.

"Flowers?"

Mr. Farwell Intrigued.

Mr. Farwell's letter to the mayor and chief says that if evidence of the sale of liquor at the club could be secured (inferring that the purpose of these late breakfast dances is for drinking) it would be one of the finest things ever done.

"I understand that both of you men are members of this club," Mr. Farwell writes. "From information that has come to me during the years of its existence some bad exhibitions have been allowed and a great deal of drinking has been indulged in at times. This knowledge comes to us confidentially from people who were there, but we could not bring these people into it.

Would See "What Goes On."

"I believe that this breakfast dance needs to be investigated very carefully and we desire that you would have some representatives there to see what goes on and if the laws are broken that the club be raided just the same as the Entertainers' on Indiana avenue was and the guilty one brought to justice."

Chief Fitzmorris could not be reached last night.

A few days ago, in speaking of drying up Chicago, the chief said he meant all places where liquor was sold, given away, or consumed.

"Does this include clubs?" he was asked.

"Absolutely," he replied, adding that exclusive clubs were amenable to the law the same as the "Entertainers'" and other establishments of that sort.

CARPENTERS TO BALLOT ON CUT IN THEIR WAGE

Evidence that the carpenters are at last coming to the conclusion they will have to accept a wage cut along with the trades participating in the Landis award came yesterday when Harry Jensen, president of the Carpenters' District council, announced that he had put the question of a 15 cents an hour reduction to a referendum of the 18,000 union men.

If this is approved their wage would be reduced to $1.10 an hour, the rate Judge Landis set for electricians and bricklayers. The carpenters' rate was fixed at $1 an hour.

Notice of the referendum was sent to all locals and their answer is expected in two weeks.

$13,000,000 OF ASSETS GONE, RECEIVER SAYS

$800,000 Loss on Stores Charged.

Charges that $11,337,965.94 of the assets of the Coöperative Society of America invested by 90,000 shareholders, have been so manipulated that there remains only $16 in a bank and a debt of $1,758,478.20—a virtual shortage of $13,096,428.15—were made yesterday in a report by the Central Trust company, receivers, to Federal Judge Evan A. Evans.

The charges are characterized as "lies" by Harrison Parker, chief trustee of the society.

In the report the receivers assert that Parker, in his testimony in the bankruptcy hearing, not only perjured himself but admitted it.

Transfer of Funds Charged.

It is alleged that through his power as trustee of the society Parker caused the transference of all the securities of the society to concerns organized by himself or to persons who have no direct obligation to the society. These include his wife, Mrs. Edith Stubbs Parker, and Charles C. Higgins, a relative.

It is admitted in the report that the receiver has, through the unusually wide scope of the order for the receivership, obtained control of securities totaling a majority of the original society's assets. To obtain other assets which it is believed are still hidden, the receivers ask that further time be given.

Progress Is Slow.

It is asserted in the report that even with almost daily hearings but little progress has been made in wading through the maze of financiering which Parker claims he erected as a barbed wire entanglement against any attempts to throw his project into bankruptcy. These include the formation of half a dozen companies and "trusts" and a network of stock purchases and loans.

Briefed somewhat the report shows that in February, 1919, a common law trust known as the Coöperative Society of America was formed between Parker, John Coe, and N. A. Hawkenson as trustees, and Mrs. Parker, who at that time was the holder of the remains of the defunct National Society of Fruitvalers. Following the formation of this trust, Parker formed the Midwest Advertising company — his wife held the stock—and then executed a contract which gave the Midwest concern the sole rights to sell the beneficial certificates of the society.

Still Another Company.

Later the Great Western Securities company was formed the same way, and absorbed the Midwest company. The Great Western sold the certificates. Salesmen represented that the money was to be used to build a great chain of coöperative groceries and that the money from the sale of the certificates was to be used by the Coöperative Society of America.

The certificates were sold on the installment plan. The first payment, 20 per cent, was retained by the Great Western company for selling commissions. The remainder of the payments were kept by it until all installments had been paid.

How $28,332,089 Dwindled.

Of the $28,332,089.46 of subscriptions and the $11,337,965.95 of actual cash received the Coöperative society got but $2,621,279.20; $1,758,478.20 more was borrowed by Parker from his company, the Great Western, at 7 per cent interest and used by the Coöperative—the society, the report charges, paying interest to Parker's concern for money received from the sale of the society's certificates. Thus, to quote the report:

"Not only have the trustees parted, by reason of the aforesaid arrangements with selling agencies, with funds paid under subscription contracts made with said trustees, but, further, on Nov. 4, 1920, they conveyed all the property of said society to certain debenture trustees.

"In February, 1921, the said debenture trustees conveyed the property to certain other trustees, one of whom was Harrison Parker. This trust was called the Coöperators of America. All of these transactions and conveyances were made under the domination, control, and direction of Harrison Parker. If they are to stand, then upon the date of the appointment of the receiver the original trust, the Coöperative Society of America, if called to account by a holder of a beneficial interest therein, would have been required to say to the 90,000 subscribers that it had on hand to represent its steward-ship the total sum of $16 on deposit to its credit in a Chicago bank."

The report asserted that the trustees lost to the society $800,000 in the recent sales of its stores to the National Tea company. Criticism of various other practices also was made. In conclusion the report says:

"Harrison Parker has during his examination before the referee in bankruptcy testified falsely under oath on important matters material to the receiver's investigation and has thereafter under oath admitted that his testimony was deliberately false.

"In view of these circumstances it is unsafe to accept as true any of the testimony of Harrison Parker unless it is corroborated by other independent credible evidence or circumstances."

PINCH 'EM! CRIES LEDOUX OF 4 PLY TREATY SIGNERS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—Urbain Ledoux, erstwhile unemployment auctioneer and arms conference picketeer, appeared today at a Washington precinct police station and asked for a warrant for the arrest of the "four signers" of the new Pacific treaty, alleging they were guilty of "trafficking in stolen goods."

The stolen goods, he described as various pieces of land, cities, ports, and villages," in Siberia, Manchuria, Corea, China,, India, Indo-China, Syria Mesopotamia and the Philippine islands "taken forcibly without any rights, human or divine, and in contravention of all laws" by Japan, Great Britain, France, and the United States. The action, Ledoux explained, was taken under the old common law.

EVANSTON VOTES $1,000,000 FOR A NEW HIGH SCHOOL

Evanston won its ten year fight for a new high school yesterday in a hotly contested vote. The building of a new school and a $1,000,000 bond issue to pay for it were approved by the citizens at the polls. Plans for the building will be drawn up by Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton, Chicago architects. Chancellor L. Jenks, chairman of the school board, said he was elated over the victory.

Charges City Health Chiefs "Experiment" on Child, 4

Charges that officials of the contagious disease section of the health department and the contagious hospital have been "experimenting" with his 4 year old daughter, held as a diphtheria patient, were made yesterday by Thomas Samson, 3927 South Paulina street, in a suit filed in the Circuit court demanding the child's release. Judge Philip Sullivan ordered Dr. Bernard Kuly of the hospital and Dr. Nathan Short of the health department to appear in court Tuesday.

Thirsting Hundreds Sing: 'Wait Till My Nip Comes In'

New York, Dec. 17.—Somewhere between Rockaway and Long Beach forty cases of whisky were floating on the waves tonight. Hundreds of thirsty folk, many with torchlights, gathered on the shore, watching and thinking up such lines as "when my nip comes in."

The forty cases, which the crowds hoped would be washed ashore by the tides, were thrown overboard by a schooner bound for the Bahamas to Halifax to lighten the craft when she strunk on a sand bar off Long Beach.

Price of Bread in N. Y. Is Cut One Cent a Loaf

WALL ST. BOMB IS BARED IN FULL BY LINDENFELD

Warsaw Police Translate Story Into English.

WARSAW, Dec. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Further statements relative to the Wall street bomb explosion have been made by Wolfe Lindenfeld, arrested yesterday on suspicion of having been implicated in the explosion and who subsequently made a full confession, giving the names of the ringleaders and other information. These statements are being translated into English.

According to Silvester Cosgrove of the department of justice, at whose request the arrest was made, Lindenfeld has persistently avoided questions concerning his whereabouts on the day of the explosion. He admits, however, he was in Manhattan, and to the direct question, "Where were you at the time of the explosion?" he made the reply, "Uptown."

Lindenfeld's movements since he left New York have been fully traced, excepting for one month, on which he is silent. One admission he made is that in August he went to Moscow for six weeks.

It's Solved, Burns Says.

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—William J. Burns, director of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, arrived from Washington tonight and declared that Wolfe Lindenfeld, arrested in Warsaw in connection with the Wall street bomb explosion, "was not implicated in the plot which resulted in the explosion except that he knew about it."

He had nothing to say of the threatened bombing of Wall street on Monday night. Police are guarding the district following receipt by wealthy men of warning letters.

"There is no question that we have the solution of the plot," Burns stated. "The Burns agency first investigated the explosion, then the government took up the matter.

Told of Plot Beforehand.

"The reward of $50,000 was offered soon after the explosion to get a confession from Lindenfeld. He warned us about the explosion before it took place. He knew it was going to happen, but he didn't know where.

"Lindenfeld is one of those fellows who believes in revolution by pacific methods, not by direct action. There is no question but that Lindenfeld was the representative of the soviet government in this country.

"It was our plan not to arrest him until we obtained certain information out of him and then we would cooperate with the police in this city in rounding up the whole band of plotters."

Burns said that Lindenfeld was acquainted with prominent radicals here. He was able to obtain information about their activities, and in many instances told of these plans soon after they had been decided on.

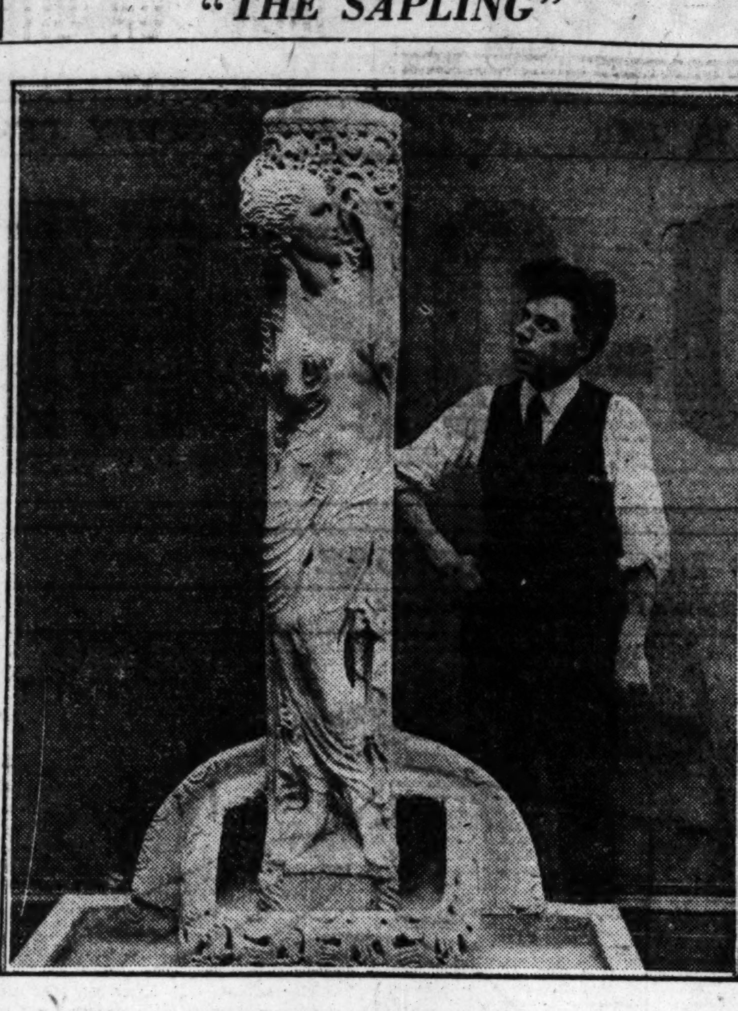
"May Have Been 300 in It."

"How many persons do you believe were involved in the Wall street bomb plot?" Burns was asked.

"That is hard to say," he answered. "It might be any way from twelve to 300 radicals, men and women. There is no question that the Third International in Moscow was responsible for the Wall street explosion and that the International paid the plotters $30,000."

Lindenfeld, up to the time he left for Europe last spring, lived in the vicinity of Second avenue and 19th street, and was known to the radicals as "Windy" Linde.

"THE SAPLING"



A striking work shown at the mid-winter exhibits at the Art institute is "The Sapling," a fountain by Alfonso Ianelli. The sculptor is standing beside his work.

NEW MIDWINTER ART EXHIBITIONS PROVE SENSATION

Host of Fine Works at Institute.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

A host of sensations awaits one in the group of mid-winter exhibitions which opened yesterday afternoon in the Art institute galleries. From sketches of mushrooms to gigantic figures in whitest marble, the properties and adjuncts of art are spread for the eye to feast upon in the six or seven rooms devoted to the exhibits.

In the gallery given over to portraits in charcoal by Leopold Seyffert, many old friends are to be met. The artist has strikingly and unmistakably portrayed such persons as John T. McCutcheon, Josef Hofmann, Leopold Godowsky, Albin Polasek, Frank G. Logan, Frederick Stock, Charles L. Hutchinson, John A. Carpenter, and Eames MacVeagh, in a manner that introduces them frankly to those who know them, and favorably commits them to what strangers may be present.

The paintings by Sigurd Schou are all in a light key, and, though perhaps lacking in depth of feeling, make a pleasant contrast to the more sober exhibits.

Ray Boynton shows a gallery of pastels, charming in subject matter and pleasing in treatment. Of them all, possibly the ballet dancer, light as a feather leaning to an April breeze, is the most delightful.

The sculpture of Alfonso Iannelli is much of it huge in conception and wrought with great strength and breadth of line. It is masculine—every inch of it. No tenderness nor touch of sentiment affects his monster figures. The frieze against the far wall is no more sympathetic, nor less dramatic, than the two giants who guard the entrance to the gallery.

The fountain models may be considered a bit more mystic in their undeveloped possibilities, but they, too, speak of strength and vitality, not of decadence, in art.

In connection with the extremely interesting exhibit arranged by the Chicago chapter of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America, of which chapter Mrs. Charles A. Hutchinson is president, are exhibits of flower paintings and four distinctly new features, shells, marbles (from Carrara, Nev.), fish, and mushrooms. The mushrooms, painted by Charles S. Chapman, are supposed to be the best representations ever secured by any artist.

The exhibitions will remain open until Jan. 18.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR.

Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the United States government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke, or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, L. P. Johnson, 609 West Lake street, Chicago, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' free trial, or even to give one to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Very suitable Xmas gift for the folks back home. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Adv.

DAIL EXPECTED TO O. K. TREATY BY WEDNESDAY

Secret Parleys Ended by Irish Leaders.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, Dec. 17.—When the Dail Eireann meets in public on Monday for discussion of the Anglo-Irish peace treaty, the Irish people will probably be presented with carefully staged debate. The protagonists of both sides will state their point of view moderately and courteously, eliminating the acrimonious personalities which have been the feature of the secret sessions until yesterday, when, it is reported, better spirit prevailed.

The first sign of this was the issue of a joint announcement signed by Eamon de Valera and Arthur Griffith that the secret sessions would end today and public meetings would begin on Monday.

It is said that the leaders of both sides have realized the injurious effect on the country of the policy of secrecy. Even now many careful observers of Irish politics feel that damage has been done which it will be hard to repair. The secrecy has given rise to a crop of rumors, and it will always be easy for the "die hard" republicans to say the republic was sacrificed by a secret bargain, the terms of which were kept from the country.

Ratification by Midweek.

It is expected that the open session will last two days. Ratification of the treaty is expected late Tuesday. I was told today that the overwhelming majority by which both British houses approved the treaty has had a good affect on some of the waverers in Dail who were disposed to mistrust the British good faith, but who are now convinced.

Dublin is now discussing the future of Mr. de Valera. It is stated that he told some of his followers that he expects to be defeated in his opposition to the treaty and he intends to resign from office, but will continue in the parliament of the free state as the leader of the opposition.

This implies that he intends to take the oath of allegiance to the king, as otherwise he could not sit as a member of parliament.

Fight for Sinn Fein Control.

Another question which is exercising the minds of the Irish politicians is which party in the free state is to have the Sinn Fein political organization, which possesses large funds and buildings all over the country.

The situation is an unusually difficult one, as the Sinn Fein is not a party in the ordinary sense. Mr. Griffith once described it to me as a sacred union of all parties in the state for a specific purpose. That purpose was achieved when Irish liberty was granted, and, liberty having been gained, the object of its existence ceases and it will resolve itself into natural party divisions, which may at first be free state and republican but which sooner or later is sure to become conservative and labor.

On this basis neither of the new parties would be entitled to the organization machinery and funds, but there is sure to be a struggle for their possession.

Dail Increases Secrecy.

The Dail continued its sessions today with greater secrecy than ever. Newspaper correspondents had been admitted to the lobbies and to the press room set aside for their use. Today no one except Dail members was permitted beyond the foot of the stairs leading to the lobbies. It was evident that the intention was to prevent the members of the Dail from talking about the progress made as they left the meeting.

Fierce Fighting in Belfast.

BELFAST, Dec. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Fierce firing broke out in the Newtownards road section and East Belfast today. The firing was so intense that tram car service was suspended. Lewis guns were used against the rioters by the crown forces.

An employé of the city tram service was shot dead and at least six persons are known to have been wounded.

In the Ballymacarrott district three persons were shot. Another young man was attacked by a crowd and beaten.

ALD. TOMAN "PLUMBS DEPTHS OF DISGRACE"; BUMPED BY "FLIVVER"

ALD. JOHN TOMAN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Ald. John Toman, leaning on a cane, appeared at the city hall yesterday and announced that he had plumbed the depths of disgrace. A "flivver," he said, stuck its bumper beneath him while walking at 22d street and South Crawford avenue Friday night. He was forced to sit down on the bumper and ride fifteen feet, he declared. He said that "being struck by a flivver gets on one's nerves worse than getting hit by a regular car."

FIFTY ARRESTED IN FIRST BOOZE RAIDS BY POLICE

Prisoners Booked Under State Dry Act.

Police, unleashed on the trail of illicit booze, last night made more than fifty arrests of bootleggers and saloonists in less than two hours.

The drive followed a conference between Chief of Police Fitzmorris and police captains from every district in the city, in which the liquor question was thoroughly discussed and plans arranged for a bone dry campaign unequaled in the city.

The conference followed receipt by Chief Fitzmorris of a letter from Mayor Thompson in which the latter for the first time went on record as favoring enforcement of the prohibition law, although that law was enacted more than three years ago.

Booked Under State Law.

All arrests made last night were booked under section 3 of the state search and seizure law. This section provides that "no person shall . . . manufacture, sell, barter, transport, deliver, furnish, or possess any intoxicating liquor." The first arrest was that of the Victoria house, 9 East Grand avenue, where seven baskets of champagne, five jugs of wine, and a quantity of bourbon whisky was confiscated.

Another of the early raids concerned the well known restaurant and saloon of Walter J. Powers, 164 West Washington street. Five quarts of alleged whisky was found. Thomas Brady, the bartender, was booked under section 3.

Chief's Order to Police.

In Chief of Police Fitzmorris' order to the police force he says that "it is the duty of every member of the police department to strictly enforce every provision of the law. Commanding officers will be held responsible for the action of their subordinates in this as in other matters. Where violations of the law are found and prosecutions result in convictions you will recommend the revocation of all licenses issued to such places.

"Where I am able through other means to locate and convict violators of this law I shall prefer charges against the patrolman on post and the commanding officer of the district."

All Contingencies Discussed.

In the conference between the chief and the captains virtually every possibility in connection with the enforcement of the prohibition act was discussed.

One captain asked how a man coming out of a public place in an intoxicated condition might be booked.

"For disorderly conduct," Assistant Corporation Counsel Breen, who was present, replied. "Or under section 3 or section 8 of the act." There was a hurried rustling of pages. Section 8 was found to relate to the amount of liquor a man can consume at one time—one pint.

"What do you say, Mr. Breen, as to those stills that you get a letter or information that there is a still in a private house?" asked Capt. Harding.

The Section on Stills.

"Section 27 covers the stills," Capt. Westbrook quoted. Again the pages turned. Section 27 provides a $200 fine or six months in jail for any one having a still in his possession.

"How would you raid a private home for a still?" was the next question.

"Get a search warrant," was the reply.

"Suppose you would see a fellow selling liquor over a bar?" queried Capt. Collins.

"Walk in there and take the liquor."

Then Counsel Breen ruled that a still is a still, whether it is sold coupled up or not. "Bad news for some of our malt and hops dealers," said one officer. Then:

"Mr. Breen, if we find a man having wine in his possession and there are five more barrels in the basement, have we the right to destroy that wine?"

"Under the search warrant, yes—of course you understand there is the provision that the federal government can come in and take the liquor and use it for sacramental or mechanical purposes. That is up to the trial judge," the corporation counsel replied. The conference adjourned.

TWO MEN FREED ON WRITS TAKEN AS CAR THIEVES

Two men who were released by Judge Harry Fisher some time ago on a writ of habeas corpus after they had been arrested in connection with the murder of a watchman for the Cooke Brewing company at 20 North Green street, were arrested yesterday as part of a gang of automobile and freight car thieves. The two men, who are held with six others at the detective bureau, are said to have admitted many thefts and robberies to Chief of Detectives Hughes.

The two men are George Bucher and James Fredericks, who was brought back from Indianapolis following new information picked up by Lieut. David Schwartz and Sergt Hugh McCarthy

WHO ASKED "WHERE'S THAT HARD WINTER"?

Under cover of a twenty-four hour rain screen Old Man Winter slipped up on Chicago yesterday afternoon and laid down a barrage of snow backed by a thirty mile wind that stopped, for the time being at least, all those who have been scoffing at forecasts of a "hard winter." But most everybody, except the poor in their fireless homes, welcomed the white blanket as essential to a real holiday season. The folks in the picture all smiled happily as they waited in the loop for a car.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Usually at 8 o'clock on a Saturday night Michigan avenue is filled with automobiles and its sidewalks dotted with pedestrians. But when the blizzard struck the city yesterday evening everybody scurried for a warm place. As a result when this picture (Tribune photo) was taken the avenue, looking north from Randolph street, was practically deserted.

EMMA GOLDMAN FACING RETURN TO "DEAR RUSSIA"

RIGA, Dec. 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mollie Steimer, Jacob Abrams, Hyman Tachowsky, and Samuel Lipman, deported from the United States after being pardoned for seditious activities, have entered soviet Russia, having obtained the necessary visas.

They left the United States the latter part of November and have been held in a concentration camp here awaiting permission from the soviet government to enter Russia.

Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman are still here. They are without German visas or permission to go to any other country and their permit to stay in Latvia expires tomorrow. It is undecided whether they will be granted a brief extension of their stay here, or be sent back to Russia.

$15,000 IS RAISED BY TAG DAY FOR WAR DISABLED

Tag day for the Disabled American Veterans of the World War held in Chicago yesterday netted the organization more than $15,000, according to estimates by officials last night. More than 1,200 volunteers armed with tags and boxes canvassed the city. Edward Hug, national vice commander, in charge of the collections, was enthusiastic over the results.

"Only about half of the returns are in," he said late last night, "but a conservative estimate would be that the receipts are not less than $15,000. Considering the storm we are mighty well satisfied."

OLD MAN WINTER JUMPS ON CITY WITH BOTH FEET

24 Hour Rain Turns Into Regular Blizzard.

Old Man Winter roused himself from his slumbers yesterday and jumped on Chicago with both feet, whirling a blanket of snow over the city with a thirty mile gale, causing one death, sending the mercury scuttering down the tube 20 degrees to 20 above zero at midnight, and sending people scurrying to their homes and warm fires.

The twenty-four hours of rain ceased at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, to be replaced immediately by a blinding blizzard. In a few minutes Christmas shoppers in the loop were sliding and colliding, with heads bowed to the strong wind, overcoats whitened by the snow, and hats rolling down the street.

Autos Lose Traction.

Automobile traffic, losing its traction on the snow covered streets, became almost uncontrollable. Policemen on several corners said they had given up in despair. When an automobile attempted to stop in respect for the whistle the wheels locked and it kept right on its way. If a driver succeeded in stopping his machine, those behind were less fortunate and bumped into him.

The motor bus lines on the north side were practically snowbound. All along the line they were stranded, the wheels spinning furiously in the street, the motors steaming and roaring. Conductors got out and pushed or worked with shovels to get the driving wheels down to the solid asphalt.

Passengers Push Busses.

In several instances the passengers—male—were called into service and could be seen on Sheridan road pushing and puffing behind a huge bus striving to get it started.

Beverly Hills, east of the Panhandle tracks, reported house lights all out. One man said it was the first time since he was a boy he had been forced to read his evening paper by candle light.

The number of accidents reported to the police was surprisingly small. Several desk sergeants said they believed the automobile drivers were afraid for their own safety and were therefore, driving slowly, which acted as a safeguard to all.

Skidding Car Hits Woman.

One woman was struck by a skidding automobile and killed. Mrs. Mary Keyes, 63 years old, 230 East Superior street, was run down at Chicago avenue and Michigan boulevard by John Walcott, 1538 Birchwood avenue, who did not see the traffic policeman's signal until it was too late. He applied the brakes, but the car slid. Mrs. Keyes was taken to the Passavant hospital, where she died. Walcott was held by the police.

But today, the weather man says, it will be fair and moderately cold. The minimum temperature in the last twenty-four hours was 24 degrees. Monday it will grow warmer, with an increasing cloudiness.

POLICE GUARDS AT WHITE HOUSE GET WARM HUTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Two diminutive white houses, each 3x3x8 feet, were set up on either side of the north portico of the White House today and no longer will policemen on duty there dance animated jigs to keep warm during their eight hour shifts in the cold winter months.

The sentry boxes are electrically heated and are there because Mrs. Harding heard of the discomfort that White House policemen experienced in the winter cold.

WIFE OF KANSAS LABOR CHIEF IS FACING ARREST

Pittsburg, Kan., Dec. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Mrs. William Howe, wife of the secretary of the Kansas Federation of Labor, Milt Gould, sheriff of Crawford county, announced tonight. The warrant charges her with participation in an unlawful assembly in connection with the marching of women against the Kansas coal mines early this week. A deputy sheriff talked to her husband tonight and, according to the deputy, Howe promised to bring his wife to Pittsburg for arraignment Monday morning.

The warrant for Mrs. Howe came at the conclusion of a day of activity on the part of state officials in proceeding against alleged leaders of the crowds of women whose demonstrations prevented men employed at a number of mines from going to work.

Four women, alleged to have participated in the disorders and who were arrested yesterday, were released on bond.

CHILDREN DROWN IN WELL; POLICE JAIL STEPMOTHER

Oconomowoc Woman Held on Murder Charge.

Waukesha, Wis., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Mrs. Freida Zimmerman is in the county jail here, charged with murder as the result of the finding of the bodies of her two stepchildren in a cistern back of their home in Oconomowoc yesterday. The two children were Drummond, aged 9, and Ruth, aged 7. Inquest and preliminary hearing will be held next week.

Mrs. Zimmerman has told several stories of the tragedy which officials claim are conflicting. She was taken to Oconomowoc today to reënact the scene.

"The children and I were taking our ducks to a pond a little way from the house," Mrs. Zimmerman said, "when one duck ran to the cistern and fell in. Drummond running up to the cistern tried to save the duck, but fell in. Ruth, seeing his plight, ran to save him and after trying to reach him, toppled in.

"I tried to get them out, but I could not."

Rescue Easy, Coroner's View.

Coroner Lee questioned the woman in regard to her failure to get the children out. He claimed that as the water was within a few feet of the top of the cistern, rescue would have been comparatively easy.

Deputy Sheriff Morris, after questioning the neighbors, said that Louis Klug, a brother of Mrs. Zimmerman, had come to the house after the accident, but had gone away without mentioning the tragedy to any one. An effort to locate the brother is being made.

The husband, Otto Zimmerman, was at work. On being notified that something was wrong at home, he went there and found his wife in a hysterical condition, crying, "The cistern, the cistern." He finally found the bodies.

Grew "Tired of Housework."

The father claims that Mrs. Zimmerman told him she was "tired of housework." He added that during a quarrel on Sunday night, his wife said to him:

"Never mind; the children will die before I do."

The Zimmermans were maried seven years ago, shortly after the death of the first Mrs. Zimmerman. Several complaints that the children were being neglected have been made. A visiting nurse, recently went to the Zimmerman home to change the conditions there.

FRANCE IS FIRM FOR HUGE NAVY, DELEGATE SAYS

Others "Astonished" at Lively Session.

talked about their fleets for more than a month. We ask a few days to negotiate our position. We are not trying to break up the Washington conference. Far from it; we are in spirit with its purposes. We seek only a studied discussion of the issues before us. Let's do it with a smile and stop frowning.

"You know perfectly well that absolute right is never the exclusive property of any one side in a discussion. One side may go too far in one direction; one side may not go far enough. It is by comparison of ideas that we shall arrive at a just conclusion. Don't have any doubts about the French naval ratio being satisfactorily fixed.

"We're in a Special Position."

"France is in a special position with regard to the application of Mr. Hughes' principle that existing strength should be the fundamental consideration in fixing the size of navies. That is all right for England, American and Japan, who during the war kept on building ships.

"It is unfair to France, who finds herself in a particularly bad position navally because during the war she was unable to build any ships, her naval shops being devoted to making ammunition for allied armies. The war thus prevented her from carrying out her 1912 naval program, which would, if completed, have placed her in a position of having between 500,000 and 600,000 tons capital ships today instead of 235,000. To take France's navy at its present low state and apply the same measure of reduction as is applied to nations which continued construction during the war would be an injustice of which the American delegates would not wish to be guilty."

Other Delegates Answer.

During the committee meeting there were responses to the French from representatives of the other four powers, the United States, Great Britain, Japan, and Italy.

The American delegates are declared to have taken the position that the French demand was "preposterous."

Great Britain plainly stated that if France should seriously undertake to construct such a naval force as she had outlined, that the limitation program agreed to by the three great powers day before yesterday would have to be scrapped and a new one devised which would necessitate an agreement on a building rather than a limitation program.

Italian Statesmen Curious.

Representatives of Italy are not concealing their astonishment at the boldness of the French program and are asking who France seeks to arm against, inasmuch as there is no prospect of either Germany or Russia becoming a great naval power in the next decade.

Japan's attitude is declared to be in line with the astonishment registered by the other delegations, but the only public expression from the Japanese came in remarks of Baron Kato in which he said that should the conference be wrecked the wrecker would not be Japan.

In a reliable quarter it was declared that one of the most influential of the delegates responding to the French at the committee session yesterday and again today said that if France persisted in her demand for ten new capital ships that she "would be unable to convince anybody that she was not militaristic, aggressive, and dangerous."

SENATORS ASSAIL DEMAND

France's demand for ten additional battleships is "not inconsistent with similar concessions Great Britain and Japan have already wrung from the conference," Senator Borah, Idaho "irreconcilable," declared today.

"A flood of light," he said, "is thrown upon the view which the signatories to the four-power treaty take of it by the fact that after signing it Japan still insists upon keeping the Mutsu. And Great Britain starts building two super-Hoods and France is demanding ten capital ships.

"Instead of the four-power treaty having the tendency to make its signatories less determined to have big navies and less determined to continue naval construction, it seems to me to have had the opposite effect.

"Neither Great Britain, France, nor Japan appear to be at all willing to place the least confidence in the four-power treaty. This action since its signing shows that it is clearly intended as a military and naval alliance and they propose to be prepared to protect their mutual interests in the Pacific and far east.

"It seems incredible to me," Mr. Borah continued, "that Great Britain and France, lately engaged in a struggle for their preservation, should have any fear concerning their relationship in the future. They were allies in the world war and in addition to that they are both members of what is known as the league of nations, associated together in an effort to promote peace as they contend that organization will do. And besides all that they are now members of the 'Pacific Alliance.'"

In other congressmen the French proposal also has aroused astonishment. Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska said:

"The proposition seems to me to be so unreasonable and so astounding that I cannot believe it is true. I do not care to comment further at this time."

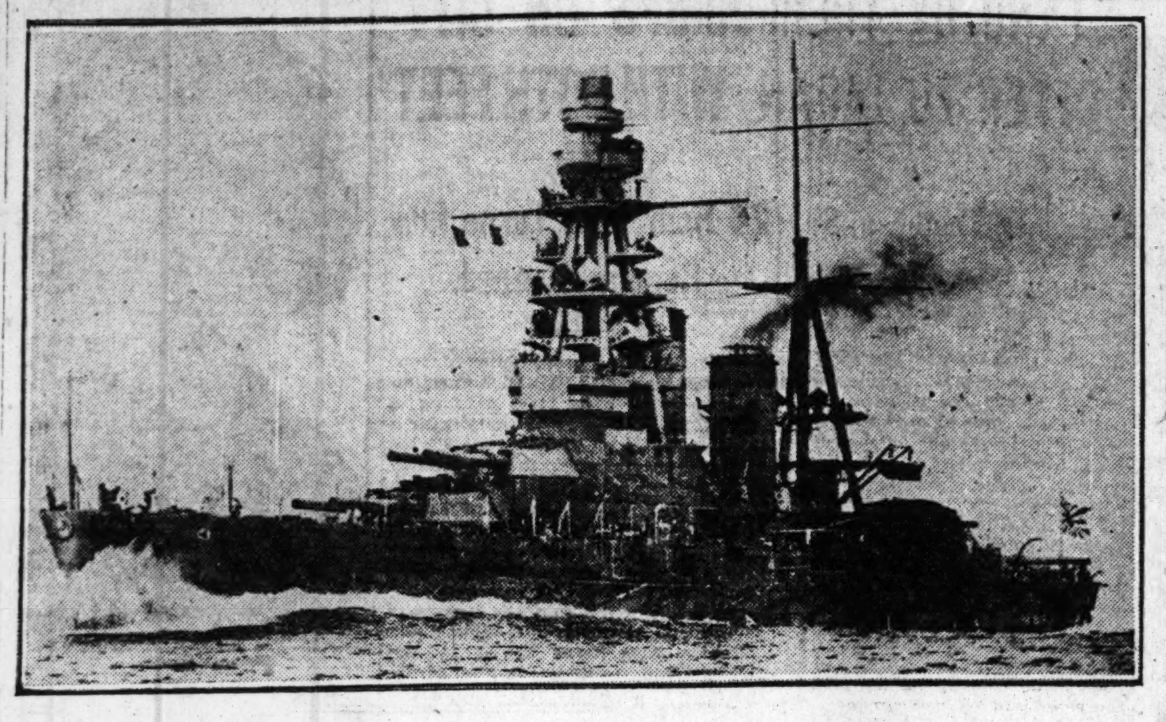
Cooper Calls It Ingratitude.

Representative Cooper, Wisconsin, Republican member of the house committee of foreign affairs, said:

"Those who make the proposal are a few imperial minded gentlemen; but they are not the French people. They are not the fathers and mothers of France.

"The proposal is not only sinister, it is the embodiment of gross ingratitude. We loaned France billions to help prosecute the war and forever to end war and all the accursed things that make war inevitable, like the building of great armament."

JAPAN SAVED THIS NAVAL GIANT



S. S. MUTSU.

This is the newest and mightiest warship of the Japanese navy, which Tokio, in the 5-5-3 ratio agreement, managed to save from scrapping. America and Great Britain receive corresponding tonnage increases. The Mutsu is named after a Japanese state division. It has a tonnage of 33,800, a speed of twenty-three knots, and a primary battery of eight 16 inch guns.

GERMAN EXPERT SEES 7,000 TON 'SUBS' IN OFFING

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Dec. 17. — Councillor Flamm, the builder of the submarine Deutschland, the inventor of Germany's supersubmarines and a professor of shipbuilding, declares Japan is supporting the British attitude against submarines because, like England, it is extremely vulnerable to attacks by that weapon.

He says the Philippines and Dutch East Indies can protect themselves best through the use of the submarine.

"The limiting of the submarine tonnage would be a big victory for Japan and Great Britain," he says, "because submarine technic is advancing so rapidly that the future will see not 1,500 ton craft but 7,000 tonners."

Reichstag Members Must Work if They Get a Raise

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 17.—President Loebe of the reichstag put a crimp in the Christmas holiday plans of the members when he gave out today a list of fourteen points for discussion before the national body will be adjourned. The fourteenth point was a "resolution for increasing the salaries of the members." Now the members will have to attend the sessions so they can get their pay raised. They voted themselves 1,000 marks apiece as a Christmas present.

BOMB IN HOME OF WOMAN WHO IGNORED THREAT

A Black Hand bomb, exploded in the hallway of a three story brick building at 1031 South Morgan street early yesterday morning, aroused all living in the building, wrecked the vestibule, and shattered windows in adjoining windows.

The bomb is believed to have been directed at Mrs. Tessie Russo, who lives on the second floor. She received letters demanding $2,000 a year ago, but ignored them, she said.

Mrs. Annie Reulle and her four children, living on the first floor, were among those who fled panic stricken into the street.

VIOLINIST BUTLER SEEKS A DIVORCE; CHARGES DISCORD

HERBERT D. BUTLER.
[Root Photo.]

Temperamental differences are said to have led to the estrangement of Herbert D. Butler, composer, concertmeister, and head of the violin school of the American Conservatory of Music, from his wife, Mrs. Alice Drake Butler, 5026 Blackstone avenue. Yesterday the musician filed suit for divorce, charging desertion. He relates they were married Oct. 3, 1907, and that she left him on Sept. 1, 1919.

Mr. Butler came to Chicago twenty years ago, following a tour of the continent. He was a student of Joachim and Hollander in Berlin, and after coming to the United States was concertmeister of the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra.

Mr. Butler has written a number of compositions, and was heard as soloist under the direction of Theodore Thomas and later under Frederick Stock at the Chicago orchestra concerts.

NAVY LEADERS FIGHT PLANS TO CUT PERSONNEL

Action Would Make U. S. Third Sea Power.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—With navy building competition halted by the naval holiday agreement, there will ensue, in the opinion of American naval authorities, a keen competition in the efficiency of the restricted sea forces—a competition in which the United States will be worsted if the reduction of personnel proposed by Representative Kelley of Michigan, in charge of naval appropriations in the house, should be approved by congress.

Capt. Dudley W. Knox, U. S. N., is authority for the assertion that the Kelley proposal to cut the personnel in half would destroy the 5-5-3 ratio of the Hughes plan, and make the actual ratio: England, 5; Japan, 3; America, 2.

No Cut of Present Navy.

"The Hughes plan," Capt. Knox said, "does not contemplate a reduction in the navy now in commission. The ships which America is scheduled to scrap constitute almost exclusively ships not yet completed and certain of the older ships which are nearly all out of commission.

"As a matter of fact, the prescribed allowances of Mr. Hughes for the United States are actually greater in total tonnage than ships now in commission. In the cruiser class, for example, we are short about 60,000 tons of our allowance: in aircraft carriers, about 40,000 tons, and in submarines, about 6,000 tons.

"If these shortages are made good it would require approximately 8,600 men and 436 officers to man the new ships alone, on an ordinary peace basis of complement.

Shortage of Personnel Now.

"But it is not only in ships yet to be added to the navy that there exists a shortage of personnel. Acute deficiency exists at present. Our eighteen battleships now in commission, which is the number allowed in the Hughes proposals, require 22,380 men as a complement under ordinary peace operating conditions, whereas at present they have only about 19,000 men on board. In other words, the battleships are on a basis of only 88½ per cent of ordinary peace complement.

"Similarly the sixty-five destroyers which we have in commission are operating on 84 per cent of the normal peace complement, and the 213 destroyers in reserve on the very much reduced basis of 50 per cent.

"The number of men afloat in the entire navy is approximately 78 per cent of ordinary peace requirements, while the shore establishments average about 75 per cent."

More than 30,000 Men Short.

The total number of men now in the navy is about 100,000. This number, by the most conservative estimate, is 20,000 men short of the minimum requirements for keeping up efficiency of material and personnel, of the present naval establishment. It is 30,000 men short of the ordinary peace complements. There is a similar shortage of 2,000 line officers, and many hundreds of staff officers.

"If we had actually in commission the Hughes navy," Capt. Knox added, "the ordinary peace complements, afloat and ashore, would be 138,000 men and 7,600 line officers. Hence the present personnel is insufficient by 38,000 men and 2,400 line officers to man with normal peace complements the naval tonnage proposed by Mr. Hughes as appropriate to our interests.

"If congress follows the lead of Mr. Kelley and reduces the personnel of the navy still further, our national legislature will effectively nullify the diplomatic accomplishments of our secretary of state and his eminent American associates.

"To reduce the navy personnel by half the present quota, as Mr. Kelley proposes, would be just as serious a matter as if Mr. Hughes had proposed the ratio of tonnage to be, America, 2; Great Britain, 5, and Japan, 3. The 5-5-3 plan would become merely food for American self-deception."

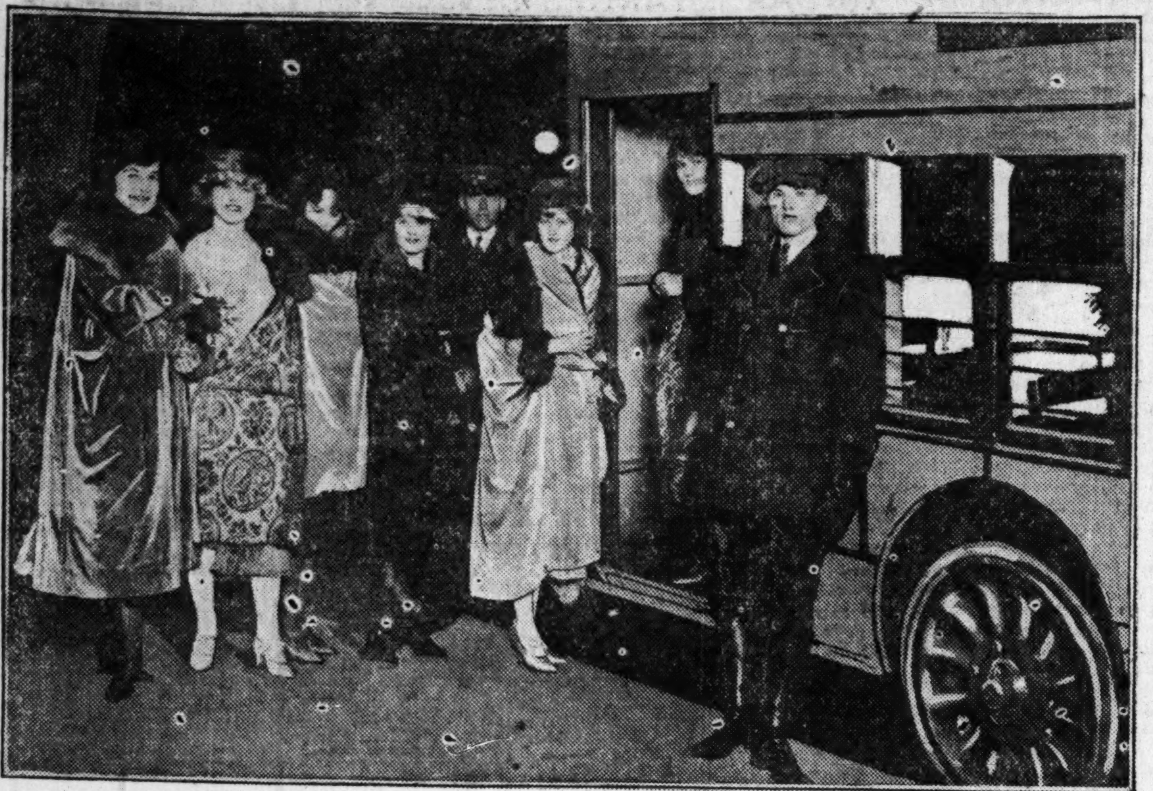
RIDIN' TO THE PARTY



The motorbus trundled down the boulevard. The guard had on his uniform, but he wasn't collecting fares. The seats, both below and in the covered top, were comfortably full—full of women in dinner gowns and men in the "conventional black." The passing motorists craned necks at the unfamiliar sight. But it was Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's idea, and the thirty-two young people she had invited to a dinner at her residence, 2700 Lake View avenue, and to a loop theater party, voted it a novel way of conveying them from the home to the loop. The party was given in honor of Miss Theodora Winterbotham, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, 674 Rush street. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

REILLY APPROVES ALLOWING JAPAN TO KEEP MUTSU

Others Hold Big Ships, Junk Older Ones.

BY GEN. HENRY J. REILLY.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The insistent desire of the Japanese conferees and of their government to retain the superdreadnaught Mutsu instead of scrapping it, as proposed originally, was natural and reasonable. It is not good business to destroy a brand new vessel, good for twenty years' service, while retaining other vessels as old as ten years, which must be replaced at the expiration of another decade. This is opposed to one of the fundamental objects of the conference—economy.

The Mutsu's retention, on the other hand, involves no violation of the principle of limitation, according to the status quo. Determination of the tonnage limit need not invalidate adherence to the principle of the ratio in tonnage.

Where Difficulty Arose.

Undoubtedly the original proposal to scrap the Mutsu, together with a number of American vessels in the same degree of completion, was caused by the difficulties incident to Great Britain not having any new dreadnaughts under construction.

Hence the assignment of ships for retention to constitute 5-5-3 navies could not be done more accurately with the partially completed ships eliminated, because the new ships would be relatively much stronger than the older ones, and decision as to the number of older ships which Great Britain should retain to maintain a 5-5-3 balance was difficult to reach accurately. But these difficulties appear to be outweighed by the objections to the alternative of scrapping tremendously expensive units which in a few years will be needed as replacement ships.

The Mutsu is a superdreadnaught of about 34,000 tons displacement, carrying eight 16 inch guns and embodying all the latest features of design developed from the war, including modern compartmentation for protection against mines and torpedoes. She is scheduled for completion within a few months, at a total cost of approximately $20,000,000, practically all of which must be spent or obligated in such a way that little if any saving could be made by the cessation of construction.

Order Vessel to Go.

Yet the Mutsu was designated for scrapping, while the Settsu, virtually ten years older, was on the list for retention. The greater age of the latter involved a high cost of maintenance, probably higher than similar costs for the newer though larger ships. Within ten years the Settsu would be obsolete and would require replacement; whereas the Mutsu will not need replacement for about twenty years. Obviously there was no economy in scrapping the Mutsu, and the decision to allow Japan to retain the Mutsu while scrapping the Settsu can have little objection.

Similarly it would have been expensive for America to scrap the Colorado and Washington, both of which are in an advance state of completion, and are virtually counterparts of the Mutsu. It was true that if Japan and the United States kept such vessels on their list Great Britain would probably feel it necessary to incur the great expense of building two new dreadnaughts herself.

Before the war ended she had a superabundance of battleships and stopped all construction of such types. Consequently, she has none under construction at present, and most of her fleet is comparatively old and fails to embody all the latest features of design which war experience dictates. The Mutsu, Colorado, and Washington would each outmatch several of the more antiquated battleships which comprise the British navy today.

How Solution Was Reached.

Great Britain, therefore, is to complete two new super-Hoods and scrap four vessels of the King George V. class; the United States is to keep the Colorado and Washington and junk the Delaware and North Dakota, and Japan is permitted to retain the Mutsu and scrap the Settsu, thus maintaining the 5-5-3 ratio with the double advantage of keeping everybody in a good humor and strengthening the respective fleets, while economy is practiced by each.

As a matter of fact, the arrangement, which required some new construction by the English, is in accord with their contention that a ten year holiday in building is undesirable, because of the need of fairly constant work on a small scale in the shipyards, if they are to be maintained efficient and a nucleus of skilled artisans is to survive.

OIL STOCK SOLD IN VETS' HOME, LEGION CHARGES

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 17.—Statements that disabled war veterans under treatment at Resthaven sanatorium, Waukesha, have been sold large amounts of oil stock and that payments were deducted from their monthly compensation checks were made by State Commander E. J. Barrett of the American Legion last night.

The state railroad commission at Madison, through Garfield S. Canright, issued a statement today setting forth that it is investigating the Disabled Veterans' Oil and Gas company, having headquarters at Aberdeen, S. D., and reported to own wells in Montana. The head of the company, according to Mr. Canright, is an official at the Resthaven sanatorium.

CHINESE ENVOYS STAND BY THEIR OFFER TO JAPAN

Defy Own People on Shantung R. R. Question.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The Chinese delegates today defied the will of their own people, as expressed in resolutions adopted by delegates from powerful Chinese organizations, and continued in bargaining with Japan over time in which the Shantung railroad is to be paid for by China on the installment plan. Delegates from the students, workers, and commercial bodies had ordered them to break off these negotiations unless Japan backed down.

Japan yielded a little today, but is still seeking a plan by which she can keep some control of the road while the payments are being made. It was learned today that Japan's original offer was to accept a period of twenty-three years in which the Chinese should pay them. They came down to twenty years today.

The Chinese are offering a three year period. A compromise on ten is possible, but the American observers in the conversations today reported the outlook "not too rosy." Mr. Hughes and Mr. Balfour may have to mediate.

Unacceptable to Chinese.

Even the three years arrangement is unacceptable to the Chinese groups observing the conference. At a meeting of what is called the Chinese people's delegates in Washington last night the following resolution was adopted:

"That this meeting of the people's delegates disapproved of the reported acceptance on the part of our delegation of Japan's proposal for us to redeem the Kiau-Chau-Tsinan railway by installments to cover a period of years, the delegates to reject any such arrangement at the latest by Saturday's conversations between the Chinese and Japanese delegates, and if Japan doesn't withdraw this arrangement the delegates should break off the conversations immediately and bring the question of Shantung before the conference."

This was signed by delegates of the United Chambers of Commerce of China, the United Educational Association of China, the delegate from Shantung, the delegate from Shansi, the delegate from Tientsin, the Chinese Chambers of Commerce, the Workers' union and the Students' central. This is the most powerful public opinion in China.

Powers Are Apprehensive.

The powers regard the situation with apprehension, although it is thought that Japan will have to accept the three-year offer.

How Great Britain, France and Italy are involved is shown in the following memorandum:

"Knowing full well that the understanding reached with China about the Shantung question as a result of the twenty-one demands in 1915 could not be final, Japan proceeded to make secret arrangements with the European powers to retain her title. Thus on Feb. 16, 1917 [before China's entrance in the war], Great Britain 'acceded with pleasure to the request of the Japanese government for an assurance that they will support Japan's claims in regard to the disposal of Germany's rights in Shantung and possessions in islands north of the equator on the occasion of the peace conference.'

"Similar promises were obtained from Russia on Feb. 20, from France in March, and from Italy on March 23.

"It was largely because of these secret arrangements that Shantung and the German rights in the province were handed over to Japan by the 'big three' at the peace conference at Versailles."

Says He'll Dry Up Kansas Town (of Water) in 3 Wks.

Emporia, Kas., Dec. 17.—Upon receipt of news that the vote in a city election yesterday, on a proposition to buy his water rights on Cottonwood river, had gone adversely, Justin Soden, a miller, this morning ordered the city commissioners to quit pumping water from the river at noon. Soden claims that a Supreme court injunction gives him authority to shut off the supply from Cottonwood river, without which, engineers estimate, Emporia will be dry within three weeks.

BANKS, BUSINESS FIRMS ANNOUNCE XMAS BONUSES

Christmas bonuses were announced yesterday by several Chicago banks and mercantile concerns.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—A quiet Christmas in the White House will be observed by the President and Mrs. Harding unless present plans are changed by unexpected developments. It was announced today that the President would hang up his stocking "at home," and with the possible exception of attending church that Sunday nothing would break the quietude of the holiday.

ARREST OF PAIR BARES $500,000 SWINDLING PLOT

Another Held for Passing $50,000 in Bad Checks.

Two swindles, one aggregating $500,000 and the other approximating $50,000, were uncovered by federal and city authorities last night in the arrests of three men.

Julius C. Schwartz, alias Jack Rayburn, was picked up by federal officials at the Sheridan Plaza hotel, where he has been stopping. His partner, Max Goldstein, alias Max Gold, was arrested in the Mallers building.

It has been the practice of Schwartz and Goldstein, according to Frank W. Hill, manager of the department of investigation for the National Credit Men's association, to visit various cities, look through the telephone directories, obtain the names of firms whose ratings in commercial agencies were good, open up offices, and have stationery printed with that firm's name and the address of their offices.

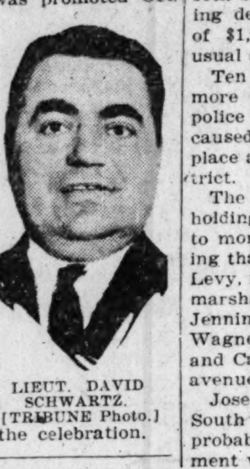
Then They Ordered Goods.

Then they would write or telegraph orders for goods in various lines to wholesale houses. The wholesale houses would look up the credit ratings, suppose the firm had changed its address, and ship the goods. The two men would accept the goods and reorder as long as their credit lasted. The goods received were sold to other firms and the two pocketed the money.

In Chicago they have been using the names of Harry Aaron, a merchant at 1106 East 46th street; the United Supply company, 22 Quincy street; the Globe Mercantile company, 700 West Roosevelt road, and the National Jobbing house, 602 West Roosevelt road. Within the last year they have obtained nearly $500,000 worth of goods, according to records of the credit men's association.

FRIENDS GIVE GOLD STAR TO POLICEMAN RECENTLY PROMOTED

Lieut David Schwartz of the detective bureau, who was promoted Oct. 28, was presented with a gold star set with diamonds by his friends at a banquet Thursday.



LIEUT. DAVID SCHWARTZ.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Judge Hugo Pam, who acted as toastmaster, made the presentation speech. Judge Joseph Schulman, Judge William L. Morgan and Sheriff Charles W. Peters also spoke. Two hundred friends of Lieut. Schwartz gathered at the Parkway hotel for the celebration.

Bogus Checks Charged.

A young man giving the name of Fred Reitze and who said his father was a member of the brokerage firm of Coleman & Reitze, 50 Broad street, New York, was arrested by Sergt. George Cudmore of the Town Hall police last night charged with floating bogus checks which the police claim will total more than $50,000.

Among Reitze's deals was the purchase of a shade cloth company at 4642 Broadway with a bogus check for more than $4,000. Police say they already have some fifty specimens of his paper, all drawn on New York banks.

Numerous Holdups Reporetd.

There were numerous holdups last night and early this morning. The Consumers' Coal company, 458 West 35th street, loot $20. Alex Hein, clothing dealer at Waukegan, was robbed of $1,300. The remainder were the usual street "stickups."

Ten burglaries with loot totaling more than $19,000 in the Town Hall police district within the last week caused Chief of Detectives Hughes to place an extra detail of men in the district.

The Cottage Grove avenue police are holding three men who have confessed to more than a dozen holdups, including that of the drug store of Robert R. Levy, recently appointed United States marshal. The prisoners are Walter Jennings, 2721 Wabash avenue, Moses Wagner, 2728 South Wabash avenue, and Carl Johnson, 4642 South Wabash avenue. All are colored.

Joseph Wilson, 29 years old, 4512 South Wabash avenue, was shot and probably fatally wounded in an argument with a strike guard in the stockyards. The argument was over the size of his pay envelope.

Policeman Kills Robber.

Charles Finnan, 1958 Grand avenue, was held up by two men at the Grand avenue elevated station. Policeman Patrick Haran walked into the station a few minutes later. Finnan told him what had happened. Haran walked outside. Two men were on the sidewalk below. When they saw the officer they started running. Haran pursued them. At Hartford court and Ohio street the officer shot and killed Jesse Barrigan, well known as an automobile thief. He was one of the bandits. The other got away.

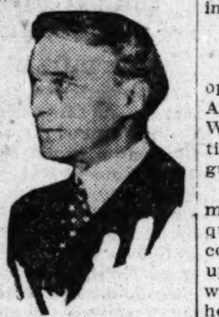
27 TAKEN IN RAID FREED.

Twenty-seven alleged gamblers, arrested Dec. 14 by policemen from the chief's office in a raid on the Independence club, 1215 South Kedzie avenue, were discharged yesterday by Judge Joseph W. Schulman.

WHETHER SMALL STANDS TRIAL IS NOW UP TO JUDGE

BY PARKE BROWN.

Waukegan, Ill., Dec. 17.—Whether Gov. Len Small will face trial early in January was this afternoon left in the hands of Judge Claire C. Edwards of the Lake County Circuit court. The court said he would give counsel two days' notice before handing down his ruling.



C. C. LE FORGEE.

Counsel for the defense completed rebuttal arguments on their efforts to quash the three indictments, and the court, asking for written summaries of the points of both sides and the citations in support of them, said he had "cleared the decks" to begin work on his decision at once.

One Count Deemed Bad.

During the final arguments the defense considered it had won at least a slight moral victory when Judge Edwards indicated he would hold the thirteenth count of the conspiracy indictment insufficient. This is the confidence game count and the court said he agreed with the contention of Attorney C. C. LeForgee that it should have contained the word "feloniously" which is missing.

The state did not concede that any element of victory could be read into this indication of the court's position. Counsel for the prosecution said they had known for some time that this count was faulty and that their arguments had been confined to the score and more of other counts remaining in the three indictments.

Argument Largely Repetition.

The same attorneys indicated their opinion that the closing arguments by Attorney LeForgee and Attorney Werner W. Schroeder were almost entirely repetition of their opening arguments.

Attorney LeForgee concentrated most of his fire on the alleged inadequate procedure of the Sangamon county board of supervisors leading up to the selection of the grand jury which voted the true bills. He placed heavy emphasis upon his reference to the "insidious influence of politics" and "the sanctity of the grand jury." His peroration was considered his master effort during the hearing. Entirely aside from the merits of the legal argument, it made a deep impression.

Gov. Small did not reach court until 11:10 and he and his party left half an hour later to start for Kankakee by automobile.

DOCTOR, FREED ON ONE CHARGE, IS TAKEN ON SECOND

As Dr. J. E. Werda of the Plaza hotel was leaving the Sheffield avenue court this morning, after being discharged on a charge of operating a confidence game, he was arrested for larceny by bailee.

Joseph Mateway, 1644 North Clark street, is the complainant in both cases. He charges he gave $300 to Dr. Werda, who claimed to be president of the Assyrian National Association of America, to obtain the release of Virginia Mateway, reported held in Constantinople by a Turkish army officer. Dr. Werda said later the girl was married and did not wish to come to the United States.

Mateway says he investigated and found the girl was held against her will.

RUNS TO TRAIN; DROPS DEAD.

J. J. Lusbom, 60 years old, 11951 South Halsted street, fell dead on the street while running to catch a train at the 111th street station of the Illinois Central railroad.

MOVING WALK IN N. Y. PLANS FOR EXTRA SUBWAYS

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Plans for new subway lines to cost approximately $200,000,000, plus equipment, are to be made public in a few days, according to an announcement today by the transit commission. The first of these lines is to be in 42d street, from river to river, to take the place of the present shuttle trains.

It was stated that instead of the usual tracks and cars that a moving platform might be built with movements of from three miles an hour to six and from six to nine.

If this plan is followed there will be entrances and exits at each of the avenues as well as connection with each of the Rapid Transit lines. It was suggested that one of the first of the new lines will be under 8th avenue. No intimation was given as to the precise location of the proposed lines. A cross town line from Long Island City to Flatbush is being considered.

$20,000 RAISED FOR NEEDY ACTOR BY EQUITY BALL

Society Out in Force to Help Willing Helpers.

No class of persons ever has responded more often or more generously to society's many appeals in charity's name than the theatrical people and society reciprocated last night by turning out en masse for the Actors' Equity ball at the Congress. The proceeds were estimated at $20,000, which will be used to assist needy actors.

FRANK BACON.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

This was the first time that the actors ever have made a public appeal to Chicago and even then it was not altogether an appeal for charity, for they gave an entertainment which was well worth the price of admission. Virginia Bell, Lester Allen, Elizabeth Murray, Ada Forman, James Clemons, Jurien Thayer, Ann Pennington, Savoy and Brennan, Aunt Jemima, Elsie Janis, Irene Bordoni, Louis Berkoff, and Sister Frieda each contributed a number to the "Midnight Jollies," which was given in the ballroom, starting on the stroke of 12.

Ends with Pageant.

The Jollies ended in the wee sma' hours with a pageant, "The Equity Star," in which charming little Patricia Collinge, who recently left the stage to become Mrs. James Nichols Smith of Chicago, represented the Spirit of Equity. Jerome Uhl of the Chicago Opera company sang "The Equity Star," which was composed for the occasion by Victor Herbert, the lyric by Grant Stewart.

Preceding Miss Collinge was Walter Ducart as a herald and following her were members of the companies playing in Chicago, "Lightnin'," "Take It from Me," "Enter Madame," "The Gold Diggers," "Under the Bamboo Tree," "The Bat," "Greenwich Village Follies," "Elsie Janis and Her Gang," "Nice People," and "The Skin Game," and members of the floor committee, under the chairmanship of Evan Evans. Each carried an electrically lighted Equity star, and following them were a group of the prettiest chorus girls in the city dragging a huge Christmas tree, which opened, revealing Miss Julia Silvers, soprano.

Decorations in Autumn Flowers.

Autumn leaves, chrysanthemums and colored lights were used to decorate the ballroom and around the walls ran the motto of the Equity in electric lights, "one for all and all for one and all for Equity." Supper was served all during the evening in the Pompeian room and grill and there was general dancing in both the ballroom and Elizabethan room.

One of the high lights of the evening was when Frank Bacon, of "Lightnin'" fame, chairman of the ball committee, stood up in his box and introduced Miss Lizzie Evans, one of the oldest actresses in the United States, who was playing in Ford's theater in Washington the night Lincoln was assassinated. Miss Evans retired from the stage several years ago and is living in Chicago now.

Bruce McRae in Charge.

Bruce McRae was general director of the ball and among those who assisted him in making it a success were Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, Miss Jane Grey, Miss Francine Larrimore, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Joseph Fish, Evan Evans, Ivan A. McKenna and Charles F. W. Nichols. The souvenir program was different from all others in that there were no advertisements, the merchants of the city having been asked outright for contributions rather than solicited for ads. A list of the Equity brochure subscribers was published in the program and the comittee reported that $10,000 was donated by these firms or individuals.

Some of Those Present.

Among those who attended the ball were Harold F. McCormick, Miss Muriel McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Haines, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Pitcher, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Prindiville, Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Wallace C. Winter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Strotz, Frederick McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey B. Two Called Deans of Pickpockets Held Here

NEW JAIL BREAK ASO'CONNORHUNT HEADS TO NORTH

Prisoner Saws Way Out of Police Station.

While detectives were combing Chicago and state officers were scouring the Fox lake resort district yesterday for Tommy O'Connor, who fought his way from the county jail last Sunday William Hoffman, said to be a thief, added the second sensational jail break to the week's record by sawing his way out of the West Chicago avenue police station. City police are completely mystified by the latter's escape.

WILLIAM HOFFMAN.

Keeper to Be Questioned.

Hoffman was arrested Thursday. After his escape was discovered the police found that one of the bars of his cell had been cut through. But the police say after getting out of the cell Hoffman was but little nearer freedom, being in the bull pen. No bars of the bull pen had been cut.

Lockup Keeper Daniel Hogan is to be questioned by his superior officer. Hoffman escaped from the Ohio state penitentiary in 1919.

Trail of O'Connor.

Meanwhile the police were beginning to lose faith in the theory that Tommy O'Connor is hidden by friends in Chicago. All of his old haunts have been searched in vain.

The officers who are conducting the out of town search pieced together a chain of circumstances that makes them believe O'Connor left Chicago immediately after his escape.

The First Link.

The finding of the almost naked body of a man in a creek near Palmyra, Wis., on Friday, offered the first link in the chain. Circumstances indicated it had been thrown from an automobile.

Early last Monday morning a party of autoists stopped Dennis Limberry, marshal of Libertyville. They said a mysterious automobile had been following them for miles.

"I am convinced O'Connor was in that auto," said the marshal yesterday. "Although I attempted to apprehend them, the car roared past."

Farmer Adds to Clew.

Some time after the marshal's encounter, John Tesner, a farmer living on the same highway near Libertyville, was awakened and ordered to get out a team of horses to pull a small automobile from the mud.

The next link is the discovery by Mr. and Mrs. Jack O'Connor that some one slept in their hut on an island in the Fox lake district Monday night. One of the beds had been occupied but Jack O'Connor, Tommy's cousin, could not say who had used it.

Wednesday morning a man driving a mud covered automobile stopped in a garage in Richmond, Ill., which is owned by William Stewart.

"The man ordered gas and oil and told me to be quick about it," said Stewart. "He resembled O'Connor."

There the chain breaks.

T. R., THE PATRIOT, IS EULOGIZED BY SAVANTS IN PARIS

PARIS, Dec. 17.—[By the Associated Press.]—Details of the life of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt were brought to the attention of the Academy of Mora and Political Sciences at its annual open sitting today by Charles Lyon-Caen, the permanent secretary.

COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"Few presidencies have been marked with such a number of acts and events fortunate for the United States, and often also for other countries, as that of Col. Roosevelt," declared the speaker. The secretary declared that with the outbreak of war in 1914 one of the most glorious periods in the life of the former President started.

"Col. Roosevelt," he said, "has been accused of being the principal and most ardent representative of American imperialism, but imperialism needs a definition. No great power has escaped the accusation of imperialism at some epoch in its history. There also are degrees of imperialism.

"Hitherto American imperialism has been restrained. Undoubtedly, the United States has established a colonial domain, but seems to have stopped in this direction. The United States might have profited by Germany's loss of her colonies to gain fresh acquisitions, but has not chosen to, preferring to have fought solely for the liberty of the world, without gaining advantage from the victory."

YOUTH STABBED TO DEATH AFTER QUARREL ON CAR

A quarrel starting on a crowded street car at 33d street and South Ashland avenue led to the death of Joseph Souscek, 16 years old, 3312 South Ashland avenue yesterday, after being stabbed twice by another boy. His assailant fled.

Souscek told his mother before he died that he was on a southbound Ashland avenue street car, and in making his way toward one of the entrances he jostled another youth. A few words passed and the stranger followed him from the car.

The quarrel was renewed and the stranger drew a knife, striking Souscek twice.

Sues to Compel City to Issue a Building Permit

Suit for a writ of mandamus was filed yesterday to compel Mayor Thompson and the building department to issue a permit for the construction of a garage at 2931 Wentworth avenue to Vincent Milavich.

THREE DEATHS ARE ADDED TO TOLL OF AUTOS

Three deaths yesterday were added to the list of Chicago's automobile fatalities.

Moses Adelson, 11 years old, 1223 North Robey street, was struck by an automobile driven by Edward Blum, 2158 West Huron street, at North Hoyne avenue and West Division street. Witnesses said Blum was not at fault.

Mrs. Nellie Palecz, 25, 1904 South Leavitt street, died at the county hospital after being struck by a "vampire" car Friday night at South Robey and 18th streets.

Roy Fuller, 16, 4517 South Union street, died at Mercy hospital. He was hit by a motor truck at 44th street and Racine avenue.

Three Health Department Clerks Suspended by Chief

Three civil service clerks in the health department were suspended yesterday. They are William C. Merker, Harry Parker, and Lewis Barry.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

1. A Square Deal in Congress for the Middle West.

PEACE IN THE PACIFIC.

The Washington conference has produced thus far an agreement in fact, signed by the plenipotentiaries and to be submitted for ratification, which guarantees peace in the Pacific for at least ten years. They are, we believe, the critical years of the next generation.

It has obtained an agreement in principle and virtually in fact to the limitation of naval building which prevents competitive construction, nation against nation. Such competition engenders suspicion and provokes war. It will be stopped for ten years.

It has obtained a general outline of procedure with regard to China which is not yet satisfactory but which contains a promise at least that China ultimately shall be free in most of her ancient territory and shall govern her trade, her railroads, and her ports and shall have friendly assistance in developing her resources.

The benefits already obtained flow from the essential wisdom of the scheme for the conference. It was limited to the nations interested. That confined it to realities. It began with a defined plan for naval reduction which went immediately to rockbottom. It did not rest on ideas and generalities but was specific in its items. With such a start the conference was out of the realm of ambiguities.

We believe that already it has cleared the Pacific of a war which was much more than possible. It was probable and a great many observers familiar with conditions feared that it was inevitable.

Frankly the American government, for peace, has arrayed the most powerful part of the world against Japan. It has broken the Japanese-British alliance. It has brought Great Britain and France to underwrite the security of the Philippines. It has given compensations for this, but instead of pledging American strength in Europe it has pledged European strength in the Pacific.

The four ply treaty has provoked some opposition in the United States senate, to which President Harding will submit it for ratification, probably after the holiday recess. This opposition cannot be both sincere and intelligent and we do not believe it will be embarrassing.

A candid statement of the American benefits obtainable from the treaty might seem ungenerous, but it is true that the more which can be read into it the more it favors the United States. It does not say that the nations will go to war to protect each other's insular rights, but no American need to be afraid that such is the construction. The tighter the treaty binds each nation to protect the others against aggression the better it will be for the United States.

In words the treaty merely binds the nations to hold a joint conference if any question should arise which is likely to affect the concord established, with a view to having the whole subject "referred for consideration and adjustment" and to consider, in case of aggression by any other power, how, jointly or separately, they may meet "the exigencies of the particular situation."

These are cautious words, but no American should complain that they may mean too much. They cannot mean too much. What we want them to mean is that the Philippines and the British Pacific dominions are protected by the joint guaranty of the United States and the British empire.

The British dominions could not be in danger until the Philippines had been taken. The United States holds the first line of trenches of white peoples in the far Pacific. The United States is the nation which now is out on the thin ice. By this four ply treaty the United States turns the British from an alliance with Japan to an accord with America.

No other signatory nation gains such benefits from these promises as the United States gains. The compensation we give the British is in the naval agreement. Great Britain would have difficulty in maintaining its relative navy strength if the United States, foolish or frightened, did what it could with its wealth and resources in building warships. Very likely we could have the British navy in an inferior position in a few years. The British counter to that would be an alliance, but it is better for them to have an accord with America than to have an alliance with Japan. The latter is merely a way out and a bad way out.

We have always conceded that Japan was the first nation in the world to see a reality. The accord of the Americans and the British is a reality. It changes the scheme of operations for the greater part of a generation. If one generation can protect its successor to this extent and in this fashion it has done about as much as is humanly possible.

A vision of permanent peace can be an inmate of the mind, but a year may wreck it. The best people can do is to pass untroubled prospects to their successors.

We believe Americans should have enthusiasm for the work of the conference. It has been on the square. It has been truthful and frank with the public. The United States has protected its own interests. Peace has been given insurance. The United States has been given allies. War has been made remote.

SHACKLING A CITY.

New York lost equitable representation in the New York legislature. The upstate New Yorker thought of the city as a port of entry for foreigners. Many peoples were being ushered into citizenship. The foreigners had huddled together in tenements. Lax sanitary regulations had spread contagions. There had been riots, notably the draft riots of the civil war. New York state took New York City's birthright of equal representation away.

New York City pays 73 per cent of the taxes of the state, has 60 per cent of the state's population, and only 40 per cent representation in the legislature. The city has become the miracle of the American continent. Nothing is impossible there. It builds as if a race of giants were available for construction. New York is the one man made product of the United States, which makes a European think he is looking at the work of centuries. Upstate New York sits politically upon the neck of this veritable American giant. The state interferes in the affairs of the city. It meddles with New York City's subways. It meddles with its public utilities. It sends commissions to destroy home rule, to interfere with local control of police, water, and harbors. It takes the money of the city and denies it a fair vote in the legislature.

Any American community would rebel against such procedure. New York state is the tory of the American revolution in this particular. New York City is the colonial revolutionist.

In Illinois there are the same forces at work to do for Chicago what was done to New York City. They want to restrict the legislative representation of Chicago just as it was restricted in New York in order that the same power may pass into the hands of a minority of citizens and taxpayers who live in communities untouched by metropolitan issues. The experience of New York is warning to Chicago.

WHERE THERE IS NO SANTA CLAUS.

There is no Santa Claus living at the north pole. Once, long ago, we thought there was, and that he had a great toy shop and sleigh and team of reindeer, and came galloping over the roofs on Christmas eve, stopping only to slip down the chimney, stuff our stockings with gifts, eat the pumpkin pie on the table, and be off again with a jingle of sleighbells in the frosty air.

Then we came to know that there was no Santa Claus living in the snowy north, but we found comfort in the belief that he lived in the hearts of boys and girls, and men and women. Now we know that he does not always live even there. He has been driven away by cold and hunger. The hearts of the boys and girls of long ago which once gave Santa Claus, the spirit of Christmas, the spirit of charity, of generosity, jollity, and good cheer, a warm and cozy home, have grown so hard and cold with age that even the Santa Claus who once lived at the north pole could not survive. He is gone.

We found it out only the other day when we went, seeking him, in the dreary places of Chicago. There were little boys, alone, eating hard, dry bread and salt in a cold, black, basement room. There were little girls with pinched faces and red, cold hands, dragging boxes of kindling wood along the streets. There were fathers out of work, helpless and despairing. There were mothers, sick, and sad, and hopeless. There was no Santa Claus. There was not a bright, warm spot in any of those hearts where he could find a home.

We know, because the little boys and girls, sensing our mission as children always sense a clew to their lost friend in the vaguest hint at Christmas time, ran after us in the street, crying: "We wrote a letter to Mr. Good Fellow and to Santa Claus, too, but nobody came to our house."

"Nobody came to our house." There is the tragedy. There is the proof. Santa Claus is gone. Can any one who ever knew the joys of belief in Santa Claus, who ever sheltered the children's saint in his own heart, doubt that Santa Claus is gone when he fails to send even a messenger into the poor homes of such little ones? The cries of those children in the slums of the city prove it. Where those cries continue there is no Santa Claus.

GETTING BACK TO THE COUNTRY.

Explorers and early travelers in the Mississippi valley were impressed with the beauty and profusion of its wild flowers and plant life. When Chicago chose a legend for its arms it selected "urbs in horto" and invited the world to think of it not as the Windy City or the Hog Butcher of the World, but as the Garden City. This was not assumption, for Chicago was, in fact, set in one of the great gardens of the world and the city itself was a friendly place of tree-shaded streets and dwellings not huddled in blocks as now, but set in lawns with trees.

All that was not many years ago. It belonged to the childhood of Chicagoans of middle age, who have never given up their liking for trees and lawns and their own garden sass and therefore have tended to get into suburbs or out on the rim of the city where there still are stretches of green and trees on the horizon. The city somehow has preserved the ideal of openness which our prairie background preaches, and in the present generation we have kept spreading along the blue line of the lake, north and south, and westward over the ridges and stream valleys, taking in as preserves a bit of river here, a grove there.

With the automobile this instinct has been stimulated and broadened. Every week-end sees a cheerful exodus to the country, hundreds of thousands of city folk taking to the open road, picnicking far out on the prairies or in the lake and woodland country which in the last generation was out of city folk's ken except perhaps as a vacation resort once in the year.

Happily for us we still live in a garden of nature. But it is not a garden we can neglect or ruthlessly trample if we are to keep its enjoyment year by year. Many city people do not realize this and on their trips do damage to our common legacy. The wild flowers are no longer in such profusion as Father Marquette noted. Far from it. Many beautiful varieties have disappeared and many others will soon be gone unless we protect them. The wild birds have dwindled, though a generation ago it seemed their numbers were exhaustless. To lose these means to lose a great deal of the interest and beauty of the country, and to cheat us of the wealth of old pleasures we are beginning to regain.

The law prohibiting the killing of game birds for sale shows what can be done to protect and renew our inheritance. Already results are showing in the increase of ducks and other birds. If this is backed by a campaign of education, especially in the schools of city and country, we shall be able to win back much that once made this region one of the most interesting in natural history. What the Audubon and other societies are doing for the protection of bird life, the more recently formed Wild Flower Preservation society has begun to do for the flora of the west. City people ought to join in to make this movement a success. The prairies and woodlands can still be restored to much of their primitive beauty if we refrain from heedless picking of wild flowers and do what we can to encourage their growth in favorable places.

An idea of what this means to us can be got from the exhibition which the Chicago chapter of the Wild Flower Preservation society, with the cooperation of the Audubon and State Microscopical societies, will hold for a month, beginning Saturday, at the Art Institute. If you want pleasant thoughts of summer on these dark city days and a new sense of what our western country has for us to enjoy, go to the nature show.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

A SINGER I.

A singer I; look not to me
For cups of cool philosophy;
I'm not a preacher, that is plain;
I'd give no jot of my domain
For any other empery.

Within my kingdom, I am free
To praise the beauty that I see,
Without a thought of golden gain:
A singer I.

My province borders Arcady;
Where shepherds pipe, and hums the bee;
I try to sing a mirthful strain;
It may be that I strive in vain;
I spread no gloom, you must agree:
A singer I.

LAURA BLACKBURN.

FROM the La Grange (Ill.) Citizen: "Lost—Man's dancing slippers Tuesday night on Cossitt avenue. For left foot." Probably, like Judas, he has two left legs.

IT happened in effete Evanston. Flapper to mother, while passing Reo sales sign: "Mamma, what does R-E-O spell?"

THE Medillians and others afflicted with curiosity concerning the vital statistics of journalism will be breathless to learn the answer to the question, If a Col Con leaves town on a Thursday, how can he con a col on a Sunday? As you read these lines we'll be somewhere west of East street, probably weeping for joy at Lotta's fountain—not for al joy, we hasten to add for the information of the gang at Third and Market—just for plain joy. For everybody north of Tehachapi Pass, including Ti Johnson, the two Baums, and Cal Ewing, knows that al is one of the handsomest joys in captivity. To advert to the Sunday col—ask Hank, he knows.

WE understand that the inspired compositor of the Houston (Tex.) opera house program for Othello has left town. It reads: "The people are on bended knees praying for the salvation of Othello, who is on the ship battling against the storm. The danger is over. Othello appears and greets the people—COOK ONLY WITH THE FAMOUS COOKING FAT, CRUSTO."

Now, go on with the story.

THE PENNY WHISTLE.

(By Bert Leston Taylor, published by Alfred A. Knopf, $2.)

Here's the last work of B. L. T.,
  Light as the down blown from the thistle,
A kindly natured faun was he,
  Who piped upon a Penny Whistle.

He sang of Futurist and Freud,
  Of Fakirs in the mob politic,
And though, at times, he grew annoyed,
  He was an honest, genial critic.

And he would venture—by your leave—
  With laughing eyes and sidelong glances,
A plan of life from Mother Eve
  Up to our modern sex romances.

Then he would play (in half regret
  That life had such a sombre turning),
A measure to his sweet Babette,
  With notes of fond parental yearning.

I hope that he has found a rest,
  Far from a world of quips and wheezes—
"On those fair islands of the blest,"
  The islands of the warm Marquesas.

THE foregoing is reprinted from the Daily Cardinal, University of Wisconsin.

"'LET Us Continue to Wage War on Wealth:' Lenin."

Lenin is easily the Bosco of the Blah chorus Wealth in itself is most commendable. In fact, in the Utopia we are planning, we propose that all men who have risen to command an income of more than $50,000 a year shall be exempt from all taxation; they shall be regarded as works of art, too precious to be meddled with.

The Erewhonians were right—money is the symbol of duty: "It is the sacrament of having done for mankind that which mankind wanted."

KNIGHTHOOD is still in flower on the Janesville one-track, one-man-to-a-car trolley system. The motormen always salute each other when they meet at the switches. But, deposes an observant gadder, if one car has to wait at the switch more than five minutes, the salute of said motorman is distinctly lacking in cordiality.

LINES ON TYPES.

Sir: Filling a long-felt need, we now rise to the occasion with a series of delineations of various types of the s. c. human race, instead of word etchings of localities. Just as a starter, The Goswogii present

The Cake-Eater.

A type roaming Wilson Avenyeh, Monroe Street, and other dressed-up districts. Not without form, but void. Characterized by six-point collars, music-rulé cravats, burnished hair with Sunoco finish. Trick hats. Funny britches with bell-bottoms. With female prototype, lean languidly on boulevard lamp-post, conversing out of lower left-hand corner of mouth. Has seen everything—knows everything—experienced everything—in his own bailiwick. Generally purveys haberdashery or supplies impetus to a spencerian in brokers' office. Not to be confused with the type that dresses in the Mode, yet are of the Hard Hardest. (Vide M. Georges Carpentier and The Honorable, The British Polo Team.) Blossom in cafeterias, rialto, statelake. Moral code of the hyena. Classifies all women as "live ones" or "dead ones." "Live ones" buy them lunch and take them to cabarets. The "dead ones" spoof them. Cake-eaters' intellect largely in the ankles. Think Julian Street is a thoroughfare. Think all farmers are hicks. (Take these birds to Peoria and some slicker'd steal their right eye, if you get what we mean.) Demon telephonists. Much-thumbed address-books. Genus differs from the "dude." THE GOSWOGII.

(In preparation—"The Stretchneck.")

THERE is now on the presses, we don't mind confiding to you, a booklet of the Abroad At Home Series of The Goswogii.

THERE are more slick litry snickersnees abroad today than ever before in the history of the poor old human race. The shibboleth of the snickers seems to be, "Give us Iconoclasm or give us death." We would cheerfully give any number of them death. We still believe in the precept of the beam and the mote. If the Almighty couldn't make any better job of the human race than he did, what kind of a job, pray, would one of us mortals turn out? A bas! James, fetch the next paragraph.

SIMPLICISSIMUS, who has been absent without leave for some moons, notifies us that the reception for young Mr. 1922 will be held as advertised on the night of Dec. 31. Prospective guests (or contribs) are requested to submit their credentials to his representative, Anthony M. Rud, 219 North Central avenue, Chicago. He stipulates that each should come equipped with contributions, same to be used in a special Morning After edition of The Line. The reception will be limited to thirty-five guests.

Exhibit A in Small Town Stuff.
[From the Janesville, O., Era.]

Miss Jennie Jones and Bob Henry were married at the Jones mansion last night. The bride is the daughter of our constable, Jones, who made a good officer, and will undoubtedly be reëlected in the spring. He offers a fine horse for sale in another column. The groom runs a grocery store on Main street, and is a good patron of our advertising columns, and has a good line of bargains this week. All summer he paid two cents more for butter than any other store in town. The happy couple left on the 10 o'clock train for Milwaukee to visit the bride's uncle, who is reported to have lots of money and Bright's disease. Bob certainly has an eye for business.

"SO," so'd the boss, culling a contemplative camel, "you're leaving Thursday, eh? Well, I suppose the W. G. N. will come out as usual."

SOMETHING should be done for an optimist like that. PAZ.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

MOUNTAIN EXISTENCE.

THIS is the centenary of the Monks' Rescue home, located at a wind swept, bleak spot, 8,120 feet above sea level in St. Bernard's pass in the Alps.

About twenty-five men who live in this station spend their time in their devotion; in maintaining a home for wayfarers and in rescuing those lost in the mountain snowdrifts. They are on call for rescue expeditions at all hours of the day and night, and, once a week, that they may keep themselves in good wind, they turn out for a long, exhausting, training outing.

It is the custom to keep each monk on the station for from fifteen to twenty years and then to transfer him to Simplon pass, which is only 6,000 feet above sea level, or to assign him to a parish in some mountain valley.

In the 100 years more than 100 men, picked for their youth and strength, have spent fifteen or twenty years at this elevation above sea level, and endured the exposure which comes in the winter.

It is possible to get a line on the healthfulness of high elevations and life in the open in cold weather from the century long experience of these men.

In 1839 three died from typhoid fever. A traveler brought the disease to the monastery, and three deaths among attendants followed. Two died from consumption many years ago. These two came into the monastery together and, it is said, were infected when they came in. If so, the disease progressed only slowly, for one died eight years after he located at St. Bernard's, and the other thirteen years after going there.

One died from epilepsy, one from peritonitis, and four from avalanches or other accidents.

The station has been remarkably free from coughs, colds, and all infections and eruptive diseases.

The average age attained by these men at Simplon and in the valley parishes to which they have been transferred has been very high.

In addition to their own health conditions they have been able to make some valuable observations on the effects of altitude. One is that apoplexy is much more important as a cause of death among persons at high altitudes than it is among other peoples.

The conclusion is that most of the deaths at high altitudes, ascribed to heart disease, are really due to apoplexy.

That being true, it is the man with high blood pressure, rather than the man with heart disease, who should avoid high altitudes.

Consumptives do best at an altitude of 7,500 to 8,000 feet. Colds, infections, and eruptive fevers are not of much consequence at the high altitudes.

At about 6,000 feet open sores exposed to the sunlight do not undergo septic processes. The sunlight at high altitudes has a maximum heating power. A man at St. Bernard's pass can lie on a sun bank at midday in the sunlight and sleep comfortably without blankets over or under him.

The sunlight, likewise, has more power to kill germs and purify the air, the soil and the water.

There is advantage to health and physical vigor in subjecting the body at the same time to the stimulating effects of cold air and to the warming effects of the sunlight, as it is on the mountain tops.

CHILDBED FEVER.

E. K. M. writes: "1. I would like an explanation of toxernia, which sometimes comes with childbirth.

"2. Also phlebitis. Is there any relation between the two?

"3. How long does it take to overcome phlebitis?

"4. What is the best treatment?"

REPLY.

1. I presume you mean childbed fever. It is due to infection with pus germs. In many instances the infection enters the blood stream.

2. Phlebitis is inflammation of one or more veins. It is due to infection. Phlebitis may be an effect or complication of childbed fever.

3. A long time.

4. Get the best medical service available, and follow directions.

RED HEADS CAN MARRY.

L. R. writes: "1. Kindly tell me is there any reason why red headed people should not marry?

"2. Would our children be red headed?"

REPLY.

1. No.

2. Most of them would be. Say ten out of the first dozen.

BARE KNEES.

S. P. writes: "Do you think it advisable for little girls between 11 and 12 years to wear socks, exposing their knees in the winter?"

REPLY.

Yes.

DRINK PLENTY OF WATER.

Reader writes: "Kindly give me some advice regarding the drinking of cold water between meals. Is there danger of overflushing the organs or causing colds from overperspiration?"

REPLY.

It is necessary for first class health that one should drink plenty of water.

Drink one or two glasses of water between each two meals. Water drinking can be overdone—like every other good practice—for instance, going to church.

A BIG MISTAKE.

Mrs. J. H. W. writes: "1. I have been told that it will hurt my three month old baby to wear the rubber pants every day. Will it give him rheumatism?

"2. Is it advisable to give a child paregoric at night, or will it injure the brain? I have given him from four to five drops two or three times, as he cries at night—not real hard, but fusses and will not sleep."

REPLY.

1. It will not give her rheumatism. It will increase the likelihood of chafing and of kindred skin troubles.

2. It is not. WHY TRAIN YOUR CHILD TO BE AN OPIUM EATER?

CHILDBIRTH RISKS.

A. M. K. writes: "Is there any hope for a safe delivery at childbirth for a woman with an ovary and a tube taken out?"

REPLY.

Yes. In fact, that should not increase the risks.

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 11.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—If a man is dishonorably discharged or deserts the army or navy does he lose his United States citizenship? If a person is convicted of a felony does he lose his citizenship? H. A. B.

In reply to the attached letter of H. A. Bryarley, section 1,996 and 1,998, R. S. U. S., provide that all persons who deserted the military or naval service are deemed to have voluntarily relinquished and forfeited their rights to citizenship, as well as their right to become citizens. These statutes have been held to apply only to those who have been convicted for desertion. Under the laws of most states a person who is convicted of a felony forfeits his rights of citizenship, and therefore also his rights to become a citizen.

OPERATION FAILED.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Some time ago I was operated upon and lately have had a repetition of the trouble for which the operation was performed. I have gone to some different physicians who tell me the operation was not properly performed. I have not paid the operation bill yet. Do I have to? Can the physician collect? D. A. L.

Depends on the facts bearing on the question of blame for the first operation. We cannot advise without knowing the facts.

A BAD PARTNER.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I worked in my husband's place of business for months and at first he paid me a salary. Then business got bad and he didn't pay me anything. He promised to pay all as soon as he could. Now a lawyer has brought suit against him. If he wins and he attaches the fixtures for judgment can I put in my claim for salary and be the first to be paid? How could I go about getting this money? H. D. W.

You could enforce a preference by throwing your husband into bankruptcy. We would suggest having your husband give you a chattel mortgage now, which should be acknowledged before clerk of Municipal court and recorded.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEED.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I returned some goods for general imperfection after having made a $10 deposit on the articles. The firm was willing to refund only $7, saying that there were charges for delivery, packing, etc. The advertisement read "money back if not satisfactory." How can I get back the whole deposit? O. M. H.

On such a contract you seem entitled to your money back in full, but the amount is too small to make legal proceedings worth while. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NEW ADMINISTRATOR.

Clinton, Ia., Dec. 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A will is made by the father of a family through a lawyer and is filed in a bank. The heir who shared best is named as executrix without bond. Upon the death of this man what procedure is followed in executing the will? H. G.

If the beneficiary died before the testator his gift lapses and the court will appoint an "administrator with the will annexed."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

HAVANA POST NO. 138, A. L., CLEARS GOOD NAME OF ITS TOWN.

Havana, Ill., Dec. 13.—Several letters have recently appeared in your paper in regard to one John Scanlon, purporting to live in our city, and who is responsible for the disloyal and unpatriotic letter that appeared in the "Voice of the People" Dec. 7, 1921, under the caption of "The Public Will Judge," in which he insults both the flag and the American Legion with his bolshevik, anarchist, and communist utterances.

The Havana post No. 138 of the American Legion desires to emphatically inform the public that after diligent search the whereabouts and identity of the said John Scanlon remains unknown. We are extremely anxious for the coward who would use that anonymous method to stab the Legion and our flag in the back to arise from seclusion and let the public know his true identity or residence and then let the local post of the American Legion dispense justice upon this infamous coward.

Any one knowing the writer of the above mentioned letter will be rewarded if they will send such information to the undersigned.

HAVANA POST NO. 138,
Walter T. Smith, Adjutant.

OPPOSED TO HARDING'S SUPPORT OF CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING ORGANIZATIONS.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 8.—In our President's message in his argument favoring farmers' coöperative unions he calls it "startling" that 7,000,000 bales of cotton should sell at the same value as 13,000,0000 and 700,000,000 bushels of wheat should sell at the same total value as 1,000,000,000. To one familiar with this actual business there is nothing startling about it. A short crop always produces abnormally high prices, but this is a very lame argument why the people should be taxed to promote and help these agricultural combinations, which would be identical in working principles and results with any other trust. They could fix prices without the correct economic restraint of supply and demand, which is the only true basis of correct values.

I think when our people, the largest proportion of whom are consumers, not producers, of foodstuffs, become more familiar with this new idea of placing the power to regulate prices entirely in the hands of the seller and paying taxes to accomplish this feat they will begin to think "what fools we mortals be" to furnish money to compel ourselves to pay combination trust prices for our own food and to help bar all fair competition by high import duties.

Boards of trade are the result of over fifty years' experience. The receiving houses make cash advances on the grain when shipped and are necessarily in sharpest competition with each other. Houses in other branches of the business find sales markets in all parts of the world, many of them with leased wires from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the gulf, giving rapid service and reliable information of the crops and markets from all countries. All this service is done for a moderate commission, cheaper than any other business that can be named.

What is called the speculative part of the business, trading for future delivery, has distributed the risk of carrying our immense crops from harvest to harvest in numerous hands and is constantly changing ownership, thus reducing the individual risk, which our "agricultural bloc" is trying by uninformed legislation to concentrate entirely in the producers' organizations, guaranteed by government at the expense of the consumer.

The farmer has always been able, if he desired to hold his wheat, to take a storage ticket from the country elevator buyer and obtain a reasonable advance in cash if he desired. Or if he has facilities to store his own grain and desires to protect himself from fluctuations he can get in touch with a board of trade firm and sell it for future delivery. Any legislation interfering with boards of trade or their methods is sure to injure the producer as well as the consumer.

GEORGE W. SHEPARD.

A PROFIT ON FRESH EGGS AT 46 CENTS.

Gowrie, Ia., Dec. 11.—The article contributed today by Harold Barclay of Wheaton, Ill., entitled, "Two Dollars and Fifteen Cents a Dozen to Produce Eggs," was amusing, particularly the last paragraph, in which he states, "I am not giving these figures to discourage prospective egg farmers."

I wonder does he call himself an egg farmer or does he just keep chickens?

I find that opportunities for making money by keeping poultry on a town lot are many and the enjoyment derived from scientific poultry keeping will more than repay one for labor spent.

Mr. Barclay's trouble lies in the fact that he is carrying too many "drones" in his flock or has not learned the art of feeding for egg production.

His hens are laying an average of two and a fraction eggs a month per hen. A conservative average would be twelve eggs a month per hen of the laying type. He is not getting the maximum production possible from a flock of good hens. Hence the high cost of production.

I am receiving 46 cents a dozen and find it profitable. BEN HALLBERG.

47 CENTS A DOZEN TO PRODUCE EGGS.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—I was very much amused by Harold Barclay's article on eggs. If I were in Harold's place I think I would prefer a stamp collection as a hobby. I have been kept by hens and know whereof I speak.

Do you realize, Harold, that your hens have only been averaging 2½ eggs each per month? If you have the right kind of stock here is what your accounting should show, if the hens are receiving the kind of care and feed they deserve:

Number of layers	365
Production 50%, or 443 doz. at 84c.	$372.12
4904 No. feed, $124.32, or per doz.	.28
50 hrs. labor at $1 per hr, $50, or per doz.	.113
Postage	.04
Depreciation on houses and equipment, $500 at 5% per year	.0047
Interest on $1,230 at 6%—$73.80 per year	.014
Total cost of production per doz.	.4517

Selling at 84 cents per dozen, this leaves $0.3883 as net profit. R. L. BORDWELL.

FRANCE READY TO HELP BRITAIN REVIVE GERMANY

Also Willing to Reduce the Army on Rhine.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Dec. 17.—The following official announcement of the principles which will govern Premier Briand in his conversations with Prime Minister Lloyd George on Monday were given out by the foreign office today.

1. France is willing to scrap the London schedule of payments if Germany can pay an equivalent amount in a different form and under a different schedule. France will insist upon scrapping the London schedule rather than have it patched up.

2. The French government will seriously consider reductions of the allied forces on the Rhine in order that more money may be available for reparations if Great Britain offers an absolute guarantee in case of future German aggression.

To Aid in Restoring Germany.

3. France recognizes that Great Britain is as greatly concerned over the trade prospects as France is over the reparations payments and it will assist, through any common accord, in improving the general economic situation. She will willingly discuss lower tariff and similar problems.

4. France agrees that the economic and industrial restoration of Germany is necessary to British trade prospects and French reparations claims and will jointly enter any practical measures toward that end.

5. France cannot accept a reduction in the allied reparations claims, but is willing to accord Germany every possible facility for making deliveries.

Refuses Berlin's Plea.

The reparations commission today made public the text of a note to the German government stating that it would be impossible to grant the German request for a delay in meeting the January and February reparations payments until Germany makes known just what it can pay.

The allied reply demanded to know why Germany had not furnished information as to what foreign exchanges it would be able to deliver, how long a delay was wanted, and what guarantees would be given that payments would be resumed.

In addition the commission wanted to know what action the German government had taken to improve its budget and to aid the financial situation.

30,000 INSPECT RELIANCE BANK'S NEW QUARTERS

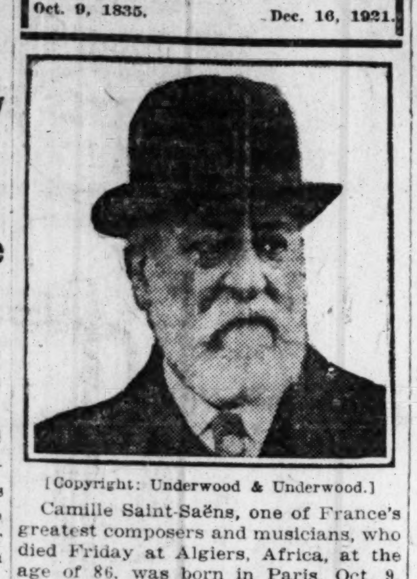
Thirty thousand visitors and patrons inspected the new home of the Reliance State bank, Madison street and Ogden avenue, when it was opened for the first time yesterday.

Until 10 o'clock last night a steady stream of visitors passed through the new building and received gifts of flowers and other souvenirs. Clocks were given to those who opened new accounts of over $5 and $1,000 in gold was distributed. More than 2,000 persons opened new savings accounts.

The bank moved into its new quarters from the old building on the triangle formed by Madison street, Ashland boulevard, and Ogden avenue, just facing the new home.

Camille Saint-Saëns

Oct. 9, 1835. Dec. 16, 1921.



[Copyright: Underwood & Underwood.]

Camille Saint-Saëns, one of France's greatest composers and musicians, who died Friday at Algiers, Africa, at the age of 86, was born in Paris, Oct. 9, 1835.

Saint-Saëns began his musical career when he was hardly out of the cradle. He played the piano at 2½ and at 5 he gave his first public concert. He studied under Benoist and Halevy, devoting his time to the piano, organ, and theory. At 17 he composed and performed his first symphony. Although a pianist of the first rank he played the organ equally well and as a young man was the organist of the Madeleine church in Paris.

Many of the late composer's works have been heard in Chicago, the Chicago Symphony orchestra having performed more than thirty. Saint-Saëns was in Chicago in 1906 and was to have directed the Chicago Symphony orchestra at two concerts, but owing to fatigue was not able to do so. Instead he played his piano "Concerto No. 2" with the orchestra. The Chicago grand opera season was opened this year with "Samson and Delila," one of his greatest works.

Among some of Saint-Saëns' most famous musical productions are: "Les Noces de Prométhée," "La Princesse Jaune," "Le Timbre d'Argent," "Samson et Délila," "Danse Macabre," "Henry VIII.," "Ascanio," "Phyrné" "Javotte," "Hélène," and "L'Ancêtre."

TOBIN SAYS FARM FOLK STILL LIKE OLD TIME GAMES

Your native of the rural districts wots not of Keats or Ibsen, Bernard Shaw or Anatole France. For recreation, mental or physical, he cleaves to the good old fashioned games and dances. Nothing delights him more than "drop the handkerchief" or "pussy in the corner," in the belief of Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools.

Yesterday Mr. Tobin submitted his annual report on community center work in connection with country schools. He bases his opinion on the statements of his workers in the various community centers and their experience during the past few years with the children and parents who live in the wide open places outside the city.

Simple games like "bob in the bolster" and "blind man's buff" do more good and create a greater harmony of interest than a discourse on the evolution of the molecule group.

Specially trained teachers will soon be sent by the county school board to spread the teaching of simple games, many of which have been forgotten.

The Rev. William Henry Van Antwerp, D. D., who died on Friday morning at 6044 Ingleside avenue, was at the time of his death the oldest living alumnus of Hobart college, Geneva, N. OPEN EVENINGS

MERRIEST XMAS HERE; WHAT PART ARE YOU TAKING?

Help to Make This Best Yuletide Ever.

It started last night. Yes, while you were asleep—unless you went to somebody's party or have a job as policeman or night watchman.

The merriest Christmas season began last night at midnight. We wish you Yuletide greetings.

Do all you can during this Christmas period to make people happy. Brighten up the Christmas season every way you can think of. Do what you can for others. Be a Mr. Good Fellow or a Mrs. Good Fellow or a Miss Good Fellow.

If you were one last year you won't need to be asked to be one this. If you haven't tried it before, now's the time. And if you're a Good Fellow once you always will be. Get the name of a needy family from Mr. Good Fellow of THE TRIBUNE and go around and investigate and see what you ought to do.

Don't forget to do some Christmas joy riding this week with children or ex-service men as passengers. Asher Bros. have sent tickets to the Roosevelt theater for next week that will be distributed to those who seldom enjoy a motion picture show.

Who'll Give Use of Car?

We need cars to bring the Ascher Bros.' guests to the theaters and take them home again. Telephone in when you and your car will be ready for this service.

Ascher Bros. say that their play for the week at the Roosevelt will be "A Prince There Was," which is singularly appropriate, because the Prince of of the picture was a sort of Mr. Good Fellow himself, although he didn't discover it until he began to do kindly things for others.

Miss Garden's party of 100 working girls at the performance of "Romeo and Juliet" won't enjoy grand opera more than the convalescent soldiers and the children are going to enjoy "A Prince There Was." The Messrs. Ascher's invitation is for any day during the merriest Christmas period, the convalescent soldiers and the children are always ready, so it's up to you to say when the expedition sails.

You Doing Your Share?

Mr. Good Fellow is up and at 'em now, and if you don't belong to his happy band do all the other things that the merriest Christmas needs to make it the merriest.

Community Christmas trees are growing not far from you. There's a big tree sixty feet high down at the Toyland circus in the Coliseum and the Red, White, and Blue club is working hard making Christmas a real thing to thousands of children.

Joy for Poor Children.

The Kiwanis clubs of the north shore are erecting a big Christmas tree at the Broadway armory, Broadway and Thorndale avenues, and will be the hosts at a North Shore community Christmas celebration all day next Friday. Fifty thousand tickets are to be distributed to the children of the north side. They want toys and clothing, new and old. If the things are old they will be gone over and fixed up and made almost as good as new before being presented by Santa Claus to those much in need of them.

If you have anything to donate, call up Santa Claus, Sunnyside 0401. That's going to be one of his main offices all week.

MR. GOOD FELLOW, CAN YOU IGNORE THESE APPEALS?

Sick and Hungry Poor Are Paging You.

thing to eat Christmas day. I think you will. Santa Claus will see your letter, it's a cinch. He's an awful lively old bird for his age, snooping around and peeking at everything people write.

The Mr. Goodfellow that gets Nellie has got to buy some stage whiskers and put them on when he carries his basket in. Get asbestos whiskers so the fire marshals and the insurance companies won't get after you for being a fire hazard. Put electric handles in the window and wear asbestos whiskers when you do any Santa Clausing. Then you're all right.

Talk about big families and hard luck. Molly says that in her family there are only eight children and their ages are 13, 12, 10, 8, 6, 4, 2, ½. Eight children, Mr. Good Fellow. It looks as though two of you Mr. Good Fellows would have to get together to Santa Claus this family. There's no objection to the Mr. Good Fellows traveling in pairs just like detectives do.

Told to "Forget Santa."

This is a large order, but it has to be done. Molly says her pa is sick and he says for the children to forget about Santa Claus because Mr. Claus don't go where people are in debt and pa owes the butcher and the groceryman and everybody.

But Molly, who is quite hopeful, says that her little brother, who is 2½, wants a bicycle, and the three sisters each want a big doll and Molly and her two brothers would like a baseball game. Incidentally some food would be quite grateful. What the year old wants Molly does say. One guess. Certainly.

Molly Still an Optimist.

Molly seems to be quite an optimist in spite of her pa kiljoying all over the place. We've got to do something, Mr. Good Fellows, about Molly. It will look like a massmeeting when you walk in on Molly and her brothers and sisters. But think of the fun of putting pa in Dutch. He said Santa Claus wouldn't come.

South Chicago's Fine Work.

South Chicago doesn't need to be urged to show its Good Fellow spirit. A Santa Claus headquarters was erected there yesterday in Columbus Square, and telephone operators placed there to receive messages sent to Santa Claus. More than 10,000 children kept the telephone lines busy sending in their Christmas wants to P. H. Moynihan, official Santa Claus and general chairman of the Good Fellow committee of business men who are arranging for the care of the needy.

Mr. Moynihan announced last night that sufficient funds had already been collected to assure every needy family and every child in the city a regular Christmas. Instead of several organizations doing the holiday work alone all the business and professional men of South Chicago united this year.

Recognized as the highest type of piano, the grand is the supreme instrument for the home. The Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand is finished in mahogany, or walnut. Basic improvements, endorsed by the highest authorities, give this piano a special value. They are the Silento, the Candelectra, and the Junior Unfolding Two-Level Pedals. Each of these features fills a long felt want. If you are in any way interested in pianos, you should see them. Then you will know what a piano really should offer to you.

Steinway Pianos and Duo-Art Reproducing Pianos

Player Pianos

Here are instruments which have won the favor of all. They enable the unskilled to play. They open the great library of music which has so long remained locked except to the pianist. In tone, quality, appearance and for hand playing they are pianos of substantial quality and merit. WINTER BUILDING SHOWS GREATEST ACTIVITY IN YEARS

November Contracts 45 Per Cent Over 1920.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Building activities continue to perform as the Infant Phenomenon of the industrial situation. With Christmas one week away and the weather still open, residential construction is still booming. In all parts of the country reports are that this is the most active December the industry has experienced in many years. Figures of the F. W. Dodge company, a trade authority, issued yesterday in the American Contractor, pour a statistical foundation under the general reports which union leaders and contractors have been making since the topcoat days set in.

Big Gains in November.

Building contracts actually awarded in November, the Dodge figures show, were 45 per cent greater than in November, 1920. They were only 14 per cent less than in October, while ordinarily the decline from October to November, has been about 25 per cent. To put it another way, November saw only about one-half of the normal seasonal slump in contracts actually awarded. The contracts given for the month all over the country had a valuation of $192,311,000.

The pace is keeping up, too. For the forty-ninth week of 1921, ended Dec. 10, the Dodge statistics show 1,568 contracts awarded with a valuation of $42,116,500. Nearly one-half of this was for residential structures with a valuation of $20,350,000. Still under contemplation, but without contracts having been awarded, are 2,244 projects valued at $116,300,000.

$9,877,400 Contracts Here.

In the states in the Chicago district the building awards for the week amounted to $9,877,400. Some $57,790,000 of other construction is contemplated. In the New York district the awards amounted to $13,421,000 and the contemplated to $20,550,000.

The remarkable volume of building, either under way or projected, is indicated even more emphatically by the figures on building permits. In 204 cities the total valuation of permits taken out in November was 98 per cent higher than in November, 1920. It was about on a parity with November, 1919, when construction costs were at their height and work was going full tilt, in the fat era when industry was running away from itself.

When the drop in building costs is taken into consideration, the present volume of permits is more than double a year ago.

In Chicago, the volume of building permits taken out in November was about $2,000,000 greater than in October. Figures given for November are $12,389,000; for October, $10,457,000.

Summary of Situation.

This is how the present season stacks up against its last two predecessors:

In 204 cities in November this year, 42,826 permits were taken out with a valuation of $148,593,000. In November, 1920, 28,647 permits with a valuation of $74,900,000 were taken out. In November, 1919, 31,764 permits, valuation of $151,070,000.

Building activities are seeping down into other industries. For instance, furniture making has been booming, apparently the direct result of the construction of cottages, bungalows, and apartments, for about one-half the building is residential. Mill work has been stimulated, the cement industry has been striking a real pace, glass factories have been increasing forces.

JUNIOR LEAGUE GIRLS CHARM CHILDREN WITH 'ALICE IN WONDERLAND'

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

"All of them can and most of them do."

The duchess was speaking Cheshire cats and smiles. But she might just as well have been talking of Junior League girls and acting, as she and the other members played their parts in Alice Gerstenberg's dramatization of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," at the Playhouse yesterday morning.

That most of them did act and act well, from the meek little Dormouse (Mary Rend) to the arrogantly polite Mad Hatter (Eleanor Holden), their youthful, enthusiastic audience, who didn't know stage formulæ, but did know when Humpty Dumpty was funny, testified in words of one syllable, in giggles, in excited screams, and in sympathetic groans when Alice fell down the well.

Know Parts Thoroughly.

If some of the lines were sent across a bit too fast for the children's real appreciation, it may be explained, perhaps, by the fact that the actors were so familiar with the well known words of whimsey and philosophy they took them for granted, and, in a few cases, made their public do the same.

Quite terrifying, with her pepper, her gorgeous headdress, and her vivid nose, was Mary Washburne as the independent and entirely entertaining Duchess. Katherine Cooke was diverting as the White Chess Queen. She and her sister Mary, as the Red Queen, were constantly pleasing. Sarah Hinde as Alice was so altogether naive and youthful that protests were made against having a "child star," against the law. Alice in real life holds a college diploma.

Moral: "Have It Again."

Louisa Sanborn scored a hit as the amiable but impressive Gryphon, a part which she had been understudying, but which she assumed at the performance with no regular rehearsal. She was fine.

Scenically, it wasn't any trouble to imagine yourself in the Halls with Doors, the Room with the Looking Glass, the Queen of Hearts' Croquet Ground, or at the famous tea party.

And the moral of it all is, as the Duchess would say, "have it again." There will be nine more "agains" successive Saturday mornings at the Playhouse. The proceeds will go to the Infant Welfare society.

Among the women who entertained parties of children yesterday were: Mrs. Frank E. Wilhelm, Mrs. Huntington B. Henry, Mrs. John L. Fortune, Mrs. Francis R. Dickinson, Mrs. Carleton Holdredge, Mrs. George P. Gilman, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. John J. Mitchell Jr., Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mrs. Charles Garfield King, Mrs. Stanley Keith, and Mrs. Philip D. Armour III.

THEY TODDLE IN PURITAN CHURCH! AND PASTOR, TOO!

Boston Divine Says It Saves Young Folks.

They are not so slow in New England after all, according to the Rev. James Gordon Gilkey, pastor of the South Congregational church of Springfield, Mass., who is visiting his brother, Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, 5830 Woodlawn avenue. Not only do the young people hold semi-monthly dances in the church chapel in this Puritan stronghold, but the elders of the church, many of them direct descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers, and the minister himself, participate in the dance.

"It isn't the old fashioned quadrille or even the waltz," the Rev. Mr. Gilkey said, "but the modern dances, including the toddle. And even the descendants of John Alden seem to enjoy it as much as the young people.

Only Way to Save Them.

"It was the only way to save the young folks from the dance hall and the sex problem play of the local theaters," he continued. "If the young people want to dance they are going to dance, and if you won't let them dance in the church youth will be served and they will go some place else, probably the cheap dance hall. That accounts for many of the depraved tendencies of our 'nice' boys and girls today.

"I convinced elders of my church that if they allowed their children to dance at all it should be where dancing could be made right, and if it was right for them it was right for us, so we all join in.

"It has increased the attendance of my church from 300 to 1,700 and the young people, who would not come to the regular evening service, now flock to the church Sunday nights, where they have supper and clean motion pictures.

Stirs Interest in Church.

"Girls and boys who took no interest in church work before are among the best workers in the Olivet community house, which is a defunct church building turned over to the work of social betterment in connection with my church.

"It is not true that clean motion pictures will not pay. The theater which we run in connection with our church and at which sex plays are taboo, clears over $175 a month and is increasing every day."

Dr. Gilkey will speak before the Sunday Evening club this evening on "Can Civilization Be Saved?"

SCHOOL BUILDING TO AID JOBLESS IS UNDER WAY NOW

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Conference on unemployment figures show an enormous amount of school construction under way and a larger additional amount authorized as one way to give immediate relief to the unemployed.

According to the National Education association, buildings are going up, or contracts about to be let, to the amount of $20,553,250, which will provide much needed seating capacity for 36,271 pupils.

DOG, HELD AS CAT SLAYER, BLAMES SAUSAGE TRUST

Rich Pooch Will Be Tried for Pussyslaughter.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 17.—The case of Dormie, arrogant Airedale, accused of catslaughter, today was drawing almost as much attention in San Francisco as did the trial of "Fatty" Arbuckle.

The alleged killer of Sunbeam and twelve other Maltese, Persian, and alley cats is scheduled to face a jury in Superior Judge Lile Jacks' court on Tuesday. The real question the jury will decide is whether Dormie must suffer the death penalty.

Dormie himself is going his usual way, playing with his kiddie companions—for he is the pedigreed pet of a fashionable district. He approves with a wag of his tail a dozen statements a day.

Denies Heart Is Involved.

Among the latest denials and comments attributed to Dormie are these:

That a Stockton dog threatening to sue him for breach of promise is only a blackmailer—that he never knew her.

That the feline population is exceedingly catty.

That he can produce an Angora friend of his who will testify she has raced with him many times and that he cannot run fast enough to catch a cat.

That he is being persecuted by the sausage trust.

That there is a conspiracy against him on account of his wealth and that if he were a poor dog the humane society would intervene.

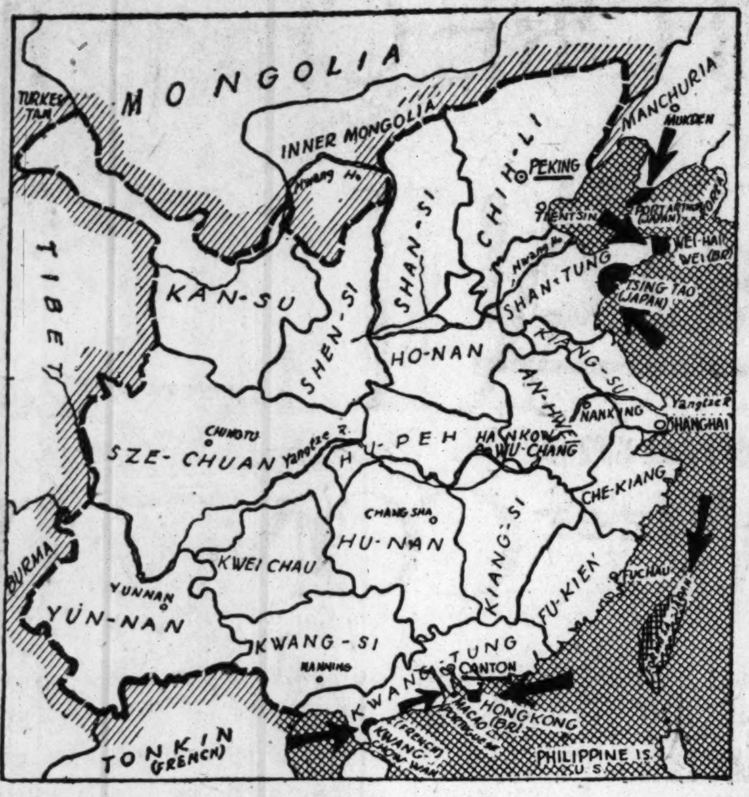
Refuses Canine Actor's Canard.

That Mack Sennett's dog "Teddy"—well known as the canine character in film comedies—had considerable of a crust in making a statement yesterday insinuating that Dormie was a publicity hound.

"On the other hand," read Dormie's latest statement. "I shun publicity."

Dormie has spread consternation throughout the fashionable Burlingame kennels by threatening to expose the inner secrets of the entire upper strata of dogdom.

ALIEN FLAGS IN CHINA



THE arrows on the map indicate foreign possessions, ceded or leased, in China at the present time. Four powers hold them, England, France, Portugal, and Japan. Japan holds the most land.

The island of Formosa Japan reft from China in 1895, and she now holds Tsingtao and Port Arthur as well, and is extending into Manchuria.

England's possessions are the most important. Hongkong, the gateway to South China, is in British hands.

"QUEER ACTIONS" OF CHURCH ARE TOLD BY MOTHER

Mrs. Eva Church, mother of Harvey W. Church, who is on trial before Judge John R. Caverly for the murder of Bernard J. Daugherty and Carl Ausmus, resumed the witness stand yesterday in behalf of her son. She continued her story of the young man's "queer" actions, asserting she believed him of unsound mind.

"I saw a pair of handcuffs in Harvey's drawer," she said, "but they were not the handcuffs on Daugherty's body."

It is expected that the case will go to the jury on Christmas eve.

MERGER PLANS TO CUT PRICES FOR FERTILIZER

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 17.—A merger of more than a score of fertilizer plants, chiefly in the south, involving millions of dollars, into one big organization, with headquarters in Baltimore, was reported under way today.

The project was said to have among other objects that of obtaining maximum efficiency in operating costs, so as to lower the price of fertilizer. National manufacturers will not become members of the proposed association, it was said.

HUSBAND SLAIN; WIFE HELD.

Cleburne, Tex., Dec. 17.—George Stambridge was shot and instantly killed at his home today. His wife was charged with murder.

TOYS AMUSE U. S. SENATE BODY IN TARIFF HEARING

Committee Room Is Like Santa Claus' Workshop.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—German competition is threatening the complete ruin of the American toy manufacturing industry, according to assertions made by Alfred C. Gilbert of New Haven, Conn., representing the Toy Manufacturers' association of America, today before the senate finance committee.

Mr. Gilbert declared that the importers of German toys are able to undersell the American product and still make "tremendous profits." He said the American public is not getting the advantage of low prices.

Duties of 70 per cent ad valorem, foreign valuation, or 40 per cent, American valuation, were asked on toys.

Members of the finance committee were kept amused by an extensive exhibit of all kinds of American made and German toys.

Duties on Brushes.

Supporters and opponents of increased duties on brushes were heard by the committee. W. B. Gibson, representing the New York Brush Importers' association, urged the committee to reduce the rates on tooth and toilet brushes in the Fordney bill from 35 per cent to 25 per cent.

Dr. Thaddeus A. Hyatt, a New York dentist, said that tooth brushes should be on the free list as a matter of hygene. He pointed out that the only two manufacturers of tooth brushes in this country make a high priced article and that all the cheaper grades are imported. George A. Fernley of Philadelphia, representing the American Brush Manufacturers' association, urged a duty of 60 per cent on toilet brushes and 55 per cent on other brushes, these rates being computed on the foreign valuation plan.

Differ on Jewelry Tariff.

David J. Gallert of New York City, representing novelty jewelers, urged a reduction in rates in the Fordney bill, while E. M. Johnson of New York, representing American manufacturers of imitation pearls, approved duties in the Fordney bill. Frank J. Appellee, an importer of pearl buttons, said that the Fordney duty of 10 per cent on pearl buttons would be prohibitive.

A protest against increased duties sought by silk manufacturers was made by H. E. Miles of Racine, Wis., chairman of the Fair Tariff league. Mr. Miles said his organization includes presidents of several farm organizations and representatives of wage earners, manufacturers, and importers.

"My organization wants to know by what right favored interests of the United States ask for further protection, at the expense of the consumers," said Mr. Miles. "Today we have a virtual embargo on silk, except on a few oriental varieties which our manufacturers do not want to make. These silk manufacturers had high protection before the war, and yet paid the lowest wages of any industry in the country."

WALSH TRIAL FOR GEORG SLAYINGS IS SET FOR FEB. 7

Delay Is Granted Over the State's Protest.

THOMAS J. WALSH. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Over the protest of State's Attorney Crowe, Judge John J. Sullivan yesterday, set Feb. 7 as the day on which he will start hearing the charges of murder against Thomas Walsh, business agent of the Sheet Metal Workers' union.

Judge Sullivan was selected as trial judge by Benedict J. Short, attorney for Walsh, after Judge Kickham Scanlan had placed the names of all the judges in envelopes and allowed Mr. Short to pick one.

Mr. Crowe and Mr. Short then appeared before Judge Sullivan to have the date set.

State Asks Earlier Date.

The state's attorney asked that it be set for Jan. 3.

"If this case is not heard soon I fear a miscarriage of justice," said Mr. Crowe.

He feared some of the state's witnesses might be lost if there should be any delay, he said.

Attorney Scott pointed out that Walsh had just been indicted, that there is considerable feeling in the community over the shooting of Adolph Georg and Gast Donat in the Georg saloon, 155 West Randolph street, and that on that account it would be difficult to get an impartial jury.

Four Murder Trials Ahead.

Judge Sullivan said he had four murder trials ahead of him for January, one of them being that of Sergt. Kellogg, who killed Attorney Lemuel Ackley in a courtroom in the county building.

State's Attorney Crowe pointed out that there was no fear of witnesses disappearing in these cases.

Mr. Short referred to the remark attributed to Chief of Police Fitzmorris about being unable to get convictions in the Criminal courts in thirty days.

"That's true," said Mr. Crowe. "It can't be done. Here's one reason."

The staff of assistant state's attorneys who will handle the prosecution includes William Scott Stewart, Edgar Jonas, William McLaughlin, and Robert McMillan.

PAVLOWA PROGRAM REACHES HEIGHTS OF CLASSIC DANCING

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Anna Pavlowa's second program at Medinah temple yesterday afternoon was the occasion of about as lovely a bit of pure classic line in dancing as has been seen in any ballet performance hereabouts. It was "snowflakes," a matter of white and tinsel glitter, built about the music of Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite.

Up to that time, and including the same "Snowflakes" that the Pavlowa organization gave last year, the high mark in classic dancing, to my notion, had been the "Chopiniana as presented by the Diaghileff Ballet Russe, and in a slightly different form by the Pavlowa company. "Snowflakes," however, has displaced it.

No Story, No Pantomime.

There is no story, no pantomime, no comic relief to the ballet, nothing more complex than line, grouping, fleecy fabrics, blue moonlight, and the perfection of exquisite grace in dancing. Pavlowa and Laurent Novikoff were the leaders, passing in and out of the supporting group, giving point and emphasis to a lovely scene.

"The Magic Flute," a pleasant comedy of the dance, began the program, with Hilda Butsova in the leading part. She has been with the organization for a number of seasons, and by virtue of sprightly carriage, personality, and an excellently controlled technique, has been advanced to a position of one of the leaders. She merits it.

Karavaieff Wins Applause.

Among the divertissements was a Russian dance in which Pavlowa appeared with a certain Karavaieff, one of the newcoming males of the company. As he spun about in the violent gymnastics that mark Russian folk dances, he was to a certain extent a reminder of that astonishing young Stepanoff who did the same sort of thing last year. Not quite such a teetotum gone violently mad as his predecessor, who was the best living example of Kipling's "an injy rubber ijjit on the spree," Karavaieff went over the verge of the apparently impossible quite far enough to bring the audience up with a wild outburst of applause.

Those who go to the Playhouse on Saturday mornings these weeks to see the ardent band of young enthusiasts play "Alice in Wonderland," have the opportunity of hearing some extremely good incidental music for the performance. Most of it is by Eric De Lamarter, who has both skill and imagination for that kind of composition. The songs are by Liza Lehmann, and good they are, but Mr. DeLamarter also demonstrates how music may be incidental, may be written for a tiny orchestra, and at the same time may be important.

"Big Tim's" Chauffeur Off to Serve U. S. Prison Term

Edward Gierun, chauffeur for Timothy D. ("Big Tim") Murphy, who was recently convicted for complicity in the Dearborn street station robbery last April, in which $378,000 was taken, left last night for Leavenworth penitentiary to begin his sentence of four years

'BRONZE APOLLO' AS MOVIE STAR IN 'LONELY TRAIL'

Scenes to Be at Stillman Summer Camp.

FRED BEAUVAIS.

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Fred Beauvais, the Canadian Indian guide, of Stillman case fame, has gone into the movies. His own production, "A Lonely Trail," is going to get a Broadway introduction to the fans shortly, it is planned, and the state board of censorship has just viewed and approved the film.

Contrary to expectations, "A Lonely Trail" is not based on his being the co-respondent named by James A. Stillman in the divorce suit against Mrs. "Fifi" Stillman and which alleges that Beauvais is the father of Guy Stillman.

Capitalizes His Notoriety.

The notoriety Beauvais has gained as a guide in Canadian forests, however, is capitalized for the film. Arrangements for distribution of the copies of the film will be through a New York film exchange.

The story of "A Lonely Trail" is in the Canadian forests, duplicating, it is said, many of the scenes in and around the Stillman summer camp at Three Rivers and Grand Anse, where, according to Stillman, his wife and the Stillman guide had their love affairs.

Mrs. Stillman Rejected Offer.

It is recalled that Beauvais is the first of the principals in the Stillman case to capitalize the notoriety. Mrs. Stillman is reported to have had a number of offers to go on the screen, but so far has rejected them all. It is probable that Mrs. Florence Leeds, named in Stillman's love affairs by Mrs. Stillman, would receive tempting salary offers if the movie magnates only knew where to locate her. So far, however, Mrs. Stillman's detectives and the small army of reporters and photographers of newspapers have failed to find her. She was in the "Midnight Follies" when Stillman met her, it is related.

STUDENTS LAUD PROFESSOR HELD "PEEPING TOM"

Members of classes in chemistry in the University of Chicago to the number of seventy or more yesterday came to the defense of Prof. Gerald Louis Wendt of the chemistry department, who was dropped from the university faculty by President Judson on Friday.

The charges in which Prof. Wendt was named were that he was involved in a "Peeping Tom" escapade at a girls' dormitory at the university. Friends explained that a sudden nervous breakdown was responsible for the professor's strange action.

And last evening the chemistry students numerously signed the following statement:

"The undersigned are students of chemistry in Kent Chemical laboratory at the University of Chicago. They have all had the honor to come into some kind of association with Prof. Gerald Louis Wendt. Some have been privileged to approach no nearer to him than in the capacity of students or of seekers for his excellent advice, while others have become more intimate, and have formed with him deep and lasting friendships.

"It is safe to say that among the representatives signed below, Prof. Wendt has been seen in every variety of his conduct of life that embraced either his professional duties or his fellowship and intercourse as a friend. At all times he has been found to comport himself as an inspiration both in chemistry and in the manhood of his character.

"And although his fineness as a teacher has been appreciated, it has been his nobility as a gentleman of refinement and of unimpeachable moral staunchness that has been valued most. Any one who is in the least acquainted with Prof. Wendt knows him to be incapable of any mean thought or act."

JULIUS ROSENWALD TELLS WHY HE GIVES TO UNITED CHARITIES

BY JULIUS ROSENWALD.

For more than twenty years I have contributed to the United Charities of Chicago, and for several years past have given $5,000 or more each year. I have thoroughly satisfied myself at first hand that this organization is actually helpful:

Because it gives emergency relief when occasion demands but does not make a practice of dispensing charity doles.

Because it aims to preserve wholesome family life by endeavoring to develop within the family itself the necessary mental and physical stamina to successfully fight the battle with poverty.

Because it interests itself in every applicant regardless of creed, or color, showing thus a commendable spirit of tolerance.

Because it provides legal aid and summer outings.

Because it finds work for the unemployed and interests itself in the physical, mental and moral disabilities of thousands of unfortunates.

Because it furnishes free medical aid when required and assists in procuring legislation which will make for greater justice for widows, orphans, and other unprotected members of the community.

The United Charities should be generously supported to enable it to do adequately its great citywide work.

'ART IN THE HOME' PUTS ITS MARK ON THIS CHRISTMAS

Aunt Mary won't send that Christmas turkey from her Michigan farm. Cousin Bill, down in Florida, may forget his annual holiday offering of pecans. No pale boudoir caps from the "in-laws" in one of the Dakotas.

No, from Maine to California, from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, they will say it with Queen Mary chairs, Elizabethan dressing tables and gateleg tables, for this is to be a wooden Christmas, according to latest reports from the Chicago Art institute, whose extension course in interior decorating and house furnishing has turned Santa Claus into a furniture man.

A Better Homes institute, the catalogue calls it, given under the direction of Ross Crane, manager, and Mrs. P. A. Spaulding, business manager, in cities, towns and villages throughout the country, is responsible.

No Home Immune.

A course in breaking up homes, husbands call it—husbands whose stubbed toes and bruised shins testify to the "practical application" of the art course which leads brides in Kansas City, matrons in Tampico and grandmothers in Hinsdale to "get art" so zealously that no bedstead, smoking stand or wash tub is safe from the beauty missionary. Two window cushions grow where a tool chest formerly rested in dust; pianos become davenports, fumed oak changes over night to mahogany, dark and sticky.

But don't receive too many Christmas gifts in crated boxes, warns Mr. Crane, for the secret of an artistic room is "what isn't." The larger the pile of furniture in the basement, the better looking the room upstairs. The bigger the discard the better the game of house furnishing.

Sentiment, believes Mr. Ross, has a definite place, but that place is not the living room mantle. Even family affection may be carried too far if the wall space permits.

What to Do to Be Explained.

After Chicago has unpacked the quantities of furniture sent as Yuletide greetings by friends and relatives from towns, villages, and cities in which the Art institute's extension course has spread the gospel of better homes our own village will have an opportunity of learning just what to do with the influx of wood and varnish and upholstery.

For courses in home decoration and interior decorating similar, in many cases, to those presented by the extension department are to be offered at the institute the first of the year.

Some modifications are necessary, explains Mrs. Spaulding. "For instance, in an institute held in the city we would not concern ourselves with landscape architecture and yard planning, for most of us don't have yards."

But no matter how small the flat, it has an interior. It is primarily with interiors that the proposed institute will deal.

KEELINS TO MAKE RESTITUTION AND RECEIVE PAROLES

Judge Harry M. Fisher yesterday announced that he will enter an order placing the defendants in the Keelin short weight conspiracy case on probation as soon as orders can be entered. The judge ordered the defendants to make restitution.

Thomas W. Keelin, head of the T. W. Keelin & Co. grain concern at 166 North Carpenter street, is to make restitution of $35,000; Wilbur Keelin, his brother, is to pay $8,000; Robert Domke, a salesman, is to pay $5,000; and Joseph Klustina and Neil J. Burnett, teamsters, are to pay $1,000 each.

The restitution will amount to nearly $100,000, the Keelins having already paid more than $50,000.

CHILD'S DEATH DUE TO SCALDS.

Accidental death from scalding was the verdict of a coroner's jury yesterday after investigating the death of Glowa Tista, 17 months old, who died at her home, 660 North May street. The child ran into her mother as the latter was carrying a kettle of hot water.

MAYOR'S WORK ON FARES IS BRANDED 'WORSE THAN NIL'

Schwartz Rips Veil from 2 Year Costly Policy.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

U. S. SCHWARTZ.
[Matzene Photo.]

Mayor Thompson's traction policies, promises, and accomplishments were brought out in the sunlight yesterday, dissected, and exposed to public view by Alderman U. S. Schwartz, chairman of the council committee on local transportation.

The alderman says that the benefits for the car riders obtained by the mayor "have been worse than nil," and that his promises lead through "a tortuous path of doubt and uncertainty," with little hope of its ultimate success. He suggests action at once toward relief of congestion, construction of rapid transit facilities, and municipal ownership of surface, elevated, and other transit facilities. He has a plan to get these results which he will present to the public Monday.

Names a Subcommittee.

Ald. Schwartz announced the appointment yesterday of a subcommittee of the local transportation committee to take up serious consideration of the subject. Its first meeting will be Monday. Its personnel follows:

Name.	Ward.
Guy Guernsey	Seventh
James B. Bowler	Nineteenth
Thomas O. Wallace	Twenty-third
T. A. Hogan	Fourth
John Toman	Thirty-fourth
S. O. Shaffer	Thirteenth
Matt Franz	Twentieth

Chairman Schwartz asserts that Mayor Thompson is to blame for the lack of results in the last two years. He declares the mayor himself asked the council local transportation committee for the opportunity and the privilege of assuming responsibility for the city's transportation program. The alderman quotes a message of the mayor to the city council asking for the responsibility, after the 1918 ordinance had been defeated.

"That responsibility was given him," reads the printed statement of Chairman Schwartz to the subcommittee. "The council did everything he asked to aid him."

Two Years and Results Are—Nil.

"It has been more than two years since the mayor assumed sole responsibility in traction matters, and for the foregoing analysis the following are the general results:

"An 8 cent fare is being charged.

"No improvements in service whatever have been made.

"The city is left 'high and dry' between the jurisdiction of the Illinois commerce commission and its own position that the 1907 ordinances have been forfeited.

"The sum of $250,000 has been expended by the mayor's commission in preparing a plan and enabling bills.

"The mayor's bills failed in the legislature.

"The city is without any means of performing any of the duties or obligations under the contract ordinances.

"Litigation in the federal court relative to the rate of fare.

"Litigation in state courts seeking a forfeiture of the 1907 ordinances.

"Litigation in the Municipal court seeking to gain $3,500,000 which has been tendered the city by the companies and refused.

"The expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars in the employment of lawyers, engineers, and other experts in connection with this litigation.

Predicts More Results.

"A continuation of this course means that we have nothing before us but more litigation, more fees, more waste, and more confusion," goes on the Schwartz statement. "In the end the passenger must pay the $150 a day lawyers and engineers for the companies, as well as for the city. He pays the tremendous expense of litigation, running probably into millions, and what is more, he pays a greater toll in the resulting distraction, disturbance, and confusion.

"So after two years it may be well said that the plan of having the mayor take sole charge of traction matters has failed, and that the committee has done the wise thing in resuming the initiative in the solution of the traction problem; and the committee welcomes the suggestions and coöperation of the mayor in getting results in the near future."

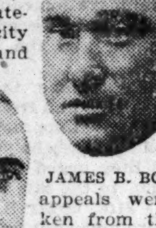
Home Rule Promises Not Kept.

On home rule Schwartz says that "the promise has not been fulfilled" and that the public has been deceived into accepting something that is "practically impossible."

"Both the mayor and Gov. Small," reads the statement, "promised in their election campaigns to procure home rule for the city of Chicago. The only result has been to include a provision in the public utilities act whereby the city, upon a petition of 25 per cent of the legal voters at the last preceding election for mayor, may submit to a referendum the question of whether it shall adopt home rule. This means a petition signed by 200,000 or more voters, a practical impossibility, unless undertaken by a great organization."

Chairman Schwartz makes some pertinent comment upon the efforts of the city administration in favor of a 5 cent fare. One of these may interest Chester E. Cleveland, special attorney at $150 a day in this matter.

Enormous Waste in Litigation.



JAMES B. BOWLER.

S. O. SHAFFER.

"In 1919 the elevated and surface lines began proceedings before the public utilities commission, and orders granting increases in fares were entered," reads the statement. "The city resisted this and appeals were taken from the orders of the commission. We supported the city's position wholeheartedly.

"When the mayor requested funds for the litigation we gave them to him without question. He engaged $150 a day lawyers and engineers on this work, and the cost of the litigation ran into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Still we felt that nothing should be left undone to hold the companies to their contracts. However, first the utilities commission decided against the city, then the Circuit court, then the Supreme court of the state, and finally the Supreme court of the United States.

"Recently the Illinois commerce commission, independent of the contract with the city, rendered a finding that a 5 cent fare is adequate. The city's lawyers, however, for the purpose of this proceeding, did not contest the $160,000,000 valuation of the street railway properties, as contended for by the companies. This was extremely unfortunate."

Fears Control by Courts.

Ald. Schwartz goes on to say that the companies have represented to the federal court that a 5 cent fare is confiscatory. He continues to show the results obtained by the mayor in the following:

"This means the injection of another source of governmental control over public utilities, which, once begun, is not likely to be shortly relinquished. Control by the courts is not a desirable thing for any business. Certainly it is the bane and the abomination of public utilities.

"For a dismal picture of what faces us we need only recall the history of Chicago's street railways in the past, when for years Judge Grosscup controlled and regulated street railways in Chicago. We know the history of Kansas City, Denver, Pittsburgh, and other cities where street railways have become involved in litigation in the federal courts."

Outlines Plan for Future.

"Aside from numerous objections to the mayor's plan, what is the possibility of its being ultimately consummated?" asked the alderman.

He outlines eight steps which, he asserts, must be taken before any real action can be taken under the scheme of the mayor, as follows:

"A special session of the legislature must be convened, or the bills cannot be reintroduced until 1923. It is not a certainty that a special session will be called, nor, indeed, is it always certain that a quorum can be gotten together at a special session.

"The bills must be passed by the legislature. This is by no means a certainty.

"A petition must then be presented to the county judge according to the present provisions of the bill, signed by 5,000 voters. The county judge, after due notice, hears objections on the legality and sufficiency of the petition. Ultimately there will be a legal contest to determine the validity of the act, and the question will probably not be settled until the Supreme court has decided it.

Voters Must Approve It.

"The next step would be the submission to the legal voters of the district the question of the creation of the district.

"If the vote is in the affirmative, the county judge is to call an election to elect trustees of the district.

"After their election the trustees would proceed to organize. They would still have, however, merely the bare shell of an authority to operate and acquire public utilities, but as yet have none to operate. In fact, there is still one more step before their authority to operate is complete, and that is:

"They must procure from the city of Chicago, just as any private corporation would have to, a franchise or authority to operate upon the streets of Chicago.

"Assuming that the tortuous path hereinbefore outlined had been successfully negotiated, the district would then be just about where the city is now, that is, it would then have to seek to acquire the local transportation systems by negotiation or condemnation."

Oklahoma Sheriff Fears Raid on Jail.

Ardmore, Okla., Dec. 17.—With seven men in jail, five of them charged with the murder of Joseph Carroll and John Smith at Wilson, and the finding of the body of O. G. Sims, Ardmore policeman, Sheriff Buck Garrett is keeping a close guard at the Carter county jail tonight.

Sheriff Garrett received a letter signed "Clan No. 7, Ardmore, Okla.," to the effect that an attempt would be made to take "the Smith boys" from the jail.

The five men charged with the shooting are the Rev. Leon Julius, Baptist minister of Healdton; John Smith, butcher of Healdton; J. A. Gilliam, stock raiser of Ardmore; Jeff Smith and Curley Smith, both of Wilson.

Walter Carroll, relative of Joseph Carroll, and H. A. Hensley, both of Wilson, said to have been in the Carroll home at the time of the shooting, are being held for investigation.

Motive Still a Mystery.

Repeated questioning of the prisoners by county officials has failed to reveal the motive for the crime, County Attorney Hodge said tonight.

It is thought that the slayings were the outcome of a visit by masked men to the Carroll home. Warnings had been given Carroll, who is said to have been a bootlegger, that he must stop his "nefarious traffic or leave the county."

Belief is that men went to give Carroll a flogging and that Carroll had been told. Seeing the masked men he attempted to shoot but was shot in the face before he could fire. In the fight that followed John Smith was mortally wounded and Jeff Smith was shot in the left leg.

The finding of Sims' body cannot be explained, according to the police. When found at what is said by police to be a gathering place for the Ku Klux Klan, he wore a pair of "union-alls," usually worn by members of the Klan, and a mask. Several masks were on the ground near his body.

Nineteen Held in Texas.

Austin, Tex., Dec. 17.—The court of inquiry to be held Monday morning by Justice of the Peace Mendell in the case of the nineteen Austin citizens charged with the murder of Peeler Clayton last Thursday night will be seceret. Only the defendants, counsel, and court attaches will be admitted. The examining trial will be a public affair.

Clayton was shot Thursday night in an alley paralleling the building known as the "Ku Klux Klan hall." It was reported that a meeting was being held in the hall at the time.

Tar and Feather White Man.

Sanford, Fla., Dec. 17.—A young white man named Rehrer was tarred and feathered here last night by a party of unidentified persons and sent down the main business street bearing a placard stating that he had sold liquor to young boys.

3 Freed for One Murder; Held for Second in W. Va.

Welch, W. Va., Dec. 17.—C. E. Lively "Buster" Pence, and William Salters, charged with killing Ed Chambers of Matewan last August were freed by the jury after fifty-one minutes of deliberation tonight. The defendants were then held on charges of killing Sid Hatfield.

MADHOUSE MAY AWAIT BURCH IF HE IS ACQUITTED

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Arthur Courtenay Burch, on trial for the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, though confident of acquittal, looks into the future with no happiness. He is reasonably sure that the jury will find him not guilty. But the madhouse waits for him. And his own father, the Rev. W. A. Burch, will place him there if he can.

"I have no doubt that Arthur is insane," said the father today, "and even if he should be freed I will have a lunacy commission try him for his sanity and lock him up in an institution.

"Not Their Boy Any More."

"He isn't our boy any more. He cannot come back to our home until he is cured. Neither his mother nor I could stand it. His wife has divorced him. His child doesn't know him. He is all alone, God help him, and insane."

Burch, however, is absolutely sure his son did not kill Kennedy.

"They told me the state had some damning evidence against him," he said, "but I sat in the courtroom day after day and waited to hear it, and I did not hear it. The state has made out a terribly weak case, strong in insinuations, I will admit, but weak in facts. The testimony to be offered by my son's attorneys will batter the case to pieces."

"Sky Pilot" for Burch.

It was learned today that the Rev. J. H. Hartsell, known as the "sky pilot of Beverly Glen," will be one of the principal witnesses. His testimony will go to refute that offered by Mrs. Elizabeth Besanty, who said she saw Burch in the Glen where Kennedy was killed shortly before and shortly after the murder.

The defense attorneys claim "the sky pilot" was talking to Mrs. Besanty in the courtroom some time before she took the stand, and that their conversation was somewhat as follows:

Mrs. Besanty—"I saw Burch there in the Glen about 7 o'clock that night."

Rev. Hartsell—"Why, my dear woman, you couldn't have seen him then. The records show that he did not leave the garage to go to the Glen until about 7:30."

Mrs. Besanty, on the witness stand, said it was about 8 o'clock that night when she first observed Burch near Kennedy's cabin.

There will be at least twenty witnesses for the defense, according to Attorney Paul Schenck, Burch's chief counsel. Among these will be the alienists who have declared Burch is suffering from a form of paranoid dementia praecox.

ASK PERMIT FOR 1,500 ASSYRIANS TO ENTER U. S.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Pleas for special consideration for 1,500 Assyrians, refugees, now awaiting admission at our ports, or on the high seas, or about to sail for this country, were made today before the house immigration committee by Peter Benjamin and George A. Quigley of Connecticut and the Rev. Simon Yonan.

These Assyrians, the speakers said, have relatives and friends in this country who are willing and anxious to help them, should they be permitted to come in, and they urged that the necessary exception to the law be made in their behalf. Mrs. Oscar S. Straus of New York also appeared before the committee.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

There are really two Christmas Days this year. Why not eat one of your Christmas dinners downtown? Here you may have just what you wish—Turkey, Plum Pudding and everything. And bring the "Kiddies." We have plenty of high chairs.

The fact that so many people dine here REGULARLY proves North American quality

These sea-food specialties suggest why the North American (which serves three times as much seafood as any other Restaurant or Hotel in Chicago) is the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since the days of Rector's.

Half-dozen Cotuit oysters, on the half shell, with cocktail sauce	25c
One dozen fresh shrimps, with cocktail sauce	30c
Oyster Stew—made in an individual dish, with big New York Counts, an entire bottle of Certified milk and a big piece of butter	35c
Fried Oysters—7 big New York Counts, fried to your order, with Tartar or Chili sauce or ketchup	35c or we suggest
Halibut and peas—a great big portion	35c
Dark meat of Chicken with bacon, cream gravy or giblet sauce	55c
Chicken a la King	60c
Breast of Chicken, (all white meat) with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce	65c
Tenderloin steak—a real steak	75c

Although our prices are low—far below the good restaurants and hotels who include "service" and must therefore charge for it—it is the quality of our food, and not our low prices, which has made this the most popular restaurant in Chicago. Often we are told, by those who dine here most frequently, that our food would continue to bring them regularly even though our prices were much higher.

After all the real test of a dining place is the number of people who dine there regularly. Who ever tired of Mother's cooking? No one. It always "hits the spot" because it is pure and wholesome. And when you find the same people dining at the same restaurant day after day, and sometimes several times a day, it means they don't get tired of the food. And that proves the food is really good.

The North American Restaurant has a larger "established clientele" than any other good restaurant or hotel in Chicago. Thousands of Chicago's best people dine here every day. Many of them dine here several times every day. It is certain they would not do that if the food was not to their liking.

And although you can't get any better food anywhere our prices are actually low. So why pay more elsewhere? Our prices are low because they are based on the actual costs of food—we never charge what we could get based on established "Bill of Fare" prices. Here you don't pay for superfluities. You pay only for the food you eat plus the mere cost of preparing it. You get big portions of the food you like best anywhere from 40 to 60 per cent less than other good restaurants or hotels must charge to include "service."

Unless you dine at the North American you can't possibly know how good it is.

If you haven't tried it you can't know what a good breakfast you can get here at a small price

ULES SMASHED Y MERIT BOARD O BOOST BATTIS

y Hall Pet Permitted to Take Examination.

yor Thompson's merit board has d the way to permanent promo- and reward to Roy James Battis, red by civil service employés to most successful and tyrannical e city hall organization's River- ticket salesmen.

ttis has served as a "temporary" litical chief clerk in the city con- r's office for two years. Thanks e commission's ruling, he is now e for permanent promotion over heads of twenty civil service clerks have served the city for from n to twenty-five years.

ports that Battis, backed by "Jim- Rea, Lundin-Thompson commit- an from the Thirty-second ward, "Milt" Severinghaus, who has t of the city hall printing contracts, all set" to head the eligible list thrown city civil service employés a furore of commingled excitement disgust.

Adds Insult to Injury.

We knew this administration does give a rap for civil service, but didn't expect even the Lundin- mpson crowd to add insult to in- by trying to jam Battis, the man held us up for Republican sub- ptions and Riverview tickets, into a l service job," one head clerk said erday.

rit employés assert that Battis reprimanded by Controller Har- a few months ago for attempting aise his own pay $2,000 a year, has legal right to take the examination that in promulgating a special rul- for his benefit the merit board ated the state civil service law as as its own rules.

le V, section 2, of the commis- s rules reads:

Promotional examinations shall be when the next lower rank, ther in the same or a lower grade etermined by the commission, con two or more eligible persons de- of taking the examination.

hould not more than one eligible date register, or should all candi- fail to pass, an original entrance ation shall then be held."

Twenty Head Clerks in Line.

re are twenty head clerks—the lower rank, in this case—in the ervice. Yet the commission saw fit to throw down the bars and open the examination to all comers, whether civil service employés or not. This let Battis in.

"I have worked twenty years for my right to take an examination for a chief clerkship," one head clerk told a TRIBUNE reporter. "Now the commission violates its own rule and opens the way for a political favorite to step in ahead of me."

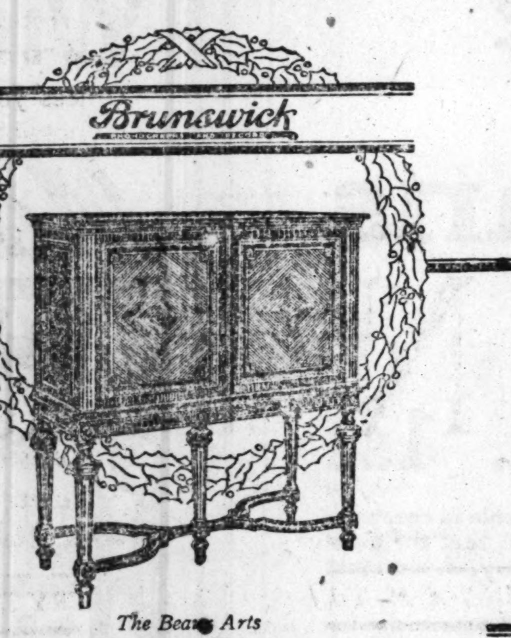
Make This a Brunswick Christmas



The Beaux Arts Finished in Walnut

Style 210 Finished in Adam Brown or Red Mahogany and Fumed or Golden Oak

Plays All Records

Brunswick plays all makes of records without attachments. This means that with a Brunswick in your home you can enjoy all the great artists, regardless of the make of records for which they record.

This is accomplished by the Ultona —a part of The Brunswick — not an "attachment."

The most economical and enduring Christmas gift you can buy is a Brunswick.

It is the one gift that will please all the family, from grandmother to the baby.

You can obtain one on terms to suit your convenience, so no large initial outlay is required.

Three Popular Brunswick Models

Note that The Brunswick costs no more than an ordinary phonograph. Note also its exclusive features. Then come in for a demonstration. You will not be urged to buy. But after hearing a Brunswick, we know you will never be satisfied unless you own one.

Any Brunswick dealer will be glad to demonstrate the Brunswick for you without obligation.

Style 117 Finished in Mahogany or Oak

Sweeter Tone

Another exclusive Brunswick feature is the Oval Tone Amplifier or horn, made entirely of wood and moulded like a fine old violin. It is responsible for much of the wondrously beautiful Brunswick tone.

RECORDS SHOW HOW DRIVES ON VICE PREVAILED

Offenses Reduced 50% in Decade.

This is the seventh of a series of articles on the reform in the vice situation which has been accomplished not only in Chicago but in practically all American cities during the last dozen years. As one looks back upon what was thought only a short tme ago to be the unavoidable evil of open prostitution one is astounded at the great advance made, particularly since 1910. Although this advance is practically nation-wide in the United States, in Europe vice is tolerated to as great an extent as ever. The eighth and concluding article in this series will appear in an early issue.

BY JOHN KELLEY.

[For 33 years a police reporter in Chicago.]

If any one doubts that moral conditions in Chicago have not improved in the last decade let him examine the records of the Morals court.

During the year 1914 more than 12,000 men and women were arraigned before this tribunal. Last year the number of persons arrested for immoral acts was about one-half of the 1914 record.

Nearly 6,000 of those arrested in 1914 were fined. In 1921 fines were imposed on 1,718 persons in the Morals court.

Compare 1,029 to 184.

Now take the records of the House of Correction and the jail. In 1914 the number of persons committed to these institutions for acts against public morality were 1,029. In 1921 only 184 persons were given like punishment for the some offenses.

Since 1913 about 200 persons have been arrested for pandering, 75 per cent of whom were convicted. Fines and imprisonment followed.

When discussing the morals of Chicago the foregoing figures are significant.

These improved conditions have been brought about through the efforts of several reform organizations, aided by the Chicago Real Estate board and especially enacted laws for the prosecution of vice promoters. The organizations engaged in this work include the Committee of Fifteen, the Chicago Law and Order league, the Illinois Vigilance association, the Juvenile Protective association, the Girls' Protective bureau, and the Hyde Park Protective association. This is not a complete list, but those enumerated are the most active.

Police Also Active.

The police department and the state's attorney's office also are entitled to their share of credit for the changed conditions. On their own initiative the police have raided scores of disorderly houses, putting them out of business and street walking has been reduced to a minimum.

What is known as the Kate Adams law was enacted by the Forty-ninth general assembly, and has been in force since 1915. Miss Adams, who was secretary to Superintendent of Police Stewart during the Busse administration, framed the law, which was intended as a remedial measure rather than a punitive one. It provided for the commitment of persons who are convicted of being inmates of houses of ill fame, or of soliciting on the street or elsewhere.

Another law that has proved a forceful weapon for the suppression of vice is the injunction and abatement act. This law became effective July 1, 1915.

Much Watchful Waiting.

The method of operation under the injunction law is to first procure evidence that a building or apartment is occupied for immoral purposes. Investigators for the Committee of Fifteen often watch a suspected building for weeks before they get convincing proof that prostitution is carried on within.

After sufficient evidence to warrant action has been obtained, a confidential letter is sent the owner or agent acquainting him with the investigator's report. Should the owner or agent ignore this notice he is served with a stronger one. There is no mistaking the meaning of the second notice, which says:

". . . You are hereby notified that if the nuisance complained of is not by you abated and wholly discontinued within a reasonable time after the expiration of five days, the undersigned, a citizen and resident of the city of Chicago, will file a petition for a temporary injunction and a bill in equity in the name of the people of the state of Illinois, in a court of competent jurisdiction in Cook county, perpetually to enjoin you and all persons from maintaining or permitting the said nuisance, and from using or permitting to be used said building, apartment, or place in which said nuisance is maintained for any purpose for a period of one year."

Results of Injunction Law.

Since the injunction law went into effect more than 1,500 notices have been served upon owners or agents of properties involved. During the year ended April 30, 1917, 30 per cent of those receiving the "confidential" notice that their property was being used for immoral purposes instituted correctional measures without further action.

The next year 76 per cent of those notified heeded the initial warning, and during the year ended April 30, 1919, 90 per cent promptly responded.

During the next year 86 per cent of owners or agents acted promptly to correct the conditions complained of, and last year's report shows that 75 per cent of the landlords upon whom notices were served complied with the committee's request.

In many instances the owners have proceeded against their tenants when they received information from the Committee of Fifteen that immoral practices were carried on in their properties.

[Koehne Photo.]

Robert McDougal has consented to run for president of the Chicago Board of Trade at the annual election on Jan. 9, 1922. He will have no opposition.

One of the Finest Cars Ever Built by The General Motors Co.

"The Car Complete"

Our Last 62 Sheridans

23 Sedans, 5 Roadsters, 8 Coupes and 26 Touring Cars Must Be Sold at Manufacturer's Cost—Before Jan. 1st

Why

Why must we sell these 62 Sheridan sedans, roadsters, touring cars and coupes at such exceptionally low prices? This is the reason:

The Chicago Sheridan Company is arranging to take on a new line of well known motor cars. We must make every preparation for space, and we must have this preparation completed and ready to take care of the new line which will be on display after January 1st.

We want every one who is interested in buying one of these 62 Sheridan models to know they can go to our service department at any time, and we will take care of them just as we have done so well with Sheridan owners in the past.

Nothing would have pleased us more than to be permitted to continue selling Sheridan motor cars, because we have always known that there never was any car on the market that could offer an equivalent in beautiful simplicity, dignity, comfort, luxuriousness and dollar for dollar economy in operation.

But, as we have said before, the Sheridan was found to be "too much car" for the money, and those who are able at this eleventh hour to take advantage of this exceptional value at the extraordinarily low prices asked will find that they have made a most profitable investment.

We must close out the last of these wonderful cars—all brand new—remarkable in construction and road performance—one of the finest lines of high-grade automobiles that the General Motors Company ever turned out—in fact, "too much car" for the money, if you must really know.

We have just fifteen days to dispose of the last few models. Here is an exceptional opportunity for those who want a very fine car that they can feel proud of in comparison with any other car. And the complete price at this time is hardly more than the manufacturer's cost of the body alone! Think of it! It is not a question of profits with us—it is a question of time. We must dispose of these 62 Sheridan cars without fail before January 1st.

From its earliest announcement, the Sheridan took its place among really fine cars. Its distinctive body lines, beautiful finish, attractive and lasting upholstery, graceful fenders—in fact, the good judgment and good taste used in the entire design, the construction and selection of materials, identify the Sheridan immediately as a car ranking among the best. Completeness in every essential detail, abundance of power, mechanically sound, assure constantly satisfying service, day after day, for many years.

Every Sheridan Car Backed by General Motors Guarantee

The Sheridan carries a one-year guarantee—a General Motors Company guarantee—the same guarantee that the General Motors Company puts on its other high grade cars—the Cadillac, Buick, Oakland, etc.

The General Motors Company guarantees to furnish parts for the life of the car. Anyone who buys one of these 62 Sheridans is positively protected; the General Motors Company's guarantee stands back of the Sheridan, and the Chicago Sheridan Company is equipped and ready to give the kind of local service that will be appreciated.

Just Once in a Lifetime

We doubt if similar circumstances will ever again come about which will permit anyone, anywhere, to offer an opportunity like this. There are going to be 62 people who will pick up the best bargains in automobiles that were ever offered. If we had the time, these models would be sold for 30% more, but, as we have said before, it is a question of time. We must dispose of these 62 models, and we are offering them at far below prices asked for ordinary automobile construction.

Come

If you are in the market now—or if you intend to buy a car in the near future—make it a point to come to the Chicago Sheridan salesrooms and see with your own eyes what a wonderful opportunity we are offering in a real car at a price you can afford to pay.

We cannot impress upon you too thoroughly that this is not an ordinary sale, but, on the other hand, it is an opportunity that will probably never come again. And, when all is said and done, in buying a Sheridan, which you can buy for very little money under these particular circumstances, you are getting as good a car as any on the market at any cost—you will be getting a car among the finest, just as good two, three, four or five years from now as it is the day you get it.

Don't put this off, because these 62 models will go quickly. So come today or this evening.

Not the College, It's the Campus That Costs.

DEAN POTTER.

Which is more important, a new Latin grammar or a water wave for the bobbed hair? Should dues to the literary society be higher than the monthly tax for the fraternity dance? Coeducation—does it mean a bill at the book store or the beauty parlor?

These are a few of the questions that Abraham Lincoln, in his quest for education, did not have to answer. But the co-ed at Northwestern university is having them called to her attention.

Hard on Father.

With tuition at Northwestern costing nearly $200 a year, with board and room at the largest dormitory amounting to $450 a year, with clothes, books, and transportation to be considered, no wonder the father of a co-ed is thinking serious of "pocket money."

The average monthly expense for incidentals for Northwestern co-eds is $21, according to a survey made by Dean Mary Ross Potter, published in yesterday's Daily Northwestern.

"Some of the girls have large monthly spending incomes," said Dean Potter. "Two co-eds spend $200 a month. One girl manages to scrimp along on $150."

111 Do Not Keep Accounts.

Of the girls in the freshman class, eighty-six keep a strict account of their expenditures, while 111 do not.

An investigation at Willard hall, Mrs. Shotwell's boarding house, Miller house, and other girls' dormitories, showed that many of the co-eds need more than $21 a month for pin money. Fifty dollars is more like it, they believe.

According to "Peggy" Richards, a prominent and conservative member of the senior class, the following budget is typical for girls with $50 a month spending money:

UPTOWN CHICAGO PLANS XMAS JOY FOR POOR KIDS

A choir of 150 voices and an orchestra of 100 pieces from Nicholas Senn High school will lead the community singing of Christmas carols when Santa Claus hands out his presents to the children of Uptown Chicago at the Broadway armory next Friday afternoon and evening. The affair will be in charge of the Kiwanis club of the north shore, with J. F. Cornelius, Dr. John D. Ellis, the Rev. Walter Scott, and Joshua Jackson heading the committees.

A forty foot Christmas tree will be put up tomorrow. The Boy Scouts of Uptown Chicago have sent out a call for old toys, which they will repair and repaint, and old clothing which they will have fixed up for the unfortunate children in the district.

School principals and teachers in Uptown Chicago are making up a list of children likely to go without Christmas cheer. These children will be taken to the armory to receive presents.

"A real Christmas for every kid in Uptown Chicago" is the slogan.

BRITISH HAND OF IRON FANS FIRES OF INDIA REVOLT

Unrest Grows as More Arrests Are Made.

BY THOMAS RYAN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BOMBAY, Dec. 17.—The general situation in India is growing far more serious owing to the arrests which the government is making to meet the boycott on the Prince of Wales. The northern cities where the prince has been visiting are seething with disloyalty and riots are likely to occur in Calcutta on Dec. 24, the date of his arrival there.

Natives who heretofore were ignorant of politics now discuss the nation's affairs with the keenest interest, while many who formerly were apathetic are now joining the boycott against the prince.

148 More Arrests.

There were 100 arrests in Delhi yesterday and forty-eight in Lucknow. Gandi's pictures are displayed everywhere and his influence is seen in all quarters. In Calcutta the students have struck and will not return to their classrooms until Jan. 3. One enthusiastic young volunteer offered a constable a garland of flowers if the officer would arrest him.

Many of the native leaders have been arrested, including Nehru and Jajpatrai. The authorities at Calcutta have been forced to convert a clothing factory into a prison, so numerous have been the arrests. The government hopes to forestall action on the part of the native congress which meets on Dec. 26 by arresting the chiefs. Viceroy Reading declares this policy will be continued for some time.

The arrest of Das, Ghandi's rival, seems to leave the congress in Ghandi's hands, which means that conformance with the latter's mystic theories and policy of nonviolence will be continued. All India is awaiting anxiously the decisions of the congress.

"MUTUAL FRIEND" NAMED BY WIFE IN SUPPORT SUIT

A "mutual friend" was named as the woman who won the affections of Fred L. Dehnert, member of the Syne-Eagle Trading corporation, sugar brokers, in a suit for separate maintenance filed in the Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Bertha A. Dehnert, 3910 West Jackson boulevard.

Mrs. Dehnert alleges her husband was entertained frequently by Mrs. Josephine Goss Lueders, in her apartment at 217 South Central Park boulevard. Mrs. Lueders, she relates, was her friend as well as her husband's.

When Mrs. Dehnert learned of her husband's visits she questioned him and alleges he admitted he had transferred his affections to their "mutual friend."

Dehnert earns $13,000 a year, the bill relates, and receives over $7,000 additional in commissions. It is stated he promised to increase the allowance for his wife and their daughter, Helen, if she would divorce him.

HOUSE PASSES $20,000,000 BILL TO FEED RUSSIA

Talk of Economy and U.S. Needy Ignored.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—A bill authorizing the President to expend $20,000,000 out of the funds of the United States Grain corporation for relief of the distressed and starving people of Russia was passed tonight by the house, 114 to 51.

Opponents of the measure fought it to the last and forced a roll call on the ground that the vote as announced did not include a quorum of the house. The roll call resulted 181 to 71 and the bill now goes to the senate.

There had been two solid hours of debate during which a flood of eloquence was let loose on the argument that the starving children of Russia, regardless of the bolsheviki ruin that had brought about their distress, should have their cry for bread silenced with American food, when a new fight was started over proposals to tear the bill to pieces.

Madden Talks of Economy.

Protesting against the use of funds for the people of any foreign nation, Chairman Madden of the appropriations committee, said it was easy to vote a tax on the backs of the American people and cry at the same time for economy.

When the time came to receive amendments more than a score of members, jumping to their feet, demanded recognition. In the midst of the flood of them Representative Goodykoontz, Republican, West Virginia, stepped forward with a new paragraph which would direct the president to spend $20,000,000 for relieveing distress among the "starving, hungry, and unemployed citizens of the United States." It was howled down on a point of order.

Amendments Fare Badly.

After that, amendments were set up in rapid succession only to be knocked down. About all that was tacked on to the original bill was a direction that grain for the Russians be purchased in the United States and sent to Russia in American bottoms, and a direction that a report of all expenditures be made to congress by the end of next year.

The house refused to include Armenia in the area to which relief would be sent.

Piel Brothers to Fight Anti-Medicine Beer Law

New York, Dec. 17.—Piel Brothers, brewers, filed an application in the United States District court here today for an injunction restraining State Prohibition Director Day and other federal authorities from interfering with the manufacture and sale of beer for medicinal purposes.

The petitioners asked the court to declare the anti-beer bill unconstitutional on the ground that it involves the confiscation of private property without due process of law.

The application will be argued Dec. 21.

GERMANY MUST BUILD AMERICA GIANT ZEPPELIN

New Airship to Be 600 Feet in Length.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The United States navy will fly a giant German dirigible, which the German government is to build for this country, from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst naval station, it was learned authoritatively today. The state department was advised in a cable dispatch from Ambassador Herrick at Paris of the decision of the council of ambassadors to require Germany, which is under penalty for having violated the terms of the treaty of Versailles in destroying Zeppelins, to construct for the United States, without any cost whatsoever to America, an airship of the L-70 type.

The air vessel will be used by the American navy exclusively for experiments which will show the possibilities of commercial aeronautics and commercial aviation in the United States. It will not be devoted to any military or naval use, and cannot be included, according to naval authorities, in the armament of this country.

Station Will be Razed.

When the airship is completed, about eight or nine months hence, the station in Germany in which it is to be built will be razed. American naval experts are going immediately to Germany to supervise the building of the airship.

The L-70 for this country will be about 600 feet in length. It will be a dirigible of 70,000 cubic meters, or two and one-half million cubic feet. Its home in this country will be the Lakehurst naval station, which was built for the ZR-2.

Article 198 of the treaty of Versailles forbade Germany to keep any Zeppelins. Under Article 202 Germany was required, when the treaty came into effect, to deliver all her dirigibles that could either take the air, or that were being built, or that could be assembled, to the allied and associated powers.

America Asks for Zeppelin.

When the time arrived for the distribution of the dirigibles, it was found that on June 23, 1919, Germany had destroyed five Zeppelins and on July 25 she destroyed two more.

The American representative of the council of ambassadors expressed a desire to have Germany construct for the United States an airship of the same size as the two L-70s that had been allotted to France and Great Britain and that the shed in which it was to be constructed should not for the time being be destroyed.

MME. TROTZKY SHUNS RUSSIA'S FREAK FEMINISM

Fire Eater's Quiet Wife Tells Remarkable History

BY HELEN AUGUR.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, Dec. 15.—Mme. Trotzky, the first woman of Russia, the quiet, gently bred wife of the fire eater of the soviets, has just told me the remarkable story of her life.

ALEXANDRA KOLONTAI.

Mme. Trotzky sat behind her orderly desk in the soviet department of museums telling me her story bit by bit, under protest that all this was unimportant. Her tilted nose, her brown eyes with their depths of humor and earnestness, and her useful little hands all lent themselves to her narrative.

"I began my rebellion young," Mme. Trotzky said. "While I was still in the gymnasium I became one of the 'intelligentsia' who at the beginning of the century were putting their moral strength behind the cause of the workers and peasants. When I went to Geneva in 1901 to study the exact sciences, I found it uninteresting to gaze into a microscope when the town was full of refugees from the czar. You know the group —Lenin, Lunatcharsky, Zinoviev, and most of the others now at the head of the government."

Marriage to Trotzky.

In 1903 the young student met and married Leon Trotzky in Paris. He had just escaped after a year's exile in Siberia and was a journalist, writing for revolutionary journals."

The early months of 1905 found Mme. Trotzky and her husband both in Petrograd, working feverishly for the onrushing revolution.

"I went about making propaganda among the workers, so eventually I was arrested," said the quiet little woman. "It was before the birth of my son, Leo, but they kept me in the tribunal prison for six months without trial, while the first attempt at a revolution crashed tragically down about our ears. Then, when I was finally released, there was my husband, imprisoned for a year."

New Escape from Siberia.

When her husband was again exiled to Siberia, she stayed alone in Petrograd with her boy. Then Trotzky escaped to Vienna, and she joined him. A second son, Serge, was born in 1907. From 1917 on Mme. Trotzky has been a "first lady" of Russia. But her two boys live with their parents, because she does not share the opinion of some of the feminists of the country that children should be brought up in a public institution. In fact, she does not share their views on most subjects.

"Extreme feminism is a fantastic thing in Russia today," she insisted. "We have few women so far who are qualified to do any public work. I believe that women with special qualifications and training should have their profession. But the physical difference between men and women has destined them to different roles in life, and there are certainly kinds of work that women should not attempt to do at all.

Lack of Sex Unity.

"American women should realize the peculiar lack of sex solidarity that characterizes Russian women. The Russian woman stands, not with her own sex, but with her husband. She has always worked at his side in field and factory. She thinks in terms of the family, not in terms of herself as 'the enslaved part of the race.' She is no more enslaved than the man, for she is his mother and his wife."

"What do you think of the Russian feminist movement that Alexandra Kolontai is so enthusiastic about?"

There was a sudden flash from Mme. Trotzky's brown eyes.

"The Russian feminist movement exists in the mind of Kolontai, and nowhere else," she said with spirit. "There is no movement here which is coming from the women themselves, and I doubt if there will be one in this country."

"Well, what did the revolution do for women?" I asked.

"I believe there has never been a social change that did not benefit women equally with the men," Mme. Trotzky said. "After all, a social gain is a human gain. Whatever liberates men must also liberate women, and vice versa."

"Merry Widow" Sad

LINA ABARBANELL.
[White Photo.]

While greetings of the merry Christmass season are ringing on every side next Friday there will be sounding in the ears of Lina Abarbanell, original "Merry Widow," only the rap, rap, rap of the auctioneer's hammer and his strident "Going, going, gone," as he sells the beautiful things in her home at 1513 Hinman avenue, Evanston.

The household effects of the comic opera star of "Mme. Sherry," "The Princess," and other productions, as well as "The Merry Widow," and her husband, Edward Goldbeck, writer, are to be sold to satisfy a judgment for $4,000.

"She could not get over her lavish spending habits acquired when she was paid a salary of $1,000 a week," her creditors told the court.

But the sound of the auctioneer's hammer will be only figurative, for Miss Abarbanell is singing merrily in a New York show.

SOVIET TO PAY ALL DEBTS, BUT HAS BIG OFFSET

Claims Czarist Assets Seized After Revolt.

BY PEABODY SWIFT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1931: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The soviet has requested the allies to call a conference to discuss Russia's economic reconstruction. If Premier Briand agrees an allied round table talk will take place early in the new year.

The announcement followed a long interview today between Prime Minister Lloyd George, Sir Robert Horne, and Leonid Krassin, the head of the Russian trade delegation to London, at 10 Downing street, at which M. Krassin told the prime minister the conditions on which the soviet will recognize both the pre-war and wartime czarist debts.

What the Soviet Offers.

From an authoritative Russian source it has been learned that the Russian proposals will be as follows:

1. Russia will recognize the pre-war and wartime czarist debts and will cease from all forms of anti-capitalistic propaganda.
2. In return the allies must recognize the soviet and give compensation for all the czarist assets seized outside of Russia by the allies on the outbreak of the revolution and also compensate the soviet for damages done by allied armies taking part in intervention, including the American forces at Archangel and Vladivostok after the revolution.
3. An adjustment must be made whereby the wartime czarist debts be proportionately divided between soviet Russia and the new republics of Esthonia, Latvia, Lithonia, Finland, and the Bessarabian government, all of which were a part of the Russian empire at the time when the debt was contracted.
4. The soviet will refuse any allied demands to change the present form of government in any way, such as introducing a constituent assembly.

Soviet May Send Mission to U. S.

The soviet states that the allies in 1914 agreed if the war was won that Russia would get Constantinople and the straits as its share. It states that the allies agreed that all parts of the Russian empire would be considered inviolate and would be protected by the allies. It is stated that these conditions have not been fulfilled, and the soviet says it will demand compensation for their nonfulfillment.

It is stated that an allied conference is confidently expected to come out of the Lloyd George-Briand discussion. Efforts are now being made to secure permission for a Russian delegation, composed chiefly of soviet authorities who were former czarist capitalists, to visit Washington and lay the Russian plans before the United States.

"This Great Book in Such Compact Form Is Simply Superb!"

INDIA PAPER MAKES THE

so light in weight that you can easily lift it and move it about—and yet there are 44,000,000 words, 30,000 pages, 15,000 illustrations and maps in it.

ANYTHING that we might say as to the advantages of the Britannica printed on India paper could not be put stronger and more convincingly than in this paragraph

By a Big City Merchant

"I bought the Britannica to use. I expect to get out of it in dollars many more times than I paid for it. I know what a wonderful book it is for anyone who uses it. India paper makes it so light, so convenient, so inviting, that one can't fail to read it frequently. You say the Britannica printed on India paper is 'five times more valuable' than on ordinary book paper. I should say 'a hundred times more valuable.' This is based on my own experience.

"I owned a set of the old Britannica on heavy paper, but I didn't read in it four times a year. It was too heavy; I never had much inclination to look up anything in those big, bulky books.

"I've had the new Britannica, printed on the delightful India paper, less than six months. I use it CONSTANTLY, looking up whatever I want to know, sometimes reading as many as four and five articles a night."

This experience is repeated over and over in the case of owners of the Britannica, for of the 225,000 sets already sold more than 200,000 were India paper sets. The use of this wonderful linenlike paper for printing the world's most interesting and most comprehensive book of knowledge was inspired by the thought that it would increase the handiness of the Britannica—hence, increase its real value to those who possess it.

You, no doubt, know what a remarkable work the Britannica is—an inexhaustible fund of facts and information. Its highest practical value to you or anyone else depends, of course, upon its actual, frequent use.

YOU WANT THIS MARVELOUS WORK—the most complete and authoritative that ever came from the printing press, and you ought to have it on genuine India paper. 200,000 people have purchased sets printed on this delightful, thin but opaque India paper, which has made the Encyclopaedia Britannica infinitely more usable, because the exquisite volumes are no larger or heavier than your magazine. India paper has literally been the means of converting the great wealth of information in the Britannica into a usable, get-at-able form. The sets of the popular Handy Volume issue are offered at unusually low and attractive prices and on very easy terms of payment. We believe the prices of the Britannica are within the reach of everybody.

What the Britannica Will Do for You

Think of the Britannica as an investment, and consider whether you know any other way of investing the same amount of money, or ten times the amount, that will yield such large returns in profit and pleasure.

The Britannica will stimulate you to improve your education, whether or not you've had a college education. It will furnish you with a teacher of any subject you wish to study.

It will give you the answer to the thousand and one questions prompted by the morning paper, lectures, sermons and books. It will make everything you see, read and hear more interesting.

It will enable you to lay out a plan of education for your children and keep abreast with their studies.

You Have 15 Months to Complete Payment for the Set

Can you afford to be without the Britannica? Don't delay—send the coupon at once. This will bring you our beautifully illustrated 136-page booklet, which gives you evidence of the everyday practical value of the Britannica. Cut out the coupon, sign it and mail NOW.

A Bedroom at Versailles

The Bedroom shown here was that of Louis XIV, who, in 1660, was married to Marie Therese; the bed is on a platform with back to a wall which is arched and made of gilded stucco hung with Tapestry. The canopy and bed is gilded wood hung with the finest silk embroidery. Over the bed is a majestic figure of France surrounded by war tropies with two cupids drawing away curtains—this was the work of Nicholas Couston. Over the arch, on either side, are two allegorical figures—Messengers of Jupiter; over and above the corniche are six canvases by Valentine, representing the Evangelists; on either side of the bed are paintings——one by Raphael, the other by David. The Balustrade, in the original, was of silver; the marvelous lace cover was executed for the Queen's bed—it is interlaced with monograms of Louis XIV and Marie Therese.

The chairs are of Louis XIV period, fine needle point and exquisite coloring.

The rug has a background of royal blue designed with the monogram of the King among the flowers in brilliant colors of September.

This bed contained the remains of Louis XIV—called, "The Sun God and Creator of "Versailles"

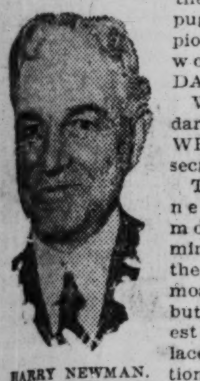
ATHLETES DEFEND SELVES ON PRO CHARGES

SHOULD DEMPSEY BOX HARRY WILLS FOR WORLD TITLE?

Pugilistic Question That Needs Solution.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Behind a thick curtain which surrounds the heavyweight pugilistic championship of the world is the DARK SECRET!



HARRY NEWMAN.

What is the dark secret? Or, WHO is the dark secret?

The question never will be more than of minor interest to the natives of Samoa or of Yap, but of vital interest to the populace of those nations which confess pride in possessing a true conception of genuine sportsmanship.

The DARK SECRET—and it is dark, is Harry Wills—Wills, the giant Harlem Negro, fighter and longshoreman. There is the dusky secret!

Is Dempsey Legitimate Champ?

Jack Dempsey today is the acknowledged heavyweight champion of the world, conqueror of Jess Willard, Fred Fulton, Georges Carpentier, Frank Moran, Bill Brennan, Billy Miske, and a score of other fighters.

He never has fought Harry Wills.

Is Dempsey a legitimate heavyweight champion?

Will the Manassa mauler ever fight Wills? Should they fight? Where? When?

Which is the better man? Why?

The questions are of minor interest to the natives of Samoa, but you, a fight fan, are keenly interested.

Is it likely that the white champion will throw a little light on the dark secret?

Is There Discrimination?

These are days when one who is interested in boxing wonders whether or not a fight between a black man and a white man is ethical, sane, and in accordance with the accepted idea of modern sportsmanship.

Is the Negro discriminated against in boxing? Is he allowed fair play—an even break?

Not many years ago it was not uncommon for mixed fights to be held. Several colored fighters held world's championships. Is it likely that another Negro will attain the highest honors in his pugilistic division?

At present all of the championships are held by white fighters! When will another colored boxer be given an opportunity to fight for a title?

Who Would Promote Match?

There's another dark secret connected with this question.

There is no state in these United States which will authorize a mixed fight.

Those who govern boxing hold that fights between white and black boxers are not to be permitted. No bodies which govern fights will countenance a scrap between the black and white. Are they just?

Another matter: You will find no promoter in the world who is so situated that he is able to bring together Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills and offer a suitable purse to the winner.

No promoter is anxious to take the risk. They declare that mixed fights are out of fashion—sadly passe. The public would not pay to see such a battle, they declare. Interest has waned in mixed fights.

Foreign Fighters Wecomed.

Yet every day in the rings of New York City foreigners of every description fight with boys who were born and reared in the United States. Chinese, Mexican, and Turkish boxers have appeared in fights in this city against white scrappers.

Yet the Negro in New York has no chance to meet a white fighter.

We asked Tex Rickard if he would promote a Wills-Dempsey match and the coy Tex said that he would not care to have anything to do with it, although Rickard promoted the Johnson and Jeffries bout more than ten years ago in Reno, Nev.

"I do not think that there is a promoter in the country who would care to gamble with such a bout," Tex said. "I am sure that there is not a state in the Union wherein boxing is legalized that would stand for the match.

Would It Kill Game?

"There is absolute fear that a match between the big black men and the big white men would serve to kill the game.

"I think that it would be a great fight—that between Dempsey and Wills—but so far as I am concerned I do not think that there is any demand for it.

"The Johnson-Jeffries fight came close to killing the game and proved to my mind that the American people do not like the idea of a black champion."

Rickard concluded by saying that he had too much at stake to risk a chance with such a fight.

A member of the New York state athletic commission, which governs fights in this state, threw up his hands in horror when asked if there would be any objection to a Wills-Dempsey fight in this city.

Not a chance in the world, was his comment.

Jack Dempsey at present is without a formidable opponent. The public which pays the freight will not stand

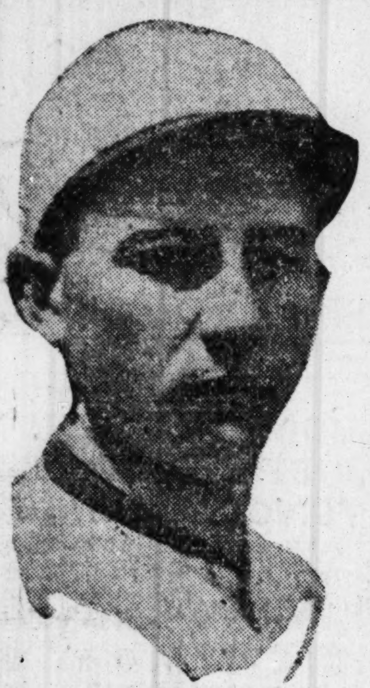
COMING BACK



VIC ALDRIDGE.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

VIC ALDRIDGE, promising young pitcher, who was released by the Cubs three years ago, now is the much-sought object of dickers with the Los Angeles club by officials of the Bruins. Vic made a great record on the coast and would look sweet in a Cub uniform. Although many other big league teams would like to grab him from the Cubs, the deal to bring Vic back here is practically settled.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

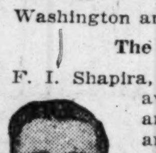
The Question:

Would you attend boxing and wrestling in Chicago if the new athletic board lifts the ban?

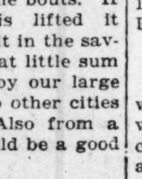
Where Asked:

Washington and Dearborn streets.

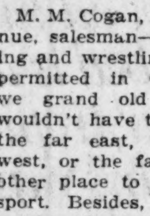
The Answers:



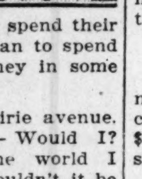
F. I. Shapira, 1600 North La Salle avenue, salesman — I am in favor of boxing and wrestling in Chicago, and would be glad to attend the bouts. If the ban is lifted it would result in the saving of a neat little sum of money by our large sporting public, as trips to other cities would be unnecessary. Also from a business standpoint it would be a good thing for the city.



M. M. Cogan, 1406 South Albany avenue, salesman—If boxing and wrestling were permitted in Chicago we grand old sports wouldn't have to go to the far east, the far west, or the far some other place to see the sport. Besides, I would much rather see strangers spend their money here in Chicago than to spend my own hard earned money in some other city.



Nathan Caine, 5329 Prairie avenue, salesman — Would I? I'll tell the world I would. Wouldn't it be great, for instance, to see a Johnny Buff-Pal Moore bout at the Coliseum and not be bawled out by your better half, as is usually the case when you leave home for a couple of days to attend a fight? The sooner the ban is lifted the better.



John Kevlin, 5400 Harper avenue, auto business — Boxing and wrestling are healthful sports, and if conducted honestly should be permitted not only in Chicago but in all cities. I have always been keenly interested in athletic sports of all kinds, have taken part in many events, and believe it is a good thing for growing boys. No need to worry about Chicago failing to attend bouts held here.

Philip McGee, 5400 Harper avenue, employment business—If it were put to a vote of the people of Illinois there would be no question about boxing and wrestling being permitted in Chicago. When there are fights in Milwaukee there are trainloads of fans going from Chicago. A lot of other people would go, too, if they could afford the cost.

Buff Is Offered $20,000 to Box in Manila Ring

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 17.—A local fight promoter today cabled Tex Rickard offering Johnny Buff $20,000 and all expenses for a twenty round contest here with Pancho Villa, bantamweight champion of the far east.

LAYTON WRESTS CUE CROWN FROM AUGIE, 180-171

Defense of Missourian Preserves Title Lead.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Augie Kieckhefer's reign as king of the three cushioners came to a conclusion last night, when John Layton of Sedalia, Mo., who had worn the crown for a year up to last November, defeated the local southpaw, 180 to 171, at Recital hall.

JOHN LAYTON.
[Walinger Photo.]

The finish of the third and deciding block was almost as sudden as a South American revolution, as Layton, coming along with a fine burst of speed, ran 2, 7, 2, and 1, and went out a winner by 9 points in 71 innings.

This run of 7 was as big as Mount Himalaya in value, coming at a time when both men were under great pressure, after struggling for inning after inning with only a few points advantage one way or the other.

Game Fight by Kieckhefer.

It was a great match between two of the greatest angle players of modern times.

Augie, who has made some fine recoveries in his career, had trailed during the first two nights' play, and Layton at one stage last night had built up a margin of 11 points, but then Augie began to gain ground. In the twenty-eighth session he got within one point of the challenger, only to see Layton again creep ahead.

Then at the thirty-seventh inning, amid a round of applause, Augie gamely tied the score at 149. Layton followed with one or two poor shots, and it looked for a moment as if the Chicago player would win, as he took a lead of three points. Here Layton grimly hung on and crept up, until at the fifty-first inning he drew ahead, 161 to 156, having made 48 points while Kieckhefer was gathering 36.

Lead Veers Again.

At the fifty-third inning Layton, with a quartet of doubles and a single, was in front, 165 to 162, but the Chicago player kept the pace, tied at 167 and again at 168, and in the sixty-seventh inning was leading, 170 to 168. Every shot was followed with breathless interest by the crowd. Layton ran two, and Augie made a single and missed a short angle shot.

Then Layton got out his siege gun and ran 7 by perfect shooting. He missed a good try for a hard bank, but left Augie nothing. Layton ran two more and played a safety, bringing his total to 179.

Layton Takes Total Gate.

Augie then missed and John got his needed point, which netted him the championship emblem, the stake of $500, the whole of the net gate, and a salary of $200.

Layton played a conservative game throughout and was especially good on his bank shots. The luck broke about even. Layton will next meet Alfredo De Oro, whose challenge came first on the list, in case Kieckhefer won.

B. B. CONFERENCE RESULTS IN NEW DRAFT PROPOSAL

New York, Dec. 17.—Following a conference between the advisory council of the major leagues and representatives of the minors here today, proposals were prepared for a revision of the draft rules. Baseball Commissioner Landis was instructed to present the proposals to those minor leagues which at the present time do not recognize the draft. The conference was attended by Judge Landis, President Heydler of the National league, Johnson of the American, Sexton of the national association of minors, besides Secretary Farrell of the latter body.

At the close of the meeting, the following official statement was made:

"The question has arisen what to do about the draft. It is a principle of baseball that the player must advance in his profession according to his skill. To secure to him and to the game this result, the draft rule was devised.

Here Are Nonconformists.

"Since the baseball reorganization of one year ago, certain leagues have declined to subscribe to the draft. These leagues are the American association, New International, Pacific Coast, Western, and Three Eyes.

"The National and American league clubs have authorized the commissioner to present to the leagues mentioned above, the following as a fair basis for the settlement of this grave question:

"1. One player of each AA or A club shall be eligible to selection or draft after the close of its season each year, the selecting club to pay in cash upon exercising the right the sum of $5,000 to the AA club or $4,000 to the A club.

AA and A Have First Rights.

"2. In the event any selected player is released by a major league club within one year of his selection the clubs of the AA and A leagues shall first have the right to secure his services upon paying to the releasing club one-half of the draft price paid by that club.

"The commissioner has a deep conviction that this is in harmony with the principle now subscribed to by the major and all minor leagues, and always to be borne in mind that the player's right and welfare of the game require that his services shall be available to clubs of the very highest classification."

JURY RETURNS SEALED VERDICT ON PLAYFELLOW

New York, Dec. 17.—Possibility that Playfellow, full brother of Man O' War, and alleged "windsucker" and "cribber," may seek to prove his worth during the next racing season under a neutral trainer loomed today. The jury which heard evidence in Harry F. Sinclair's suit to recover the $100,000 he paid James F. Johnson for the racer, on the grounds that Johnson had misrepresented the condition of the horse, returned a sealed verdict late today.

Whether the decision is favorable to Sinclair or Johnson, or, as was rumored about the court, is a report of disagreement, it was learned that further court proceedings are almost certain to follow. Both sides are prepared to carry the case to higher courts.

In the meantime, it was stated, Playfellow probably will be raced by a neutral trainer. If he makes good, he could easily earn enough in a season to defray his purchase price.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

PUBLICATION OF ODDS.

AGAIN the paid lobbyists and professional reformers representing organizations which would regulate our morals are attempting to force down the throat of a hesitant congress a bill to prohibit newspapers from publishing "any information that might encourage gambling."

Even our national lawmakers, who often in the past have been bulldozed by organized, self-constituted moralits, paused at the insistent demand for immediate action and postponed the hearing to give opponents of the measure a chance to be heard—fair play bitterly resented by the coterie which would determine a course of action for the rest of us.

What a menace to our national welfare to know in advance the prevailing odds that Dempsey would stop Carpentier, the price against the winner of the Kentucky Derby, the relative chances, as reflected by the betting, of Chicago and Wisconsin football elevens.

You may buy 10,000 bushels of wheat which you never see and never expect to see, you may buy 100 shares of Hokum Oil on margin, you may buy a raffle ticket at a church bazaar, and the nation is safe.

You may be taxed until you creak and your money wasted in extravagance and worse, the tariff may need revision, and there may be unemployment throughout the country, but taxation, tariff, and domestic prosperity should wait while a band of zealots seek to impose a measure, dangerous in precedent as affecting the liberty of the press, for which there is no universal demand.

Free expression I hold sacred

On one point I'll coincide:
I've found opposition futile,
And I'll tell the world I've tried.

Losers pay at rate of 1 cent per spot for value of winning card, except when ace wins each goat disgorges 15 cents to winner. Cards rated in usual sequence with all picture cards counting ten. If joker is out, its holder pays double to winner. In case of tie for high, the fish pay both lucky dogs the full penalty.

After the bets are settled for this round, deal the remaining four cards face down and play your regular game of draw with the joker wild.

YALE NOW USING CRIMSON PLAYS, HARVARDITE SAYS

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 17.—Yale played "Harvard football" during the last season, Maj. Moore, Harvard graduate athletic manager, stated today. He explained this as a result of an agreement between the universities to permit motion pictures to be taken at their annual games. Use of the movies for analysis of plays, according to the graduate manager, has made possible a clearer insight into the intricacies of play than was previously possible, and Yale having filmed Harvard teams in action, "that's the reason they are playing Harvard football at New Haven today."

TENNIS PLAYERS WHO WIELD PEN MAY LOSE "JOBS"

New York, Dec. 17.—Suggestions for radical changes in the manner of conducting championship tennis tournaments were contained in reports of subcommittees of the United States Tennis association, submitted to that body's executive committee today.

The most notable of these suggestions contemplates "seeding the draw" at national tournaments, and forbidding tournament contenders to report the games in signed daily newspaper articles.

Championship Dates Suggested.

Championship dates for the coming season were suggested as follows:

June 26, inter-collegiate championship, Merion club, Philadelphia.
July 10, men's clay court tournament, to be awarded by Western association.
Aug. 21, national doubles, juniors, etc., Longwood Cricket club, Boston.
Sept. 1, challenge round, Davis cup, West Side club, Forest Hills, L. I.
Sept. 8, men's singles, veterans' singles, etc., Germantown club, Philadelphia.

Recommendation also was made that such Davis cup ties as shall be played in this country be held during the first three weeks of August at one or more of the following cities: New York, Chicago, Newport, Boston, and Philadelphia.

Other Cities Get Events.

Other championships allocated without dates include:

Women's singles, West Side club.
Women's clay court championships, to either Buffalo or Cleveland.
Indoor tourneys—Men's, New York; women's, Longwood of Boston.

The treasurer's report showed that the national association received the following amounts as its share of the net profits for 1921 titular tournaments: National singles, $14,000; doubles, $3,000; women's singles, $5,100; Davis cup challenge round, $16,000, and Davis cup final at Newport, $1,700. Several of the preliminary Davis cup ties lost money.

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 17.—The Washington and Jefferson football team, scheduled to represent the east at Pasadena Jan. 2 against University of California, is a fast organization, and its strength is greatly underestimated, said Andy Smith, California head coach, on his return from the east today.

"I expect them to give California a hard tussle," Smith declared. "I have not decided as yet what style of game California will play."

JOIE RAY LIKELY TO TURN PUGILIST IF NOT CLEARED

Olympic Cracks Explain Big Expense Accounts.

TITLE MEETS

CHAMPIONSHIPS of the Central A. A. U. were awarded for the coming season at yesterday's business session here, as follows:

Indoor track and field championship, March 24, Broadway armory, Chicago.

Basketball, heavyweight and 135 pound tourneys, awarded to Logan Square A. C. at Broadway armory.

Boxing championships—Not awarded.

Wrestling championships—Young Men's Hebrew association.

Handball championship—Detroit A. C.

National handball championship—Milwaukee A. C.

Swimming championships—Split up between Detroit A. C., St. Paul, Great Lakes Naval Station, Illinois A. C., and Milwaukee A. C.

Five of the greatest amateur athletes in the country—Joie Ray, Frank and Jo Loomis, Loren Murchison, and Jackson Scholz—yesterday defended themselves against charges of professionalism before the registration committee of the Central A. A. U. here. The athletes, all of them of Olympic fame, were charged with filing exorbitant expense accounts for trips to compete in eastern meets last year.

JACKSON SCHOLZ.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Ray, Jo Loomis, and Murchison appeared personally before the committee in defense of the charges, while the others were represented. The athletes denied their expense accounts were exorbitant, and the committee, after hearing the evidence, announced that it would make its report to the National A. A. U. registration committee for final action.

Not Guilty, Dean's Opinion.

Charles Dean, former president of the Central A. A. U. and a member of the registration committee, said that it was his personal opinion that none of the athletes were guilty, but he declined to say what recommendations the committee would make. The athletes, if found guilty, may be suspended or declared professionals.

The diminutive Joie Ray, holder of seven world's records in the middle and long distance runs, may become a professional boxer if his amateur standing is annulled. Ray has engaged in amateur boxing contests, winning the Central A. A. U. title in the featherweight class. The little runner weighs about 125 pounds, and his admirers have urged him to become a professional boxer.

Ray May Take Up Boxing.

"I don't know what I shall do if they declare me a professional," Ray said. "I like boxing and might take it up. I have boxed twenty to twenty-five times as an amateur and have not been defeated. I am only 26 years old now.

"I do not see how they can accuse me of being a professional. They allow us $7 a day while we are on trips, and every one knows that it costs $5 a day in any first class hotel. How are you going to eat on $2 a day?"

Ray plans to compete in several big eastern meets this season if he is cleared of the charges. He denied that he had retired from athletics.

Frank Loomis Now Coaching.

Frank Loomis, a noted hurdler and sprinter, already has become a professional and is a coach at a college at Hastings, Neb. Jo Loomis is a member of the Chicago Athletic association, while Murchison and Ray are competing under the colors of the Illinois Athletic club. Scholz, a former University of Missouri sprinter, is competing for the Detroit A. C.

The final action on the charges against the five men probably will not be known for some time, as the case has already drawn the attention of the present National A. A. U. administration composed of eastern men, and the latter are watching with interest the disposition which their home district will make of the cases of the widely known stars.

Indoor Events Allotted.

The selection of city or district commissioners to have charge of A. A. U. affairs in their respective districts, the decision to give entire control of meets to committees, instead of the whole Central A. A. U. organization, and the awarding of indoor championship events by the Central A. A. U. were actions taken at its special meeting in the Hotel Sherman yesterday afternoon.

Frank W. Blankley of the Illinois Athletic club was chosen to be the first commissioner of the Chicago district. He will select a committee which will have charge of A. A. U. affairs in Chicago.

Under the new regime, each city in the Central A. A. U. territory will be counted as a district, with a local commissioner in charge of district affairs. This is expected to increase interest in local amateur athletics, and take some of the burden off the Central A. A. U.

Dean to Rule Track Sports.

Instead of all styles of competition coming before the entire central organization, as before, each governing committee will have complete supervision of athletics in its field. Thus Charles A. Dean, who heads the track and field committee, will have charge of all track and field meets in the central district. The district commissioners named were:

Chicago—Frank W. Blankley.
Milwaukee—John H. Gourley.
Detroit—Charles H. Brennan.
Duluth—J. Denis Deighton.
Grand Rapids—H. S. Conlon.
Lansing—L. D. Burhans.
Peoria—A. T. Griffith.
Flint, Mich.—H. D. Simpson.
Minneapolis—R. G. Watts.
St. Paul—E. O. Hoppe.

Here Are Committee Chairmen.

The chairmen of committees are:

Track and field—Charles A. Dean, Chicago.
Swimming—Norman Ross, Chicago.
Basketball—William E. Brougham, Detroit.
Handball—A. J. O'Connor, Milwaukee.
Boxing—Walter H. Liginger, Milwaukee.
Wrestling—Harry Berz, Chicago.

Athletic records—Clayton Everett, Chicago.
Handicap—Frank A. Martin, Chicago.

William H. Thompson, Chicago.

GOLFERS WANT BRITISH MEET HELD IN MAY

New York, Dec. 17.—The executive committee of the Professional Golfers' association has voted to request the British Professional Golfers' association to hold its annual open tournament in May instead of June, starting in 1923. It also was decided to revert to the old system of holding qualifying rounds for the national open in various sections of the country instead of taking the first thirty-one in the qualifying round and the titleholder in the national open, as was done last year.

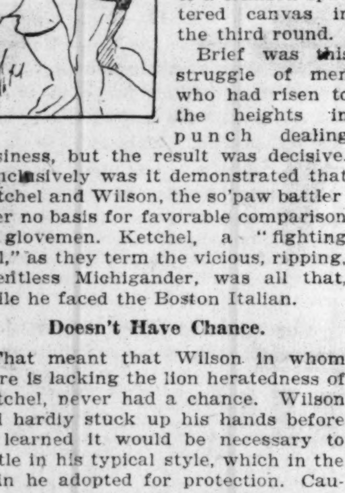
This is the third of a series of stories describing mythical battles between stars of the ring who never met. Some of the boxers of the past were wonderful performers as have been some of those who later achieved fame. Many arguments are caused by the effort to compare the boxers of the past with those who starred in later years, and these stories are meant to convey what might have happened had such contests been possible when the contestants were in their prime.

BY RAY PEARSON.



Walla Walla, Wash., Dec. 17.—[Special.]—Turning loose a whirlwind of brain shocking punches, under which no human could stand, Stanley Ketchel, the Fighting Demon of Michigan, answered the question of middleweight supremacy by crashing Johnny Wilson to a crimson spattered canvas in the third round.

Brief was this struggle of men who had risen to the heights in punch dealing business, but the result was decisive. Conclusively was it demonstrated that Ketchel and Wilson, the so'paw battler offer no basis for favorable comparison as glovemen. Ketchel, a "fighting fool," as they term the vicious, ripping, relentless Michigander, was all that, while he faced the Boston Italian.

Doesn't Have Chance.

That meant that Wilson in whom there is lacking the lion heratedness of Ketchel, never had a chance. Wilson had hardly stuck up his hands before he learned it would be necessary to battle in his typical style, which in the main he adopted for protection. Cautiously he sauntered to midring with the first clang of the gong. Evidently he expected Ketchel to come tearing in and swinging wildly with both hands, and Johnny sacrificed aggressive action in order to solve a way to meet the attack.

But Ketchel didn't do as Wilson expected him to do and in his failure to rush madly into action he "crossed" the Italian right at the start and gained a mental advantage of some consequence. Stanley allowed Wilson to take the lead away from him and the first punch, a right stab to the mouth was landed by Johnny. Johnny stuck across a couple more right jabs without a return and for the first two minutes of the round he was traveling nicely. But Ketchel hadn't started. Stanley seemed content to poke a few desultory wallops to the body, but as the session neared an end he opened fire with steamy punches to the midsection.

"Poison" in Wallops.

When Ketchel put the "poison" in those wallops it was the beginning of the end for the Italian. He was hurt and through as an offensive battler. Ketchel's fusillade forced him around the ring and he stalled, blocked, and legged it to escape. He did escape the inevitable for the time being, but ringsiders could see the finish wasn't far off. Ketchel hopped to his toes, crouched, swung into a shift, and awkwardly tore after his rival. Crash went left and right swings to Wilson's body. Then the bell rang and gave the Italian a badly needed respite.

After a minute's rest Ketchel tore out of his corner to finish what he had started. The Ketchel now in action was not to be denied and Wilson adopted self-preservation tactics, stalling, blocking, and breaking ground, to break the force of Stanley's vicious attack. Ketchel battered Johnny with body punches that stung and with the round half fought switched his attack to the head. He swung a terrific left to Wilson's jaw. Johnny was jarred to the heels and his eyes were glassy. But he knew enough to cover his jaws, while Ketchel returned to the relentless and punishing body wallops.

Finish Near for Wilson.

Wilson was lucky to last out the round, but the finish was near. Out of his corner Ketchel came flying for the third session. The battered and weary Wilson met him and then a shower of Stanley's punches to the body forced Johnny to sink to the canvas. He took the nine count, and as he reached his feet Ketchel once more tore in. This time Stanley shot for the jaw. Putting all the power of his frame behind it, Stanley drove his left to Wilson's jaw. The shot landed squarely on the chin; Wilson stiffened and fell on his face, and Ketchel's job was done. It was not necessary for the referee to count over Wilson. He was out, completely out.

FIGHT BY ROUNDS

FIRST ROUND—Both advanced cautiously to the center of the ring and Wilson was first to lead, popping a right to Ketchel's mouth. Johnny slipped over three more light rights to Stanley's face without a return. Ketchel was trying to get in close and in the next mixup pelted the Italian with lefts and rights to the body, receiving a left hook high on the head in return. Then Ketchel opened up a notch and paying no attention to Johnny's jabs, smashed Wilson in the midsection with lefts and rights. The punches stung and forced the Italian to take the defensive. He stalled, blocked and clinched and weathered out the round.

SECOND ROUND—Ketchel tore out of his corner and met Wilson with a shower of lefts and rights to the body. Johnny could find no way to escape the punishment except by backing away from the onrushing Stanley. The blows had all the power that Ketchel could put in them and Johnny, making feeble effort at retaliation, did no damage. Suddenly Ketchel shot a hard right to Wilson's jaw. The blow shot Johnny groggy, but he didn't fall. He covered his jaws and clinched and managed to finish the round.

THIRD ROUND—Ketchel, fresh and strong, raced out to meet Wilson and finish him. Johnny was weary and weak from the body punishment. But Ketchel would not be denied and rushed in with lefts and rights to the body. A terrific right over the heart doubled up Johnny and he fell to the canvas. He took the nine count and arose weakly. Ketchel was on him immediately, slamming lefts and rights to the body, then swung a hard left to Wilson's jaw. The punch had knockout power and Wilson fell on his face on the canvas. His seconds hopped into the ring and carried him to his corner.

The next story will describe an imaginary battle between Bob Fitzsimmons and Georges Carpentier.

Amateur Baseball League Believes in the "Early Bird"

SHOULD DEMPSEY BOX HARRY WILLS FOR WORLD TITLE?

for another Carpentier-Dempsey fight. The July 2 fight in Jersey City was an uneven affair.

It was a poor match in the first place, a fast and clever Frenchman, but terribly light, against an aggressive, tiger-like fighter, who was heavy and as swift as they come.

Fred Fulton dallied a few seconds with the champion and then knocked off work. The Gibbonses and Grebses are too small for Jack.

Will Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills ever fight? It is not likely, unless there is a marked change in the attitude of fight fans about mixed fights.

Mixed Fights on Alien Soil.

Mixed fights at present are permitted in England and France and sometimes in Canada, but is interest in black and white fights in those countries sufficient to warrant a heavyweight championship bout? No.

And when could such a fight be held? Not until those countries have recovered sufficiently from the tremendous financial strain which has placed upon them during the recent world's war.

Is Wills a better man than Dempsey? Many will argue that Wills would make it mighty tough for the champion.

Would the match be on the square? Several mixed battles have been "those things" and one was the Johnson-Willard fight in Havana, when Johnson tossed his title to the Kansas heavyweight.

A title means little to some Negroes. Dollars mean much more.

Wills Larger Than Dempsey.

In height and weight Wills has it on the champion. He is a clever fighter, rangy and shifty. Wills has floored many formidable opponents, but would his morale hold up when fighting Dempsey, realizing that he was pitted against the CHAMPION?

It no doubt would be a whale of a scrap.

There are any number of true fight fans who believe that there should be two heavyweight championships—one white and the other black.

They would crown Dempsey the white champion and Wills the colored titleholder.

Were you in a position to match the two men, would you do it, believing that a mixed fight would be to the best interest of boxing and a sportsmanlike affair?

Wills is undoubtedly entitled to a fight with Dempsey. He is the logical opponent.

WILL THEY EVER MEET?

The secret is still dark!

Following the completion of the new slide, which is expected to result in record breaking performances, plans are being completed for the annual championship meet of the National Ski association at Fox River Grove, Ill., on Jan. 22, under the auspices of the Norge Ski club of Chicago.

According to expert ski riders, the new slide is one of the best in the country. The platform at the head of the slide is 115 feet above the ground. The distance from the platform to the take-off is 365 feet, and the slide is ten feet wide. After the riders leave the take-off, they will be at least 125 feet in the air. The contestants attain a speed of about sixty miles an hour as they come down the slide.

The snowfall of last night will send many prospective riders to the slide today, and if the snow remains on the ground there will be plenty of riding and jumping before the championships are decided. John M. Ohs, who is receiving entries for the meet, already has accepted nominations from the Universities of Minnesota and Wisconsin. A club in Brooklyn has sent word at least five riders will be sent west, while Denver, Dillon, and Steamboat Springs Ski clubs of Colorado will send their best representatives. Organized associations in Wisconsin and Minnesota have signified an intention of being represented as usual, and efforts will be made to secure some of the best talent in Canada. Entry can be made with John M. Ohs, 4842 West Walton street, where all information can be obtained.

Following this contest Moore will return to Chicago to resume training for his eight round clash with Carl Tremaine of Cleveland at Memphis on Jan. 9.

Tom Gibbons, St. Paul heavyweight, dropped off in Chicago yesterday on his way to Grand Rapids, where he will meet Bartley Madden over the ten round route tomorrow night.

Defeat of Sailor Freedman by Lew Tendler in New York last Friday night was a bitter disappointment to Sailor's friends on the west side. Freedman was looked upon as the logical opponent for Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, but his decisive defeat by Tendler has taken the edge off the long sought contest with Leonard.

Belts won by boxers in previous amateur tourneys will be presented at the Arcade gymnasium this afternoon.

DEAL FOR STATZ AND VIC ALDRIDGE TO COST FORTUNE

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

BILL KILLEFER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Eventually Arnold Statz, the Pacific Coast league sensation, will be a member of Bill Killefer's Cup troupe. Just now he is the property of the Los Angeles club, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. Such was the information brought back from New York yesterday by President William Veeck, who added, however, that the deal would be closed as soon as a few minor details were arranged.

In addition to Statz, the Cubs are dickering with the same club for Vic Aldridge, who was released by the north side team three years ago, and has since built up a reputation as a great hurler. He was about the best moundman in coast ranks last season and several big league clubs have made overtures for his services, but there isn't a chance for him to get away from Chicago.

Costly Deal for Cubs.

While denying previous reports that Twombly, Daly, Deal, Ponder and York would go to Los Angeles in exchange for Statz, the Cub president admitted that the star outfielder would not be obtained cheaply. To use Veeck's expression, practically an entire major league team will be given. Whether Aldridge will be paid for separately is not known. It is safe to say, however, that the Cubs to get Statz and Aldridge will have to turn over players representing a value in excess of $125,000.

If Statz turns out to be half as good as baseball experts predict he is destined to take rank among the truly greats of the pastime. Jack Doyle, Cub scout, who watched the youngster during the coast league season, says that Tris Speaker in his palmiest days never covered as much ground in center field.

Figures Show Class.

Statz not only gets all around the outfield, but has a bullet-like throwing arm. On the bases he's a regular antelope, having pilfered fifty-two sacks in 153 games last season. He wielded his bat the tune of .310, which was a pretty high finish after hugging the 250 mark for the first six weeks of the season.

Aldridge finished fifth among coast league hurlers for the year. He was credited with twenty wins and ten defeats and an average of 2.16 earned runs per game. He is a right hander.

BOOSTERS PLAY OPALS TODAY FOR MID-WEST TITLE

When the Chicago Boosters and the Opals A. A. meet today at Dexter pavilion, 42d and Halsted streets, for the heavyweight championship of the Midwest league the fans will see two of the fastest teams in Chicago, as neither one has been defeated this year. The Boosters won the title last year and boast of the fact of having been defeated only twice in nine seasons.

The Opals have shown some class this year as well as in previous years. Each year they have reached the semi-finals only to be nosed out, but they have made several changes in their lineup, signing up such players as Hurley, Shanks and Elismer of the Styams-Foresters and Martin, Stahlman and Pond, formerly of De Paul university.

The league chose the pavilion for play so that the championship can be settled regardless of weather conditions. Lineup:

SOCCER TEAMS IN LOCAL FINALE OF NATIONAL RACE

This afternoon at Bricklayers' field, 35th street and Wentworth avenue, the Pullman team will battle the Simmons of Kenosha in the fourth round of the national soccer cup series, at 2 o'clock. These teams are the survivors in the Chicago district, and the winner will face the tough task of meeting the survivor in the St. Louis district, which will be the winner of today's game there between the Scullins and Ben Millers.

Pullman with its fast team, composed mostly of youngsters, appears to have a shade on the Kenosha players, but as the field will be covered with snow, some of the speed of the Carbuilders will be nullified. Jack Johnston will referee.

Four Peel cup games are carded and will be played if the grounds are in shape as follows:

Harvey and Rangers at Harvey. Swedish Americans and Sparta Union 1 at Riverview Park. Thistles and Corinthians at 47th avenue and 19th street. Canadian club formerly the Alvernos, and North Shores at Evanston.

REFORM WHERE IT IS NEEDED—IN WRESTLING

POUNDING MAT, THUS DEPICTING AGONY TRIUMPH DESPAIR
THE DEMON TOE-HOLD—VERY SPECTACULAR AND HOT STUFF FOR ADVERTISING—THE TEMPORARY "VICTIM" MAKES FACES NEVER SEEN IN THE MOVIES.
LETTING OPPONENT GRAB A TOE-HOLD IN TURN—THIS ALWAYS GETS THE CROWD
HEY! CUT IT OUT!
R. Edgren.
GETTING OPPONENT BY THE EARS AND BUMPING HIS DOME ON THE MAT IS GREAT ACTION STUFF AND GIVES A GENUINE LOOK TO ANY BOUT.
MAKING A SHOW OF TOSSING OPPONENT OUT OF RING IS A HIT, ESPECIALLY WHEN THE REFEREE RUNS IN REGISTERING FEAR AND INDIGNATION.
I'M AFRAID HE'LL KILL 'IM
HE'S MAD, ALL RIGHT
YEAH! GRUDGE MATCH!
I PITY THE OTHER GUY!
HE'S AWFUL SORE!
HARD LOOKS BREAK NO BONES, BUT THEY MAKE A HUGGING MATCH LOOK LIKE A DEATH GRAPPLE.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

WRESTLING is trying hard to "come back" in New York. If there was no boxing the grapplers might do fairly well, but the packed houses at ordinary boxing shows and half filled arenas when champions meet show that the public confidence is slow in recovering from body blows delivered by many fake matches in the recent past.

The New York boxing commission cleared out the fakers when it took control of that sport and began making rules to regulate it. Perhaps some of those new wrestling regulations are funny, but at least they are well meant, and they're effective.

The "hippodroming" tricks of "torture holds," in all their variety, have been barred. This makes it much harder to fake wrestling bouts. It also robs promoters of much advertising, for descriptions of all the toe holds and head locks and neck twisting devices used to give the nimble press agent plenty of material.

The Promoters' Viewpoint.

The attitude of promoters of fake wrestling bouts may be interesting. I was talking with one of these fat and prosperous gentlemen one evening and asked him why he didn't run matches "on the level."

"Listen," he said earnestly, "you don't get the idea. You look at it as a sport. It isn't a sport. It's a show. Very few wrestling bouts that are strictly on the level would be worth looking at.

"There've been a few, of course, like that battle between Tom Jenkins and Beel in a gymnasium on 42d street years ago, with about 200 spectators looking at the toughest match I ever saw wrestled.

"Hackenschmidt and Jenpins was pretty good, and Hack and Zbyszko, but even these would have been ten times as exciting if they'd hippodromed a little. In a real match the men have to be too careful. There's no spectacular stuff.

Real Wrestling N. G.

"Why, say, it would be an imposition on the public to take their money for real wrestling. What the public pays for is entertainment. In a fake match they get all the thrills. They get action. The wrestlers pull stunts they'd never pull in a real match. They're flying through the air, in and out of holds that look as if somebody was going to get killed every two minutes. Say, did you ever watch the crowd when one of my big fellows got a toe hold and went through the motions of tying the other guy's leg into a knot, him pounding on the floor and registering agony worse than any movie actor ever done? Did y' ever see 'em rise out of their seats with their eyes bulging out, waving their fists and longing to take a wallop at the man on top to make him let go?

"Did y' ever listen to 'em yell when the underdog broke the hold and grabbed the other guy's ankle and begun to twist his leg around like the stripes on a stick of peppermint? That's the stuff they want, and they wouldn't be happy without it. I give it to 'em, that's all. What if they are fake bouts? What the public don't know won't hurt 'em."

The New York state athletic commission has made a good start toward chasing these crooked promoters and crooked wrestlers out of the state. William Muldoon, chairman of the commission, was once a world's champion on the mat, in a time when wrestling had not been corrupted for the purposes of the wrestling trust. Mr. Muldoon knows wrestling when he sees it, and all the tricks of the game. So he has evolved some original schemes to make wrestlers "go on the level."

In the recent Zzyszko-Lewis match Mr. Muldoon learned that gamblers regarded the match as "fixed" for Lewis to win, and were getting down Lewis bets wherever they could. Possibly "the gang" had been assured that influence would be brought to bear on Lewis and Zbyszko, and it would be "all right."

But if so the "influence" failed to materialize. The commission required each wrestler to sign an affidavit that he would try his best to win. Then at the last moment the commission ruled that rolling and flying falls would count.

Gamblers Balked.

According to Mr. Muldoon, the gamblers made desperate efforts to have the commission change the referee selected and appoint one of the old wrestling referees. The commission refused to make any changes whatever in its plans. It is history that the bout was "on the level" and was satisfactory in everything except that the change in rules allowing rolling and flying falls caused some confusion in the minds of both wrestlers and public.

Most of the criticism that followed came from the gamblers and surething men, who lost money on the bout and were naturally disgruntled.

The New York commissioners have made a good start and are to be congratulated for their fight on the gamblers and crooks. In the future it will be easy to see what wrestlers are on the level and spot the gentry of the mat who prefer a crooked dollar to an honest dime, for these latter are going to stay away from New York and ply their trade in other parts of the country where the authorities are less active.

Save Sport in New York.

The action of the commission has saved wrestling in New York state, and incidentally has done a lot of good for boxing and other professional sports. Any sport is destroyed when it falls into the hands of gamblers. When betting becomes the object the sport immediately becomes crooked, for the gambler is a sure thing man always. He is not in any sense of the word a "sport," for he takes no risks. He wants his bet won when it is laid. Beside the average gambler the burglar and the yegg are honest gentlemen. At least they take some risk of paying with their lives or liberty for what they steal.

In the last few years wrestling bouts have been run largely by a "trust" or combination of promoters. Wrestlers were matched in different cities and won or lost according to a prearranged schedule. No one knows what sums of money were taken in by the gamblers who were "in the know" on these circuits, but the total must be something astonishing. As the bouts were fixed, it was easy to make them sensational in the extreme as spectacles.

Affidavit Business Good.

That's a great idea of Mr. Muldoon's to make every wrestler sign an affidavit that he'll do his best to win. It puts the wrestler in the hands of the law if it develops that he was party to a frameup. New York is going to become unpopular as a stamping ground for some of the gentlemen of the mat who have enjoyed easy picking in the unguarded past.

WRESTLER'S MANAGER FOR NEW MAT RULES

Ed White, manager of Johnny Meyers, claimant of the middleweight wrestling crown, has introduced a set of rules and regulations to govern professional mat contests which is meeting with popular approval.

Instead of the grapplers going to an absolute finish without any rest, Manager White has suggested a system of rounds, the same as in boxing. Each round shall be of ten minutes. One fall shall determine the winner. Length of contests shall be mutually agreed upon.

Curb on Seconds.

If no fall has taken place at the end of a given number of rounds the referee shall award the decision to the man who has been the most aggressive. There shall be two minutes' rest between each round, and each principal may be attended by not more than two seconds. During the rounds the seconds shall give no advice except by signal.

Manager White includes a rule which states that all class wrestlers shall be within six pounds' weight of each other, except in the heavyweight division. In order to be pinned, a man's shoulder must be squarely on the mat for at least four seconds.

Injured Wrestler Loses.

If for any reason a wrestler is injured and is unable to continue, his opponent shall be credited with a fall. Contestants in all bouts must post forfeits, half of which is to go for appearance and the other half to insure making of the weight.

Chicago Team Victor in Grade Meet at Sinai

The Chicago team, with 40 points, and White with 38, won first places in classes B and A, respectively, in the annual grammar school track and field meet at the Sinai gym yesterday. James White won individual honors in A division with 24 points and Hebert Cohen was high man in B class with 19 points. A total of 120 boys competed.

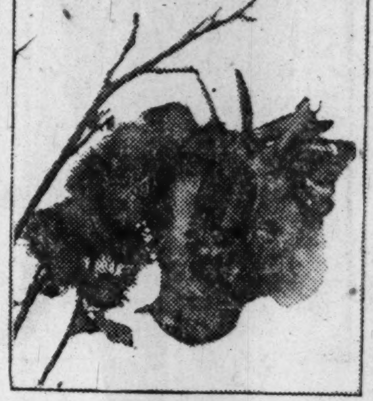
BIRD TRAGEDIES.

THE average observer who spends some time in woods or fields during the summer, and sees about him scores of song birds, happy, singing, and busy with nesting, building, or other duties, would rarely think of the number of tragedies that occur every year among the feathered folk. In the fall or winter we are more easily able to discover some of the tragic stories of the outdoors, for in the snow nature stories can be read like an open book. The way the weasel tracks and kills the rabbit; the sudden death of a mouse as an owl gripped it; the way quail died, frozen under a crusted snow bank—these are the kind of stories that are revealed by the winter's snow.

CAUGHT!



ACCIDENTALLY striking a cluster of burdock burrs, this little goldfinch was unable to free himself and died suspended in this fashion.

But occasionally there are tragedies which are the result of accidents, and we sometimes come upon evidence of the death of a bird or mammal which can be ascribed to an accident pure and simple.

An example of this can be seen in the Chicago Academy of Sciences, where there is on exhibition a goldfinch hanging (just as it died) on a cluster of burrs of the common burdock. The unfortunate little finch in some way became entangled in the gripping cluster and was unable to get free. Even after death the bird still hangs from the weed, mute testimony to the "stickability" of those burrs.

Alongside this tragedy there is on exhibition another example of a bird tragedy, with the sufferer another goldfinch. The bird died by hanging. Apparently while investigating an oriole's nest it got its head tangled up in a horse hair and strangled to death. We have seen an oriole become snarled up in a string and horse hair as it endeavored to work these materails into a nest, but a goldfinch getting entangled in a horse hair on an oriole's nest is rather difficult to explain.

STALEYS BATTLE CARDINALS FOR PRO GRID TITLE

Pro football fans look forward to the hardest fought game of the season this afternoon when the national champion Staleys meet the Chicago Cardinals at Cubs park. The battle starts at 2 o'clock rain or shine.

KEN HUFFINE.
[Press Illus. Photo.]

There is intense rivalry between the teams, and this has spread to their supporters. A big crowd of south side fans is expected to invade the north side, and more rooting is looked for than is usually noted at a pro game. The Staleys, having eliminated both the Buffalo All-Americans and the Canton Bulldogs for the national title, now hope to add the city championship to their laurels.

Stop Driscoll Is Cry.

Coach George Halas of the Staleys has been drilling the men to "stop Driscoll." The former Northwestern and Great Lakes speed marvel is considered one of the best players in pro football, and there usually is action when he gets going.

Both teams have fast and powerful backfields. Pard Pearce, ex-Penn star, will be at quarter for the Staleys, and Ken Huffine of Purdue will play fullback. Dutch Sternaman, the plunging, field goal kicking half back, will be in the game alongside of Pete Stinchcomb and Chick Harley, Ohio State's All-Americans, who alternate at right.

Last season the two elevens staged two games, the Cards winning the first, 7 to 6, and losing the second, 10 to 0. So the victor today will have the edge on the series. Probable lineup:

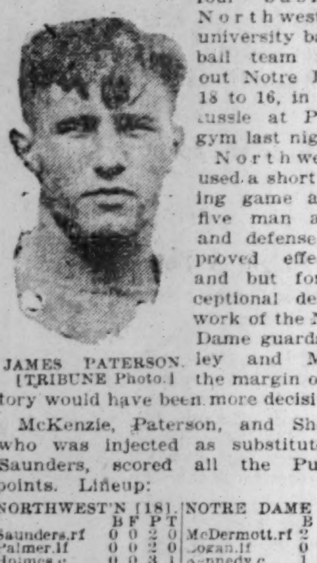
PURPLE TOSSERS NIP NOTRE DAME IN 18-16 TUSSLE



JAMES PATERSON.

Led by McKenzie, captain, who played a running guard game and sank four baskets, Northwestern's university basketball team nosed out Notre Dame, 18 to 16, in a hot tussle at Patten gym last night.

Northwestern used a short passing game and a five man attack and defense that proved effective, and but for exceptional defense work of the Notre Dame guards, Kiley and Mayls, the margin of victory would have been more decisive.

McKenzie, Paterson, and Sheerer, who was injected as substitute for Saunders, scored all the Purple's points. Lineup:

The Chicago Hebrew institute girls won their fourth game of the season yesterday, defeating the McCabe Memorials team, 26 to 4, at the C. H. I. gym.

SCORES 20 POINTS

"CHUCK" CARNEY.

CHARLES CARNEY, Illinois basketball captain, signalized his return to playing form in the game with Knox college at Urbana last night, scoring 20 points. The injury to the knee of the big Evanston player kept him away off form during football, and was the big problem around which Illinois basketball hopes centered.

PREP BASEBALL

NEW TRIER HIGH scored a cleanup yesterday, winning four games, two in the afternoon and two at night, on the Winnetka floor. In the afternoon the home heavyweights handed Harrison a 46-24 whaling in a bruising contest, the Techs being unable to stop the three-ply scoring combination of Roth, Anderson, and Leffingwell. The lights had a hard time winning from Harrison's midgets, 24-22.

The night's games resulted in twin victories over Lake View. The New Trier heavies won, 43 to 11, and the lights by 27 to 15. Nelson, with nine baskets, and Leffingwell, with seven, featured the big fellows' attack in the evening games. Lineup of afternoon games:

BUTLER QUINTET UPSETS MAROONS BY 16 TO 13 SCORE

MILTON ROMNEY.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Pat Page's Butler college basketball team added another victory over a Big Ten team last night by defeating Chicago at Bartlett gymnasium, 16 to 13. Butler defeated Wisconsin at Madison Friday, 26 to 20. The Indianapolis quintet went into the lead at the start of the Maroon contest and never was in serious danger of defeat. Butler led at half time, 10 to 6 and held the Maroons at a safe distance throughout the second half.

Brown an Accurate Thrower.

Accurate basket shooting by Brown, who converted seven of Chicago's fouls into points, was one of the features.

Romney played the best game for Chicago, and tossed three baskets from the field. Neither quintet displayed an advanced article of team play, and Chicago was woefully weak at its short passing game.

Chicago Alumni Wins.

Before the regular contest, a game was played between two teams composed of Chicago alumni players. The five captained by Birkoff won from Pat Page's team, 40 to 26. Lineup of the regular game:

FOR THE PLAYERS OF WHIST—By A. R. Metcalf.

LEAD "MAKES" THIS HAND.

ONE of the deals in the recent tournament at the Drake hotel was entirely a matter of the original lead.

The bid was one no-trump and the leader held K 10, 9, 7, 2 of diamonds As the cards were arranged, the lead of the ten was a winner. Dummy held knave and two small, third hand, queen and two small and declarer A, 8.

Had third hand held the eight the lead of the fourth best would have been equally effective. Transfer the eight to dummy and the fourth best lead wins while the lead of the ten loses.

The last time this play was made with the writer, the leader held a five card suit with king, ten, nine at the top and led the ten. Dummy held two small cards, third hand, ace and one small, while the declarer held four, including queen, jack, eight. The lead of the ten lost the game.

West secured nine tricks.

West expected to force some discards on the heart suit, but when the heart situation developed at trick three, he was obliged to start diamonds from dummy.

In order to make his contract and the game the declarer must make the nine of hearts in dummy. This could not be done unless south held both the queen and jack of clubs, and, accordingly, the declarer was forced to place both these cards in the south hand and lead a club from the dummy at trick ten.

OVERBIDDING HELPS FOE.

West secured a small slam.

The heart situation revealed by the opening lead showed that south must hold more than five hearts and both the missing kings. Playing carefully, the declarer was enabled to count the cards in the south hand exactly, and by the very pretty play of placing the lead with the king of diamonds, forcing a lead into the heart tenace in dummy, he secured a small slam.

WHEAT DECLINES DESPITE REPORT OF BIG EXPORTS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Old crop futures of wheat showed a heavy undertone a good part of the day and closed ¼c to ½c lower, with December leading, despite reports of a large export business which included considerable durum. Continued unfavorable crop reports from the southwest influenced buying of July and it gained ¼c for the day. Corn was firmer early and weaker later, with a net loss of ⅛c to ¼c, while oats were ⅛c to ¼c higher. Rye was off ¼c to ⅜c. Strength in Winnipeg was the feature of the wheat market, but it had little effect here.

The grain markets developed considerable irregularity the last week. Liquidation was on in December wheat and it closed 3½c lower while the May was off 2c in sympathy. July gained ½c, however, and closed around 3¾c under the May. Corn was heavy the greater part of the time and finished with net losses of 1¼@1⅝c, while oats were ¼c higher on the December due to buying by cash houses and ⅛c lower on the deferred deliveries. Bearish hog news and slow cash demand affected provisions and lard lost 17½@20c and ribs 12½c for the week.

News of Bearish Character.

With the exception of the filling of the Greek order for Manitoba wheat, with total sales in all positions of 2,250,000 bu. late Friday and yesterday, a good part of the news was rather bearish. The Northwestern Grain Dealers associations report on the three Canadian provinces, while showing a crop of 251,000,000 bu, or 57,000,000 bu less than last year, fell flat as a market influence, as it was based on the unrevised acreage, and traders who bought on it early were forced to sell out on a decline.

Dry weather continues in Kansas and Oklahoma, where moisture is most needed, and this had some effect on the July, but the undertone was easy a good part of the day. Local sentiment generally was bearish, and at the inside figures prices were off about 1c from the previous day's finish. The closing rally was due to short covering on the reports of a liberal export business and on week-end evening up.

There will be no moratorium for Germany, according to cables, much to the surprise of the trade, who have been figuring that that country would be a large buyer of wheat. Liverpool closed ¼d lower due to pressure of Argentine grain, but the Buenos Aires market was 1c higher to ½c lower, the nearby delivery apparently being affected by rain reports in the southern part of that country.

Premiums on Manitobas c. i. f. Buffalo were advanced 1¼c, as compared with the previous day, and Winnipeg December at the last was ¼c over Chicago, compared with 7c under early in the week. Liquidation continues in December here.

Corn Closes Easier.

Corn had a range of ¼@½c and Oats ¼@⅜c, corn closing slightly easier, while oats were firmer. Trade in both grains was light. Wet weather had some effect on corn early, but when wheat weakened pressure increased and the undertone was rather easy at the last. Country roads are reported as impassable in the central west, which checks the movement from the farms, but there is sufficient grain now in interior elevators and in transit to keep receipts liberal for some time. The basis in the sample market showed little change.

Rye continues to be dominated by the action of wheat and closed fractionally lower. A good part of the trade was in spreading between wheat and rye. Export demand slow.

Provisions in Better Demand.

Provisions were slightly easier early, but a better demand prevailed toward the last and the close was at the top, with net gains of 5@7½c on both lard and ribs. Trade was not large and mainly of a local character. Break in hogs toward the last had no effect. Cash demand is slow. Prices follow:

·WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

There was little in the character of buying of grains Saturday to create confidence among a majority of the holders. The figures were construed as moderately bullish and the local traders were active in covering shorts, while the leading shorts in December, May corn and oats were active in absorbing the offerings at wide spreads. There was buying of December and selling of May wheat at 5c difference or the same as on Friday, while the spread in corn was 6½c, or about the same as recently, and in oats there was changing in the way of buying December and selling of May at 5¾c difference.

The disposition of the trade is to sell on all bulges, and those who are watching the market closely are taking advantage of weak spots to do their buying. The big movement of corn, the largest at this time in recent years, is having a depressing effect. There was a liberal absorption of the May around 53c, but all buying orders were readily satisfied.

Board of Trade nominations for the election Jan. 7 so far are: President, Robert McDougal; vice president for one year, James J. Fones; second vice president for two years, John H. Jones; directors, James K. Riordan, H. J. Rumsey, J. W. Badenoch, Emil J. Garneau, Luther Dickey, and Royal W. Bell.

Reserves of wheat in the three Canadian northwestern provinces, after allowing 38,000,000 bu for feed, seed, and country mills, aggregate 31,000,000 bu, according to the Northwestern Grain Dealers' association's report. The total crop for the three provinces is 251,655,000 bu, of which 146,153,000 bu has been inspected to date, while country points hold 26,676,000 bu and there is 10,000,000 bu more in transit not inspected. Recent government report estimated the crop at 308,000,000 bu, against 233,000,000 bu last year; oats crop, 314,000,000 bu, or the same as last year; barley, 42,000,000 bu, or 11,000,000 bu more than last year.

In compiling the estimated crops in the three Canadian provinces by the grain dealers no attention was paid to the revision in the acreage as shown by the census returns. The latter was 4,500,000 acres in excess of the preliminary figures, and was mainly responsible for the recent advance of 17,000,000 bu in the government figures.

Corn receipts at Chicago last week were the largest at this time in over five years, being 5,506,000 bu, or 2,078,000 bu more than the previous week, and 4,356,000 bu in excess of last year. Primary receipts exceeded the previous week's by 3,302,000 bu, and last year's by 7,988,000 bu.

Eastern railroads have extended the period of reduced rates on grains and grain products until June 30.

A tightening in the supply of boxcars is reported by several of the leading western grain carrying roads owing to the heavy movement of corn. In a few sections of the west a slight let up in loadings of corn are reported. A railroad official says that whenever there is a prospect of a carload of corn being secured at any station, a car is sent there at once.

"When the government final estimate on the wheat crop is announced the market should show some strength if other factors are favorable to a higher price," said Clement, Curtis & Co. "For the remainder of the season our market will be more of a domestic affair and less responsive to the world news, unless the latter should take on a bullish tinge, which does not now seem probable with the large crops being harvested in the southern hemisphere."

"It is well to keep in mind that the relative position of supply and demand makes the price," said William C. Wiegand, with the J. Rosenbaum Grain company. "A prospective demand is a theory. It is insufficient to offset large supplies, whether they be visible or invisible, and the latter ordinarily outweighs the former. The wheat market needs an active demand."

The Quaker Oats Co. has had a good domestic and export business the last six months. At present there is a seasonal lull and its plant is working at 50 per cent capacity. It had a good supply of old oats carried over from last year's crop, and is buying more whenever offered. There is a little export business doing in Canadian oats, which are cheaper than the domestic.

Prepare Now to Take Full Advantage of Our January Offerings

THE investor is like the merchant—his surplus funds correspond to the merchant's capital—the problem is to apply both so as to bring the maximum return with safety.

Now, when business men are auditing their books to determine where they stand at the end of the year, the investor should do the same with his personal accounts in anticipation of the January investment period.

He should do this because the offerings of reputable houses this January will be exceptionally attractive. He will have the opportunity, perhaps for the last time, of securing 7% on the highest type of first mortgage bonds. For this reason, like the merchant who buys to the utmost when he can do so to the best advantage, it will pay him to place as much as possible of his available funds this January.

Equal to Our Offerings of Last July and January

In keeping with the unusually attractive selections, generally, this January, our own investment offerings will be exceptional—measuring up fully to our notable offerings of last July and January. Investors who recall them will appreciate what this means.

So, we advise investors to take stock of their surplus funds. See if you have any money earning less interest than you can obtain in our January list. Check up on interest that will be paid you, dividends and bonuses you will receive, maturing investments, etc. Add as much of these funds together as you can and hold them in readiness.

Our offerings will be announced soon. Wait until you see them before you finally decide. Or, better still, come in and see us now for advance information.

An Eighty-Billion-Dollar Business

The farm wealth of the United States is Eighty Billion Dollars. Farming is the basic industry. It is the biggest business in the world. Directly or indirectly, civilization depends wholly upon the farm.

The farm is the greatest of all collateral. It is immovable and indestructible. Farm Loans are in the front rank of ultra-conservative investments. They are the oldest investment, dating back 2500 years. Farm Loans have always yielded liberally in proportion to their safety.

This is best known by the experts who place loans for the great insurance and trust companies. They prove their expertness by getting the utmost return without loss. They do not experiment. Nothing tempts them. Legal restrictions further limit their choice.

These experts take nearly all the Farm Loans that can be had. They have not been urged upon the individual investor by wide-spread advertising or armies of salesmen. The result of this has been that many who should invest in Farm Loans have not done so.

Signs of an Important Change

Today, however, signs point to a change. Investors lately attracted by less substantial collateral are now turning toward the Farm. Forman Farm Mortgages and Gold Bonds make a strong appeal. They have a record of 36 years without loss to a customer. Forman investors are satisfied. They are without bother or worry. They have never taken over an acre of land on a Forman Loan.

Many invest with us who have never met us personally. They invest by mail. This is easily done. A request brings full information. The mail customer gets exactly the same treatment as those who come in person.

From $100 Up

Forman Farm Mortgage Gold Bonds can be had in any multiple of $100. Probably no security appeals so equally to the large and small investor. The widow with slight business experience, the business man, the salaried man or woman—all find that Forman Securities are preferable.

And now a novel plan has been developed. Those who see the advantages of monthly investing, without waiting for funds to accumulate, will want to know about it. This new Forman Plan is a vigorous stimulant to saving. It earns you 7% while saving, and gives you all the advantages of the cash investor.

We believe it is the best saving and investing plan ever developed. No matter what your investment condition may be, you will learn something much to your advantage by replying to this ad at once.

Reserve Bonds Now for January Investment

With the prices of bonds advancing as they have in the past few months, the investor who anticipates his January requirements will undoubtedly benefit by acting now, as the present scarcity of bonds, combined with the usual volume of January investment, will in all probably cause further advances.

The following bonds are suited to the requirements of the most careful investor.

7.50% Yield — The Intermountain Ry. Light & Power Co.
Bond Secured 8% Convertible Notes
Due Dec. 1, 1923 Denominations $100, $500, $1,000
This company serves 36 growing communities with electric light and power and earns over twice interest charges on all its funded debt. Due to the convertible feature of this issue, the purchaser can secure 7.50% yield for about two years, or, if advisable, he can convert into longer term bonds due 1945 at about an 8% yield. This is a very attractive feature as the buyer secures an option on a long term bond at today's prices.

8.00% Yield — Wilson & Co.
10-Year Convertible 7½% Bonds
Due 1931 Denomination $1,000
Fourth largest of the Chicago Packing Companies; backed by 67 years of success. Bonds convertible into common stock of the Company.

8.00% Yield — Troy Laundry Machinery Co., Ltd.
15-Year Sinking Fund 8% Bonds
Due 1936 Denominations $500 and $1,000
These bonds are the direct obligation of the second largest company of its kind in the world, a company which has paid dividends on its common stock for a period of 37 consecutive years. Write for illustrated circular.

Over 7% Yield — United States of Brazil
External 4% Sterling Bonds
Due 1945 Denomination £200
These bonds are the direct obligation of the United States of Brazil and are payable in English Exchange. Due to the present low price of English Exchange, they can now be purchased for $443 per £200 bond. Should exchange return to par, these bonds will have a value at maturity of $973.30.

8.00% Yield — Minnesota Electric Light & Power Co.
1st and Refdg. 8% Sinking Fund Bonds
Due 1940 Denominations $100, $500, $1,000
This company serves substantial and prosperous cities which are rapidly increasing in commercial activity, population and wealth. Earnings over twice bond interest charges. An excellent long term investment.

8.05% Yield — Toledo Trac., Lt., & Pr. Co.
1st Lien 7% Bonds
Due Dec. 1, 1922 Denominations $500 and $1,000
This $2,500,000 issue is secured by $4,200,000 First Mortgage 6% Bonds of the Community Traction Company, payment of which has been assumed by the City of Toledo. Earnings more than six times interest charges.

Shipping orders absorbed the 8,000 hogs received on the closing day of the week at steady to slightly higher prices, up to $7.25 being paid for load lots averaging 140@155 lbs. Only four of the regular packers were in the trade and about half the 10,000 carried over from Friday remained in the pens. Closing sales to local buyers were at 10c decline. Day's average price stood 35c lower than the previous Saturday at $6.80.

General depression featured closing trade in cattle and lambs, with prices lowest of the week and mostly $1.00 below a week ago. Average price of good beef cattle for the week at $7.10 equaled the low mark since March, 1912. Best lambs at the finish were quoted at $10.35.

Hog Run Is Large.

Receipts of hogs at Chicago last week at 238,200 were largest since the first week of February, and 12,200 larger than the ten year average, while shipments from Chicago at 114,500 were within 4,600 of the previous week's total, which was the largest on record. Estimated average weight of hogs reached 226 lbs, being the heaviest since last of October, against 223 lbs previous week and 229 lbs a year ago.

General average cost of hogs at Chicago last week at $6.90 stood only 15c above the low week in November, which was lowest point since December, 1915. Prevailing prices are $3.25 lower than the ten year average of corresponding week since 1910.

Strike Situation Unchanged.

There were no new developments in the strike situation at Chicago. Eleven of the thirteen packers were in the hog trade during the week.

Probable receipts of hogs for next Monday are variously estimated at 50,000 to 65,000. F. W. Waddell marked 50,000; Lester Armour, 54,000; B. Brittain, 55,000; R. W. Oake, 58,000; F. R. Burrows and F. Gehrmann, 60,000; J. M. Waters, 63,000, and R. C. Griffith, 65,000.

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

[Copyright: 1921: By Fairchild News Service.]

NEW YORK.—The spring season in women's apparel is not gathering the momentum in the wholesale trade that it has in other years at this time. Outstanding influences appear to be that buyers are following the recently adopted policy of not buying too far in advance of resales and the cloak and suit strike.

PATERSON, N. J.—Retail stocks of handkerchiefs are running low. Manufacturers are receiving reorders. Customary period for reordering is January.

NEW YORK.—Houses holding cambrics are having goods dyed in solid colors in preparation for the dress linen demand which is expected to break next spring. Some wholesalers plan to utilize airplane linens to be released by the British government.

NEW YORK.—Renewed demand for corsets is reflected in purchases by retailers. Sales of elastic girdles are also increasing. Lightest possible weights are wanted.

PATERSON, N. J.—Hosiery manufacturers are closely coöperating with shoe manufacturers relative to colors. Spring lines will match shoes in every possible color scheme.

PATERSON, N. J.—Smaller mills are curtailing operations. Fears are gaining that higher prices in the spring will restrict the market. No immediate shortage is expected, as it is believed there still are some distress lots to be disposed of.

NEW YORK.—German linen manufacturers are attempting to cancel orders placed by American importers owing to the exchange rate. Other manufacturers want orders confirmed at higher prices.

NEW YORK.—Advance spring orders for blouses are few. Individual orders so far, however, are larger than last year at this time. This indicates that retailers have greater confidence in the stability of wholesale prices.

MARIETTA, O.—The expected limit of 30 cents a pound for raw wool was exceeded this week by 3 cents per pound in sales of 17,000 pounds of delaine wool.

NEW YORK.—Credit circles throughout the country make no secret of the belief that there will be a reduction in the number of retail stores by February. High overhead and deflation is expected to clear the field for the stronger organizations.

NEW YORK.—The Cloak and Suit union now claims "several very important members" of the Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' association have settled the strike on the union's terms.

INCREASE CAPITAL STOCK.

The capital of the Dickinson Cord Tire company has been increased from $2,000,000 to $10,000,000.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Butter prices were weaker and ½c lower, with a moderate trade in the top grades. Eggs were taken more freely, both for fresh and storage, with good trading in the latter at 35c. Live hens sold at ½c decline, with a fair trade. Dressed poultry in good supply. Prospects are for colder weather, which will help trade. Potatoes moved fairly at recent prices, with arrivals only 33 cars. Fruit trade fair, with ample supplies of apples.

Frank Rice to Retire from Milling Trade

Frank B. Rice, for twenty years vice president of the Star and Crescent Milling company and active in the wheat trade as well as affairs of the Chicago Board of Trade, is to retire on Dec. 31. He is the last of the three big wheat experts, J. T. Templeton and C. B. Poerce being the other members having passed out of trade years ago. His son, Lawrence E. Rice, who has been active as a wheat buyer for several years, succeeds his father as vice president.

KRESGE DATE CHANGED.

Owing to a ruling of the stock exchange the S. S. Kresge company's common stock will sell "ex" the 34 per cent stock dividend on Dec. 31 instead of Dec. 16.

Manufacturing Toy Business for Sale

The B. Coleman Silver's Co. will dispose of their entire toy department, comprising finished and unfinished stock, materials, supplies and everything required for the manufacturing of the largest and most attractive line of doll beds, doll cradles, doll hammocks and their accessories, doll swings, doll stands, doll carts, etc., including good will, patents, customers, etc. While this branch of our business was started but a year ago, we have already opened accounts with one of the largest mail order houses, two of Chicago's largest and many smaller wholesale houses, and hundreds of retailers. The business is in full running order, and with but $1,000 investment for fixtures and machinery, and with proper attention, it can be worked up to from one hundred to several hundred thousand dollars annually, with a good margin of profit. Manufacturing experience unnecessary.

The only reason for selling is the physical inability of Mr. Silver (the sole owner and manager) to give both lines the attention they require; also want of space in our present factory. Inventory (now taking) between $10,000 and $15,000. Our references are Dun & Bradstreet's. Call personally.

In the Chicago Sunday Newspapers of Nov. 13th we inaugurated a plan of suggesting certain securities; Bonds, which we recommended as investments; Preferred and Common Stocks which were in our opinion selling below their value and which appeared to have price advance possibilities. These suggestions were revised each succeeding Sunday.

For the week of November 13th we recommended six stocks. On Nov. 20th our suggestions contained four additional stocks and a repetition of two given the week previous. Nov. 27th we suggested three other stocks and two which had appeared in our previous announcements. On Dec. 4th two additional stocks were suggested and two were repeated. For the week of Dec. 11th we presented four other stocks and one which had appeared before.

The five weeks' results show that substantial advances were recorded in each of the 19 stocks suggested.

Owing to the fact that this service has been largely appropriated by professional speculative interests, we have decided to reserve further suggestions exclusively for our customers. These suggestions will be published in our Monthly Market Letter, which will be mailed regularly without cost to you upon request to our service department.

STOCKS WEAKEN AS SPECULATORS TRY TO 'EVEN UP'

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

The New York Times.

New York, Dec. 17.—[Special.]—The highly professional character of the last week's movement on the stock exchange was illustrated by today's reactionary market. One of the professional speculator's traditions is that, whichever way he has been operating, he must "even up" at the end of the week.

The tradition has possibly some warrant in the possibility that good or bad news may come to hand on Sunday, with the stock exchange unable to adjust itself to the situation, but its real basis doubtless is the feeling that when prices are being moved about in no relation to the news, it is just as well to fix some recurrent date to wipe the slate clean again.

Small Declines Predominate.

Today's movement of prices was generally downward; some industrial stocks losing a point or more, but most of the day's declines being fractional, with scattered advances chiefly in the railway shares.

Comparisons of today's final prices with those of a week ago show clearly the nature of the present activities. Advances of 2 to 4 points have occurred side by side with declines which were equally large, and without any assignable reason for either. On the whole, any one anxious to draw conclusions might infer that the Washington conference and the Irish settlement were having their principal effect on the petroleum industry and the motor car trade.

Bond Market Turns Weak.

Of the bond market's changes for the week it is once more possible to say that, despite the general trend to somewhat lower prices, a very substantial number of noteworthy further net advances have been scored. Nearly all foreign bonds are higher than a week ago; so are most of the United States war loans.

Foreign exchange also ended the week with "evening up" of prices. Sterling advanced about 2 cents to $4.18⅜, which is nearly 6 cents below the high point of Monday, but 2⅝ above the low level of the subsequent reaction. If the week is taken as a whole, there will be shown from today's closing rates to have been not only a 3c rise for the period in sterling, but substantial further advance in rates on every other European market.

New York Bank Statement.

The New York clearing house bank statement today showed an increase of $74,036,000 in actual loans and a proportionally large increase in deposits. Net demand deposits were $98,310,000 greater. Reserve of member banks in the federal reserve bank increased $39,166,000 and surplus reserves were $26,756,390 higher. The treasury operations of Thursday were reflected in an increase of $58,631,000 in government deposits, bringing that item up to $99,189,000. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The weekly review of F. M. Zeiler & Co. says:

Interest in the local unlisted securities market was centered largely in the public utility issues, many of which established new highs for the year. Northern States Power Railway and Light securities were the most active, the common advancing sharply to sales at 90; the closing quotation of 88@90 represented an advance of 20 points for the week and the preferred at 86½ bid, 89 asked, was up 4 points. American Gas and Electric preferred was up 1½ points at 45½@46½. American Light and Traction was somewhat better at 110@110½, and the preferred improved fractionally to 90@91. The Cities Service issues recorded practically the only losses in the group, the common at 210@212 being off 6 points and the bankers' shares were off a major fraction at 23½@24. The preferred, however, was steady at 58½@59½. Pacific Gas and Electric preferred was traded in between 85@87. United Light and Railways common also registered a new high for the year, selling at 30½. The preferred was traded in at 69, ex-dividend $1.50.

Trading in the miscellaneous group was rather quiet, Butler Brothers being fractionally easier at 33¾@34½. Burroughs Adding Machine increased in activity, the majority of the late trading between 132 and 135. Consumers' common declined somewhat to sales at 6½, while the preferred was off a point at 63@66. Considerable activity took place in Moline Plow certificates of deposit, which advanced from 2¼ to 4, closing at 3¼@3¾. Northwestern Yeast continued in good demand at 315 with no stock offered. Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes continued in good demand at 24, with limited offerings at 26. Wahl preferred was traded in at 90½. U. S. Gypsum common was quoted 26@27, ex-dividend 5 per cent in stock and 20 cents in cash. McCord was erratic, selling as low as 3¾, with high sales of 4¾, closing 4 bid, 4½ asked. Creamery Package continued strong at 26½ bid, with limited offerings at 27¼.

The motor stocks were without feature. Goodyear Tire and Rubber, after declining to low sales at 11½, recovered to a close of 12½ bid, 13 asked, and the preferred 27@28. There was practically no interest shown in the sugar issues.

Anglo-American Mill Company
Mfrs. Community Flour Mills

Henry Ford says in the Review of Reviews for November

"A few decades ago, there were local flouring mills in the small towns. Then came patent processes, big mills, consolidation. The little mills were shut down. Now they are making small flour mill plants which will produce the same flour in very small establishments and we shall be returning presently to the old system of the local mill, supplying the local market. This will cut out another big item of waste transportation."

This Mill on Exhibition this week at Andrews & Co. Ground Floor

The complete flour mills made by this company enable small firms to produce nationally known flour right in their own communities at less cost than the big mills.

To date more than $20,000,000 worth of these mills have been sold, and the anticipated business is many times greater.

The original investment in this company was $10,000, increased later, through preferred stock (since retired) to $250,000. The net earnings since organization in 1910 exceed $1,300,000.

This modern invention, the Community Marvel, is on display at Andrews & Company, and should be viewed by persons interested in the march of progress.

The 8% Participating Preferred Stock issued by the Anglo-American Mill Company has many attractive features. Ask for circular.

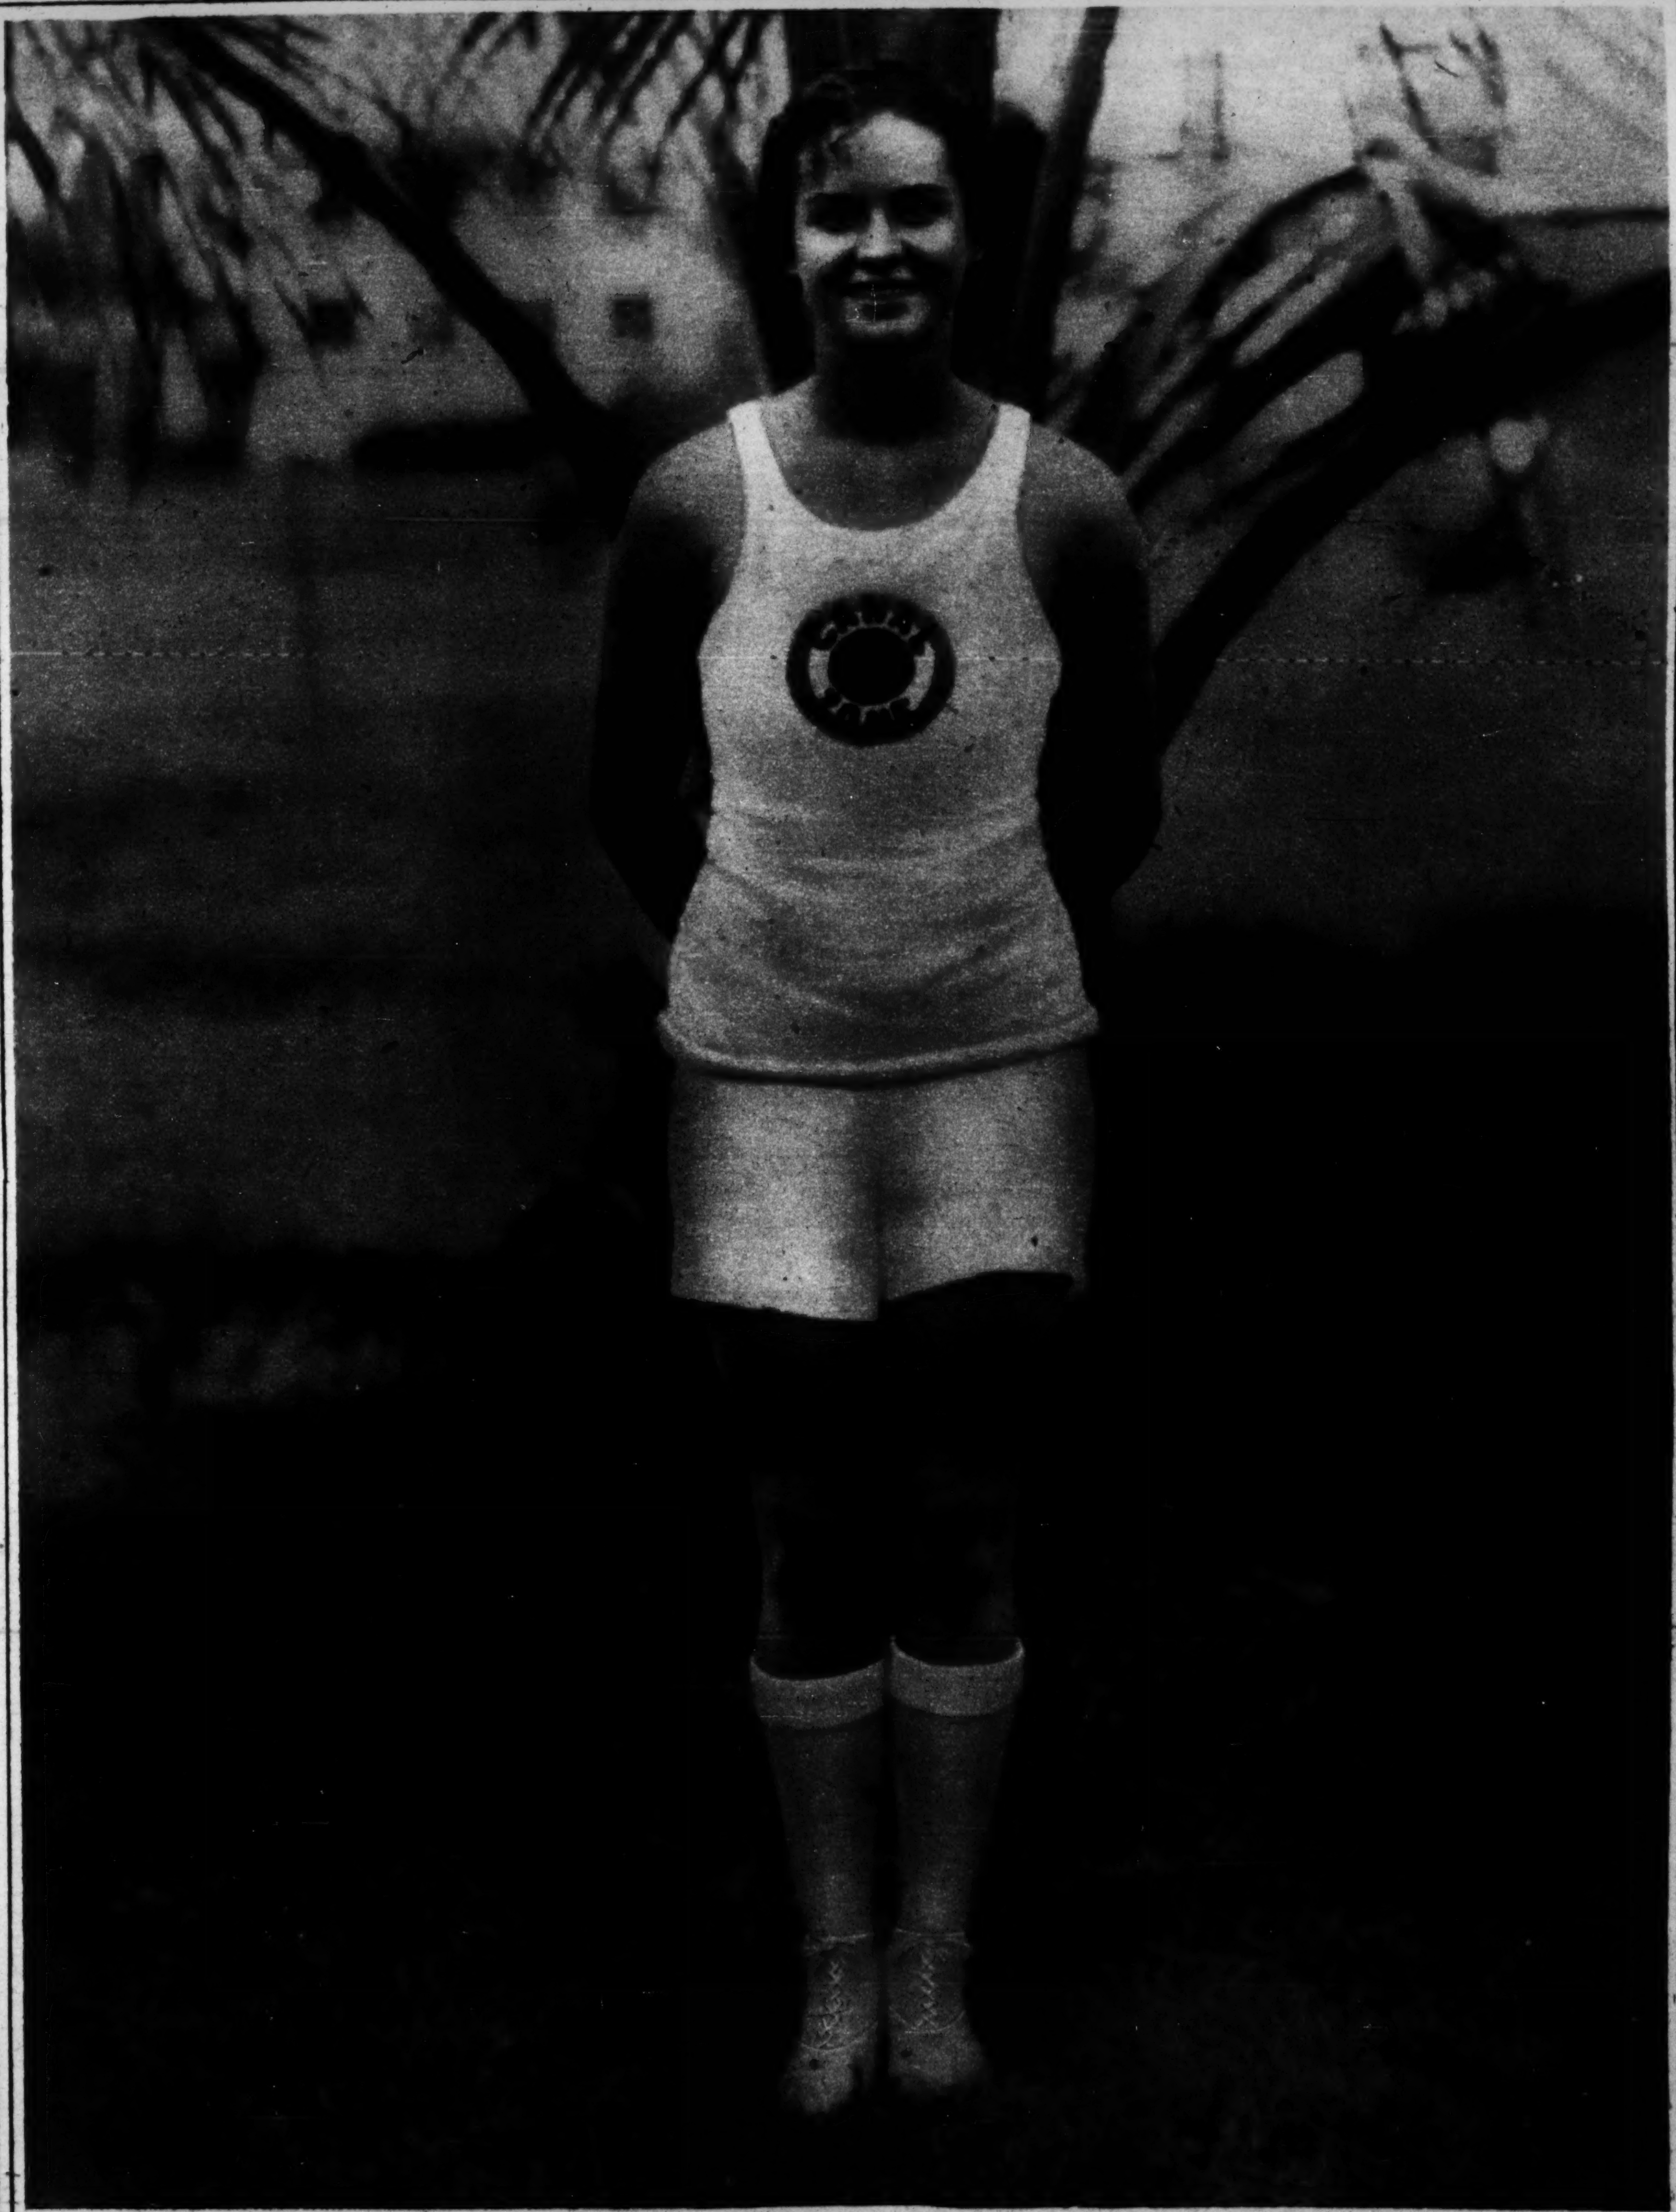
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

DECEMBER 18, 1921



ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST GIRL ATHLETES, if not the greatest, is the opinion that athletic experts hold regarding Miss Lona Rathbone. She is a member of the famous Red, White and Blue swimming team of the Panama canal zone; holds the women's championship in fancy high diving for the zone; is proficient in the standing and running broad jumps, and is a member of the famous Balboa high school relay team. She is also a beauty.

A Camera Story of the making of a great Cigarette

No. 3 of a series We have told you how the tobaccos for Chesterfield cigarettes are aged and mellowed for two long years. Now comes the blending. And of all things affecting cigarette taste, blending is second in importance only to the quality of the tobaccos themselves.

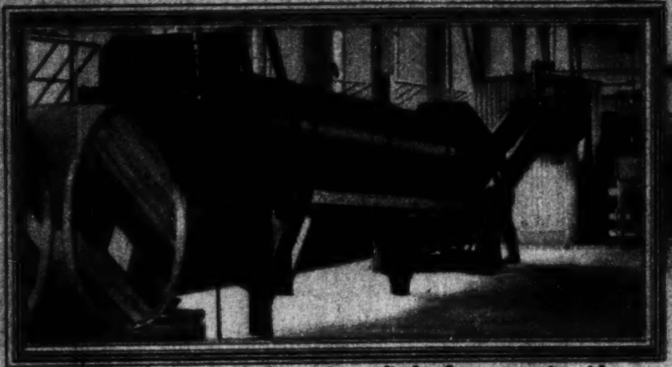
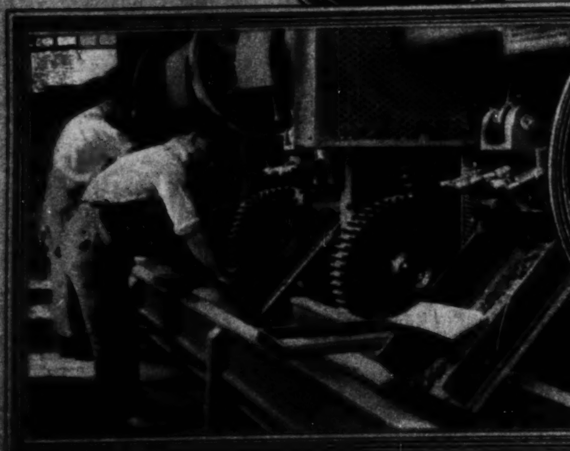
The Turkish and Domestic tobaccos are blended to a secret recipe—which cannot be copied. Our blenders balance these fine tobaccos, one against another, for aroma, for body, for taste. The balance must be right, the proportions exact, else the blend could not have that complete and satisfying Chesterfield flavor.

The different varieties of tobaccos, Turkish and Domestic, are taken from the hogsheads and bales, each in the correct proportion, and conveyed into the mixing cylinder.

(Right) A stemming machine which removes the backbone or stem of the leaf, leaving "strip tobacco" ready for manufacture.



Another view of the mixing cylinder from opposite side.



(Below) Cutting machines which cut or shred the "strip tobacco" as received from the mixing cylinder.

(Left) The shredded tobacco is fed into a cylindrical dryer where the flavor is "set" by high temperature. A second cylinder removes excessive heat and moisture.

"----And Look What I Got"

NO CHRISTMAS gifts are so acceptable to boys as genuine Patrick-Duluth Mackinaws and Sweaters.

No other Christmas gifts are so serviceable.

Patrick-Duluth Mackinaws are "bigger than weather." They are remarkable for their great warmth without undue weight or bulk. Every fibre is north country wool "from sheep that thrive in the snow."

Every operation in the manufacture of Patrick-Duluth Mackinaws occurs in Patrick mills and factories—the spinning of the yarns, the weaving of the cloth, the making of the garments. Small wonder that they always look so well and wear so long.

Patrick-Duluth Sweaters do not shrink, fade or fray at the elbows after a few months' wear. They are as warm as pure virgin wool sweaters can be made; yet they fit easily and comfortably, giving that freedom of movement which active boys demand.

All Patrick-Duluth garments have the famous green and black label signifying Patrick quality—look for it on your Christmas shopping tours. Or send for style book.

BEN TURPIN AND PHYLLIS HAVER, the adored of the comedy hounds, took a little time off between scenes of "Love and Doughnuts" to visit a neighbor's barnyard. Loaded with spoils bestowed upon them by the interested owner, they consented to "set" for their picture. —Mae Tinee.

F. W. HOHENZOLLERN AND HIS FAMILY recently visited Wilhelm Hohenzollern, the former German kaiser, at his place of exile, Doorn, Holland. The picture shows them on the point of leaving Doorn for Wieringen, the former crown prince's St. Helena, where Mrs. Hohenzollern and the children remained for eight days.

PRINCESS MARY OF ENGLAND, whose engagement to Viscount Lascelles has just been announced, is regarded by her countrymen as the perfect type of English girl. Her people are highly pleased that she has made a love match, with an English war hero as its central figure, instead of being married to some continental prince. The princess is 24 years old and a great favorite. She has an allowance of about $24,000 a year.

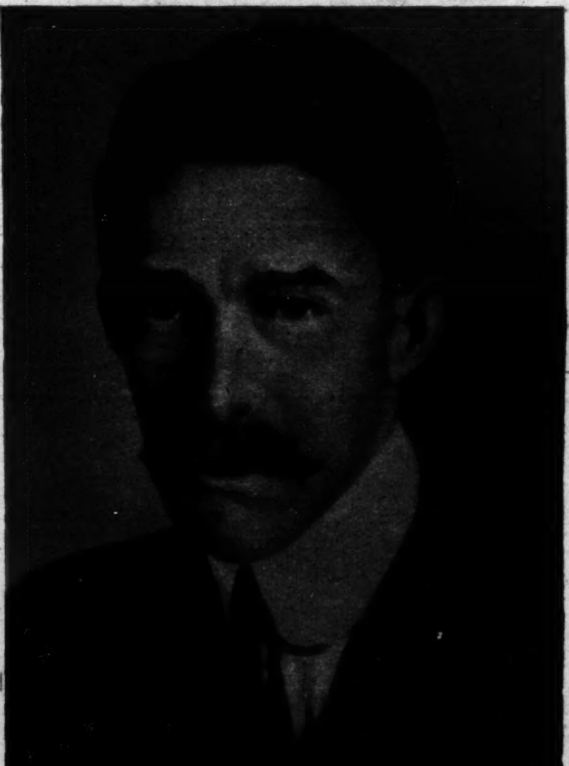
WEDDING BELLS soon will ring for Waite Hoyt, pitcher for the New York Yankees and "boy hero" of the world series. He will marry Miss Dorothy Pyle of Brooklyn in February. They met six years ago in high school. (Photograph from International.)



PRINCESS MARY'S FIANCE, Viscount Lascelles, is the heir of the Duke of Harewood, a millionaire, and a war hero. He was one of the first Grenadier Guardsmen to rejoin his regiment at the beginning of the war, was gassed, and was wounded twice. He won a D. S. O. with bar and a Croix de Guerre when he led his men in the capture of Maubeuge, despite the fact that he had sustained a broken arm. He was born in 1882.

The BICYPEDE

¶Search in memories' haunts for the most wonderful joys of childhood and you will recall the pleasure you gained through the possession of a velocipede.

¶In those modern days the BICYPEDE has supplanted the velocipede. It was so named because it is in reality a bicycle on three wheels, built for the children's days of play.

¶As with the finest timepiece-master craftmanship enters into the building of the BICYPEDE. Balance—precision—scientific principles of construction have developed its leadership even more than the unusual features that make it more than a velocipede.

¶Note its brilliant finish—its safety brake—its arched mud-guard—its rubber covered pedals—its front free wheel and how easily it turns within its own length. It is stronger, lighter, more graceful—altogether the finest velocipede money can buy. Yet its cost is within reason and its value supreme.

¶The BICYPEDE is on sale at the better stores. If your dealer can not supply you, write us direct for catalogue.

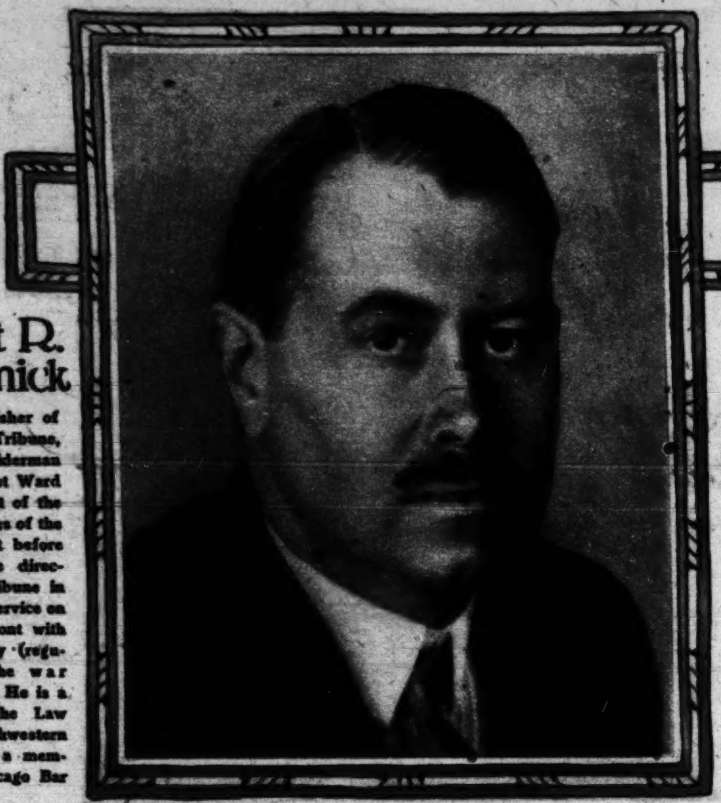
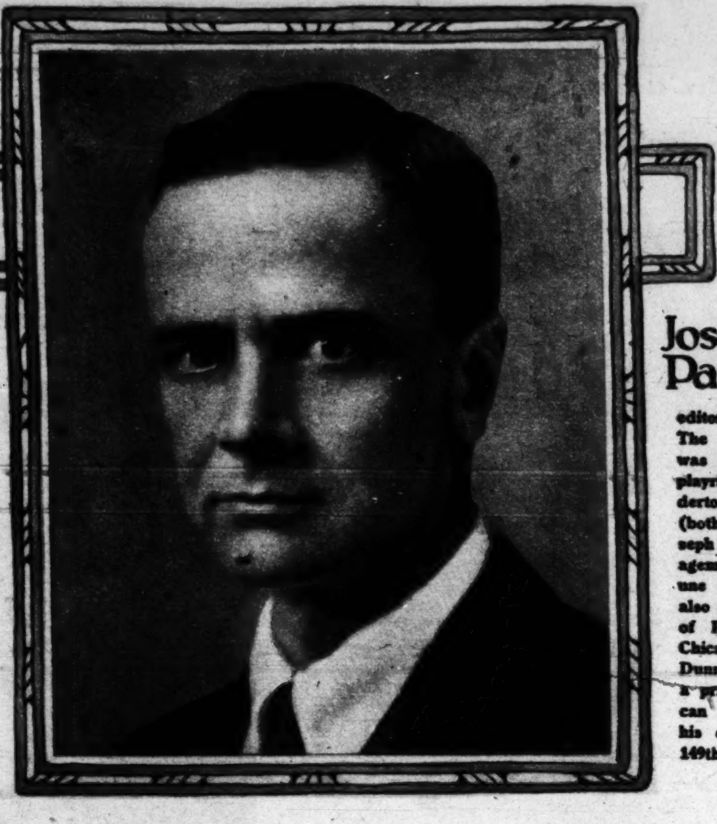
Why The Tribune has the largest morning daily circulation in America

WRITERS, salesmen, cartoonists, mechanical workers, editors—all must be welded into one smoothly functioning machine in order to bring your daily Tribune into existence. Pictures of the executive managers of The Chicago Tribune appear on this page.



Col. Robert R. McCormick

editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, served as alderman from the old 21st Ward and as President of the Board of Trustees of the Sanitary District before assuming active direction of The Tribune in 1911. He saw service on the Western Front with the 5th Artillery (regulars) during the war with Germany. He is a graduate of the Law School of Northwestern University and a member of the Chicago Bar



Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson—

editor and publisher of The Chicago Tribune, was an author and a playright before he undertook, with his cousin (both grandsons of Joseph Medill), the management of The Tribune in 1911. He had also been Commissioner of Public Works in Chicago under Mayor Dunne. He served as a private on the Mexican border, and won his captaincy with the 149th Field Artillery in France

SIXTY-SIX YEARS IN ONE FAMILY. In 1855 Joseph Medill became editor of The Chicago Press and Tribune. Today his grandsons, Robert R. McCormick and Joseph Medill Patterson, divide the labor and responsibilities of the editorial and business management of The Chicago Tribune and its affiliated newspapers and enterprises. The present editors assumed control of the newspaper in 1911 and have directed its activities uninterruptedly except during the mobilization of the army against Mexico and the period of active warfare against Germany.

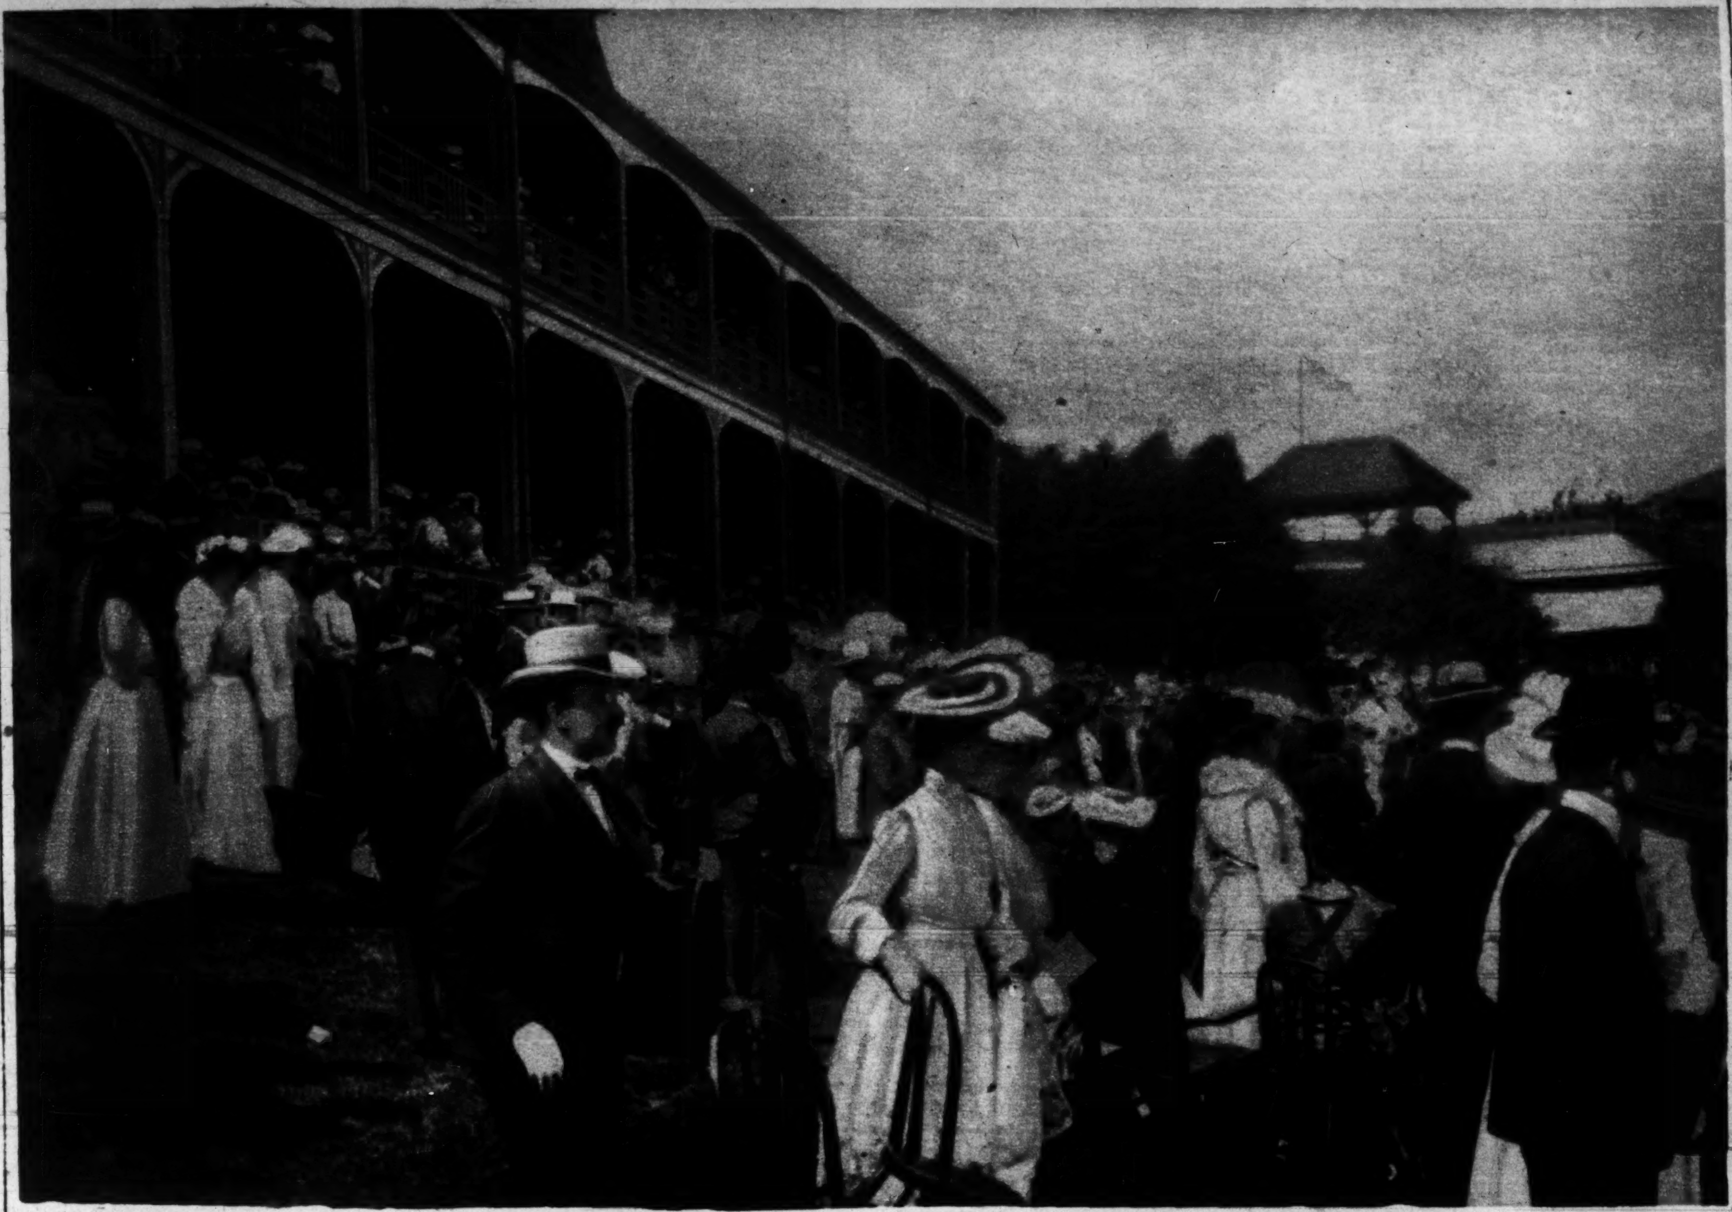
WILLIAM H. FIELD, eastern executive of The Tribune, makes his headquarters in New York, where The Tribune's tabloid pictorial newspaper—the Daily News—now has the largest morning circulation. He was business manager of The Tribune from 1910 to 1919, and was acting editor and publisher during the German war

S. E. THOMASON, business manager of The Tribune, graduate of the University of Michigan and of Northwestern University Law School, handled the legal affairs of The Tribune before assuming an executive position on the staff

WARREN CURTIS JR. built and now operates the paper mill which furnishes The Tribune with more paper than is used by any other newspaper on earth

Read the Tribune Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday as well as Sunday!

DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN ----



DERBY DAY brought a huge crowd to Washington Park race track in 1891? Strathmeath won the American Derby and a purse of $18,610 that year in 2:49¼. Of course, you've already noticed the women's gowns, coiffures and hats.

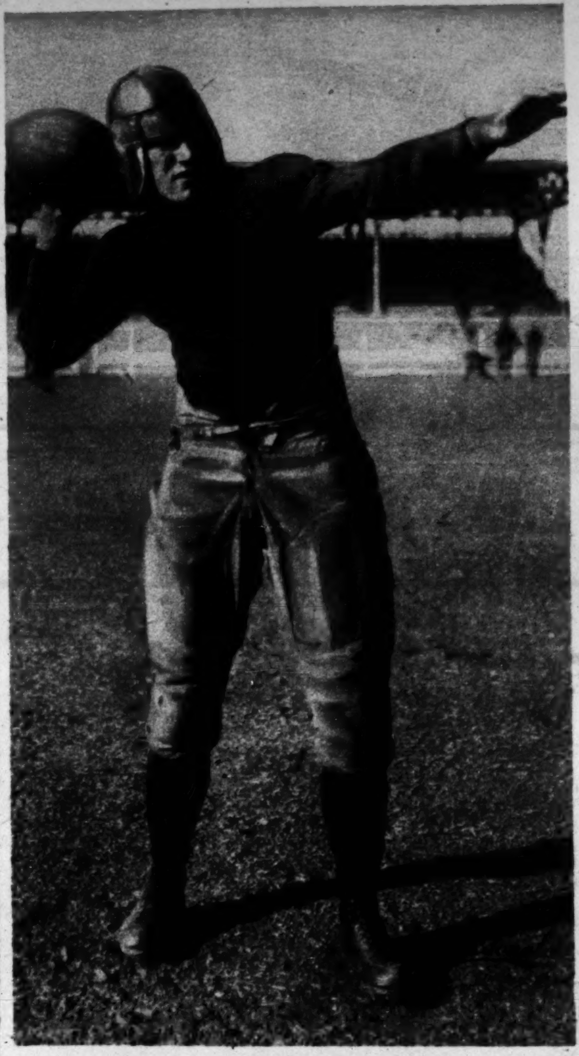
FIRE CHIEF JAMES HORAN, twenty-one of his men, and two stock yards firemen met death at the Morris & Company plant in the great stock yards fire of Dec. 22, 1910? The chief and most of the men were trapped under a falling wall. A fund of $211,000 was raised for the widows and orphans.

WILLIAM A. BRADY, famous theatrical manager, was this rather stern looking young man? He began his stage career in San Francisco in 1882.

MME. MARCELLA SEMBRICH, one of the luminaries of grand opera, looked like this? She made her debut in Athens, Greece, in 1877.

NEXT SEASON'S FOOTBALL CAPTAINS



HAROLD HARTLEY, Nebraska's full-back, whose home is in Harvard, Neb., is the captain-elect for that school's eleven. The picture shows him in action.

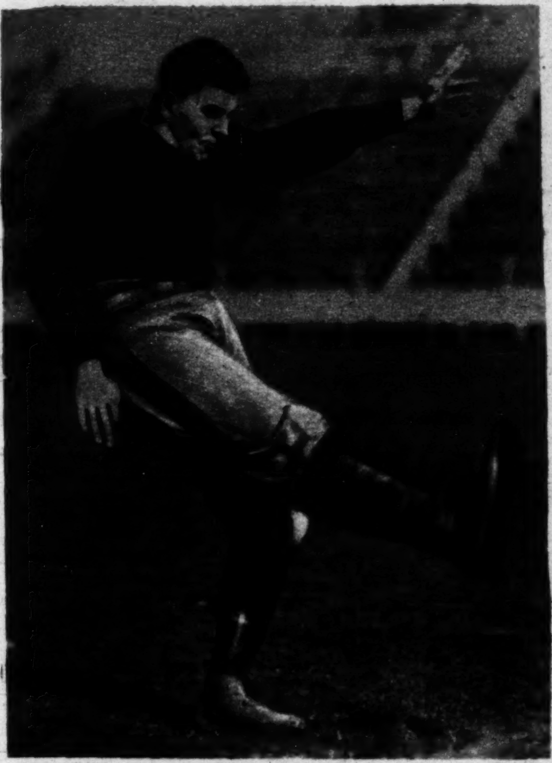
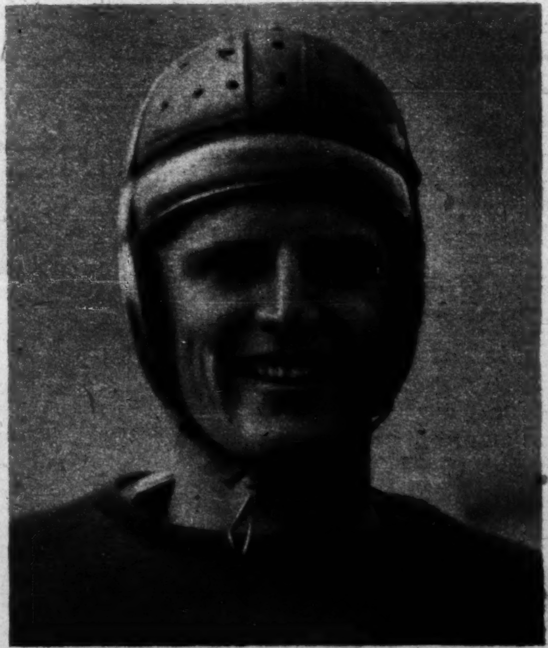
MILTON ROMNEY of Salt Lake City, quarter-back during the last grid season, is the new captain of the University of Chicago eleven.



LLOYD ("BUTCH") PIXLEY, guard of Ohio State's eleven, who lives in Columbus, O., will head that university's eleven this coming year.



PAUL C. GOEBEL of Grand Rapids, Mich., was elected to lead the 1922 Wolverine eleven in the Big Ten title race. Goebel played end last season.

JIMMY PATTERSON, this year's full-back, will be the captain of the Northwestern university football team during the season of 1922. His home is in Winnetka.

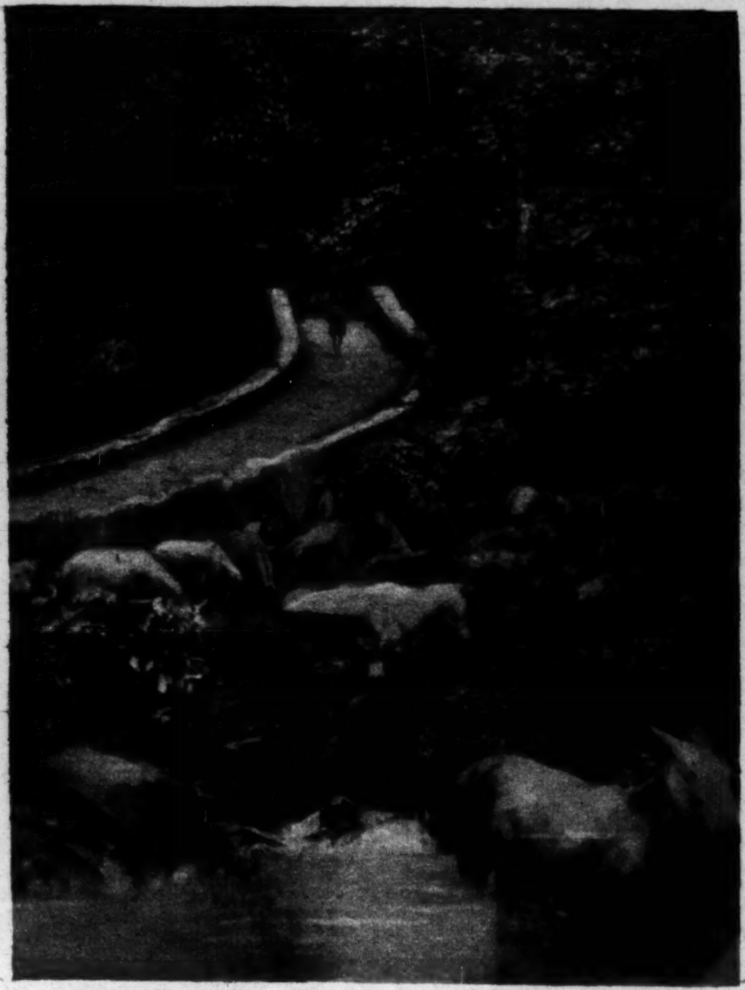
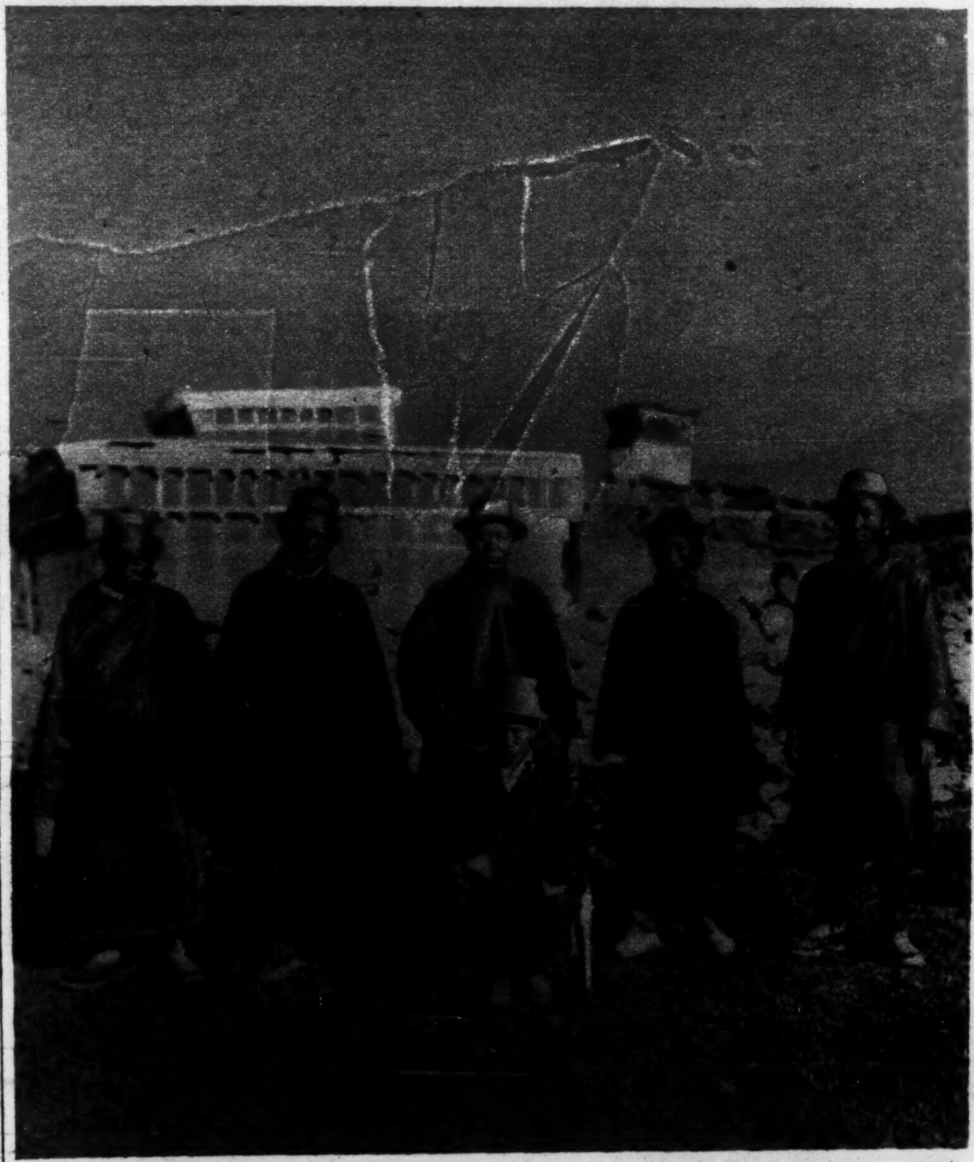
The latest pictures from Col. Howard Bury's expedition, which is seeking to scale Mt. Everest, 29,002 feet high, greatest of all mountains, in the Himalayas.

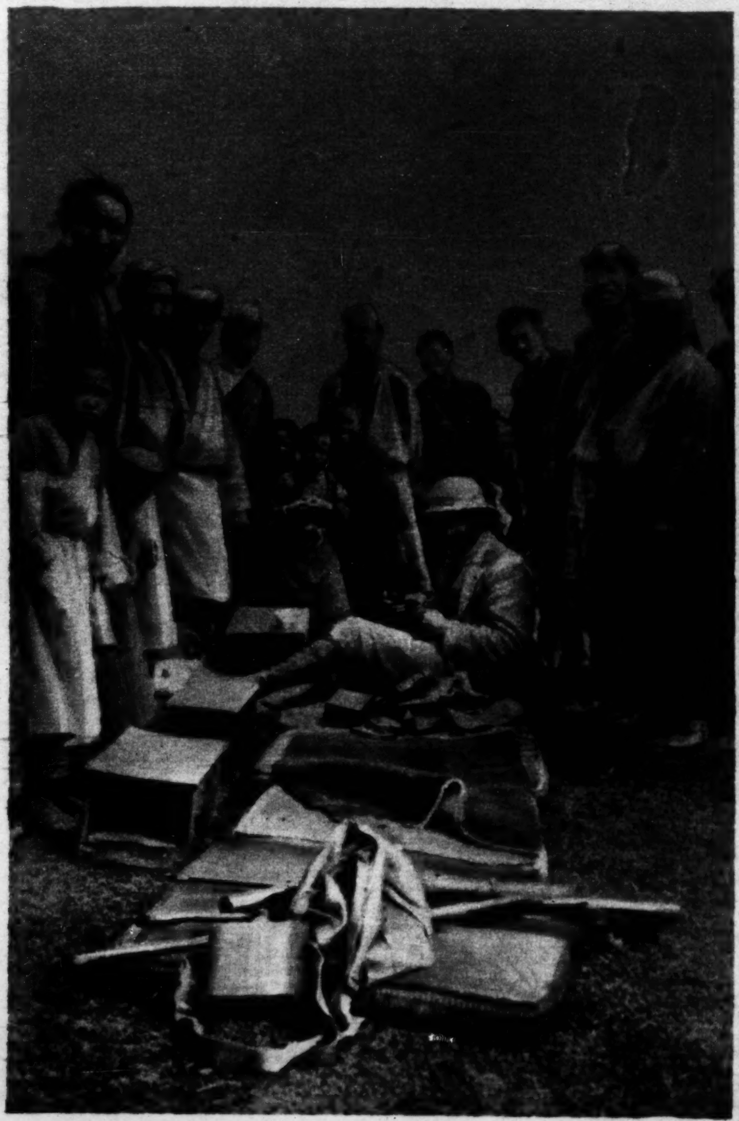
THE GRANDEUR OF THE HIMALAYAS is typified by this panoramic photograph, which presents a view looking over the snowy peaks of Bhutan toward Mt. Chumolhari, 23,946 feet high, in Tibet. Mt. Everest, the goal of the expedition, is 29,002 feet above sea level, and its chill heights never have been conquered, so far as the knowledge of the white man extends.



RESTING. The expedition halted for a time near this ancient and picturesque bridge over a gorge in Sikkim. Many such works of construction and many forgotten cities have been visited by the party.



THE MAN SEATED ON THE STOOL REIGNS SUPREME in Gyanga Nangpa, one of the hidden mountain villages, and the surrounding territory. The group about him comprises his official staff. Some of the group seem to distrust the camera.



COL. HOWARD BURY, leader of the British explorers, held a palaver with a large group of admiring Tibetans by the wayside near Ling-ga. They were much interested in his equipment, every item of which was new and strange to them, and he drank Tibetan tea with them.

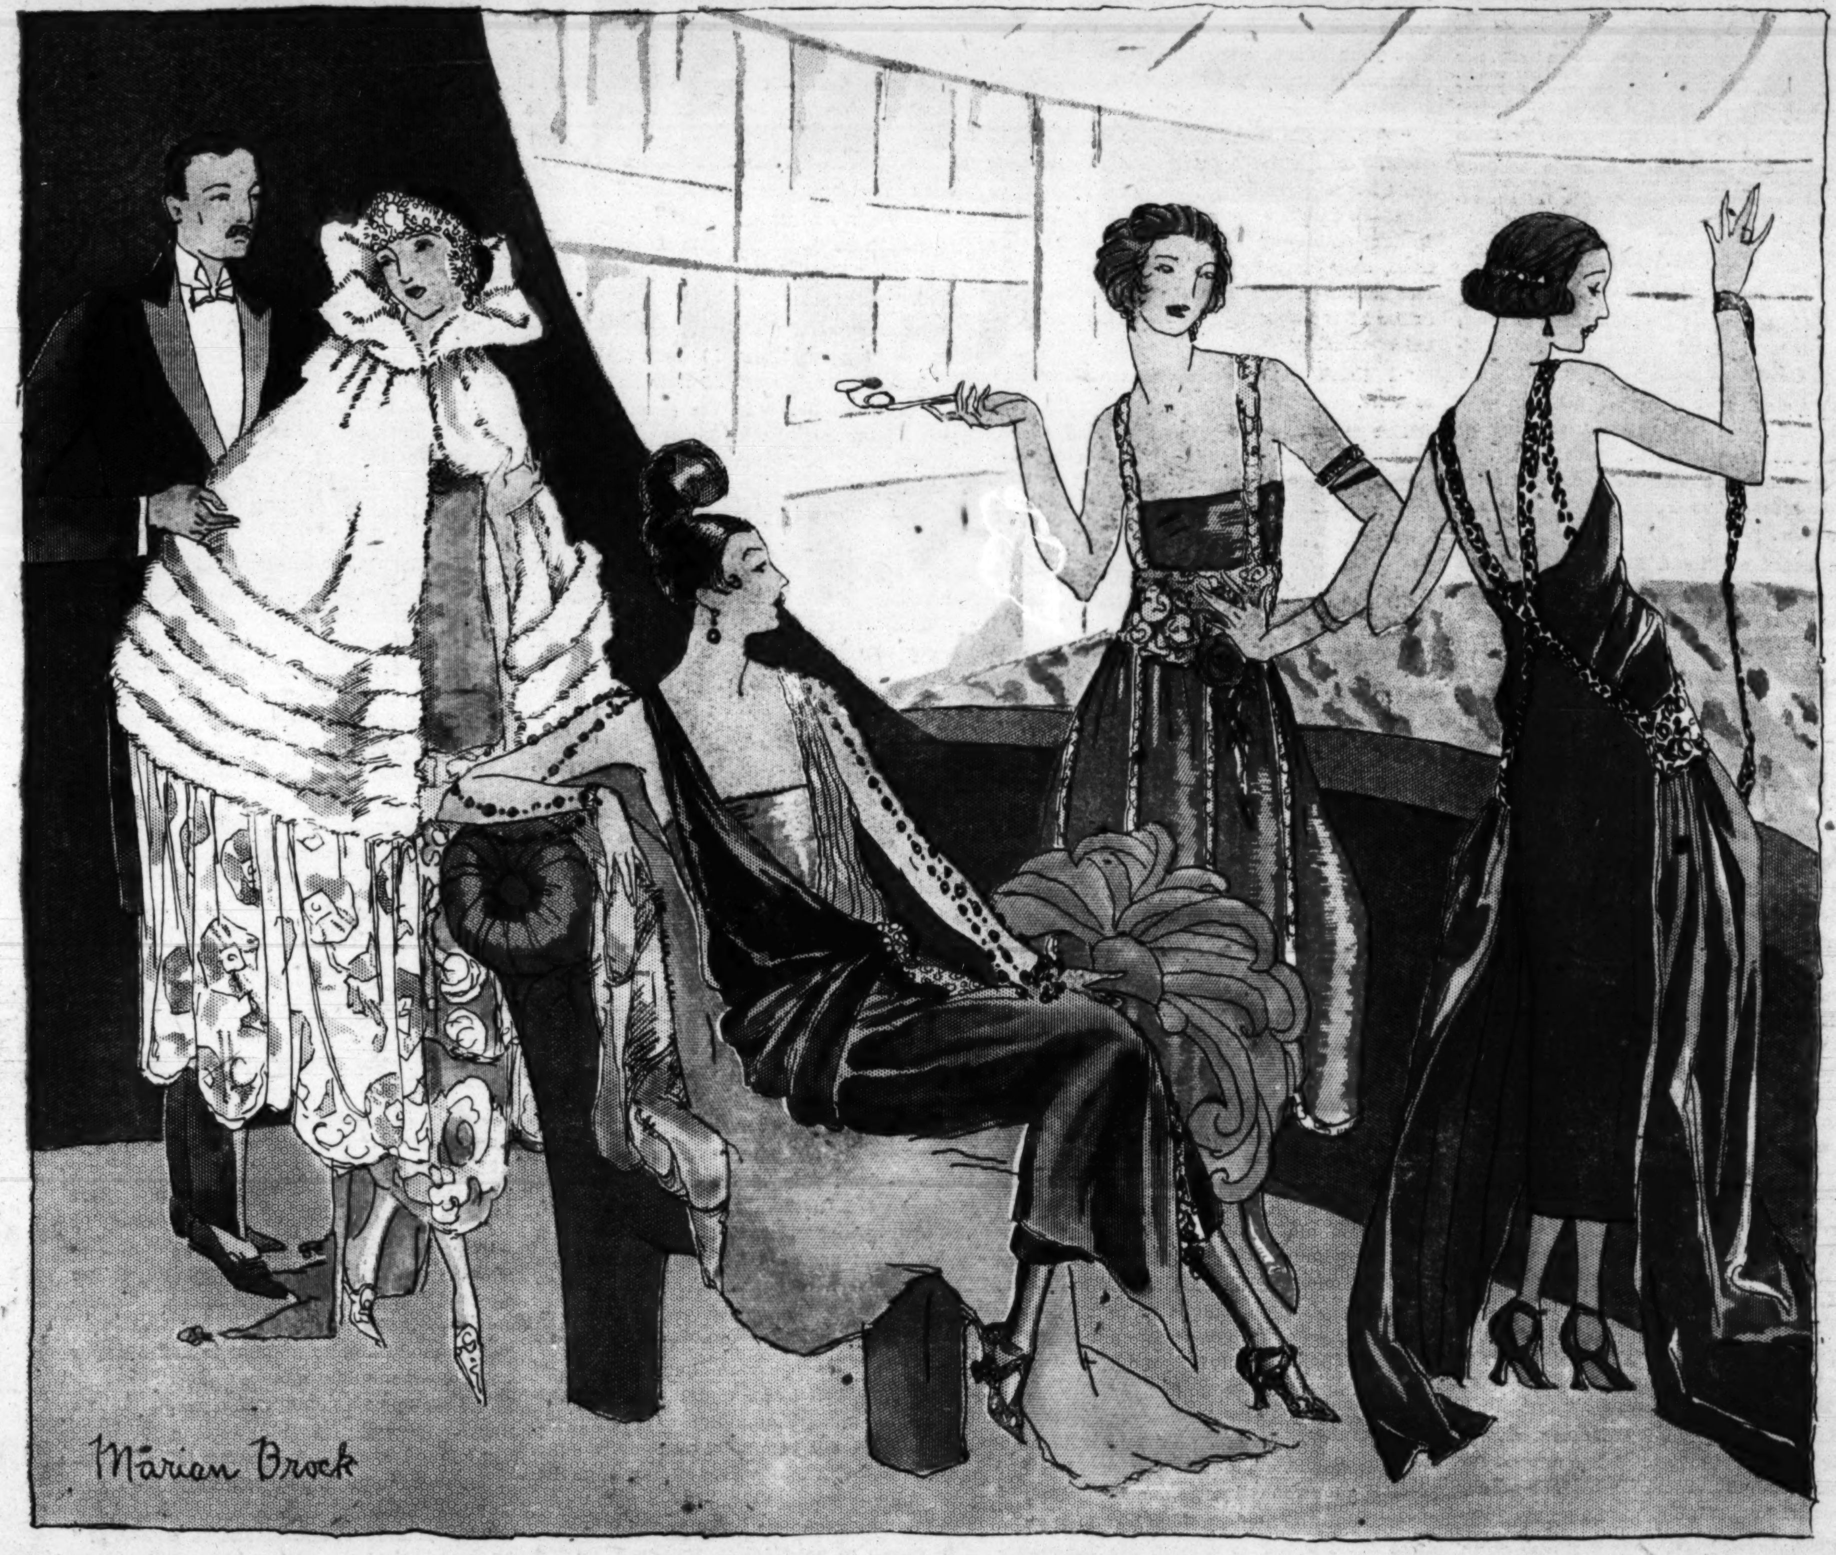
Here's Something New — Fashions in Colors

Colors Flash from the Opera Boxes

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

by Corinne Lowe



Ermine and silver lace characterize the cape at the left. The seated figure in the black velvet gown illustrates the diagonal effect of many of the present evening frocks. Next, one of the new youthful types, where the hoop of the skirt is placed at the hem instead of at the hips, is shown in a silver tissue shot with blue and trimmed with silver lace. The favorite geranium red of the season is carried out at the right in a jet trimmed model of velvet.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—As somebody said, the opera box this year looks like the English window box. Of course the author of this remark had her eyes fixed on a particular section of the horseshoe where the white daisies and red geraniums of Lunnon Town were echoed in white satin and red velvet. However, the same choice is frequent enough to give to the comparison a certain degree of authority.

Certain it is that there hasn't been so much color turned loose on New York in many a long day. If the ghost of some old Venetian doge had wandered into the Metropolitan Opera house the first night he would have felt absolutely at home. Indeed, the gorgeous Venetian fête given in Paris this last summer has undoubtedly been responsible for our New York evenings looking like a palette.

The majestic purples and reds, the jeweled green, the blues that roam from sapphire to forget-me-not, the glinting brocades, laces that look like patterns of sunbeams or moongleams—surely that old painter who put the tint in Tintoretto would have reveled in this winter of 1921-22.

Prominent among these colors is geranium red. And is it any wonder that this was the favorite flower of Charles Dickens? For not even a red rose can equal the velvety, dusky depths of this carmine. Naturally, it is best echoed in velvet and the collections of both foreign and home designers have contained many evening dresses and wraps in velvet of geranium red.

We are showing at the right of the page a gown of velvet in this effective tone which has been adapted from a famous black satin model from Drecoll We find here what every evening gown ought to know. First of all, there is the low waist line. This is accomplished here by placing bands of jet embroidery far down on the hips. Next, there is the irregular hem line, encompassed by the two side panels gathered to these bands and trailing on the floor. And, by the way, the engineer who runs these trains on our new evening clothes has just one thing to learn. He musn't run on schedule or he will be discharged. A train darts out nowadays from any odd place and then usually runs off the track. Among the most notable irregularities is one observed in a noted model from Poiret. Here the front panel of the gown is drawn between the "Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron?"

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine.

Nuxated Iron Will Increase the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Careworn, Haggard Looking Women in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy cheeked women without plenty of iron in their blood," said a prominent New York physician and medical author recently. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, rundown, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks. They become weak, irritable, and nervous because food for the nerves can only be supplied through the blood and when the blood is thin and anaemic, the nerves are improperly nourished. The nervous mother or housekeeper is highly irritable, forgets where she puts things, and often cannot remember what she started to do. At night she often has a "good cry" and excuses it by saying it is a relief for her nerves, when it means a high state of nerve force exhaustion. Often her nervousness and irritability is a strain on her children and may help to wreck their delicate nervous systems,

Medical science and chemistry have proven that NERVE FORCE IS A DISTINCT SUBSTANCE, SIMILAR TO YOUR BLOOD. It is the most important fluid in your body. It gives life to your nerves and force to your brain. If you cannot think right, if your memory fails, if you are irritable and easily upset, trifling things annoy you, look into your nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened, all the vital organs of your body lose their normal strength and vigor, and as a result all kinds of alarming symptoms may appear. From the pains across the back one woman thinks she has kidney trouble; another may think her spine is injured because of the tender spots which may occur thereon. The dull, heavy pain in the lower part of the head or the back of the neck leads another to think she is going to have paresis. Sleeplessness and nervous irritability, heart palpitation and indigestion are very common symptoms. Some people are born with a very small amount of nervo-vital fluid, because the nerve force has been squandered by the lives led by their ancestors. Others use up their nerve force faster than the body can make it, but in every case, your nerve force is your capital in life, and when it is gone, your capital is gone, the same as if you had lost or squandered your capital in business. When you lack nerve force, there is only one thing that is going to help you, and that is more nerve force. IN SUCH CASES IT IS WORSE THAN FOOLISH TO WASTE YOUR TIME TAKING MERE STIMULATING MEDICINES OR NARCOTIC DRUGS. Your starving nerves must have nerve food or something to supply increased nerve force, the same as a starving man must have bread to make new flesh and muscle. For centuries science searched for a nerve force food. At last a celebrated French physician brought to the attention of the Paris Academy of Medicine a remarkable product which contained the principal chemical constituents of active living nerve force, in a form which most closely resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. This wonderful product was later combined with organic iron and other valuable ingredients under the name of "Nuxated Iron," so that today true artificial nerve force ready to be transformed into active living nerve force, the moment it enters the body, may now easily be had, simply by taking two tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day, with or after your meals. ORGANIC IRON, CONTAINED IN NUXATED IRON, IS LIKE THE IRON IN YOUR BLOOD, and like the iron in spinach, carrots, lentils and apples. It not only quickly enriches the blood, but it also stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds artificial nerve force directly to the nerve and brain cells, but it indirectly increases the production of nerve force through the medium of the blood.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Over 4,000,000 people are using Nuxated Iron annually. From the remarkably beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund your money. If you are weak, nervous or run down, get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force, and made you feel better and stronger in every way, your money will be refunded. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

SYNOPSIS.

Young Matthew Holmes, whose gospel it is to act upon impulse, is up to his neck in trouble. His temporary success as a novelist has flickered out. His uncle, Jeremy Taylor, whom he believed to be on his death bed, has recovered and married his pretty nurse. Matt is in disfavor with both, due to the fact he had made preparations to conduct himself as befitted the heir to a huge fortune. When the story opens he is facing the alternative of paying a large income tax or going to jail. Desperate, he starts for Uncle Jerry's, purposing to interest him in a patent fire extinguisher. But on the way Matt's boat is wrecked, and when he attempts to land at a forbidding mansion known as the "old Putney place," he is greeted by three ferocious dogs and a swarthy foreigner, who admits he let Matt's cries for help go unheeded. Matt turns his extinguisher upon both dogs and man, and soon a rescue car, piloted by one Bill Emerson, takes him away. He tries to quiz Bill about the mysteries of the Putney place, but Bill has thrilling news of another sort. Sylvia Gates, daughter of old Hiram Gates, war millionaire, has disappeared while out in her canoe. Sylvia was engaged to Freddie Griscom, a young millionaire, and Sam Sprague, a sturdy young shipbuilder, also was in love with her. Much to his surprise, Matt is given a cordial welcome by Uncle Jerry, who regards him as a rescuer. It seems pretty Nancy, his wife May's sister, is at Otter Rocks and is "running the place." Nancy appears as Matt is relating his adventures with the fire extinguisher.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

The Battle of Wits Begins.

"THIS is my nephew, Matthew Holmes, Nancy," said Uncle Jerry. "Matthew, this is Miss Upton."

Nancy's blue eyes sparkled with recognition, not of Matt, but of his frustrated efforts, and at the sudden belligerency of her highly colored and undeniably pretty face Matt felt a defensive inclination to raise the extinguisher.

"I've heard all about Mr. Holmes," said Nancy, "and I've even read his last shilling shocker. Have you wisely abandoned literature, Mr. Holmes, to sell extinguishers?"

"I'm trying to pursue both occupations, Miss Upstage," Matt retorted.

The girl flushed, the more so as Matt's eyes passed coolly the length of her, missing apparently no detail from the coil of snugly coiffed reddish hair to a pair of ankles which left her low shoes to ascend some distance with every promise of perfection.

"Well," she snapped, "then let's hope that the extinguisher proves a success," and without bothering over further amenities she said to her brother-in-law, "The most dreadful thing has happened, Mr. Taylor. I just learned about it over the phone." Her voice seemed to break, and to Matt's surprise and immediate concern the tears gushed into her eyes, which brimmed over so that two astonishingly large ones rolled down her pink cheeks and hung pendant for a moment like a pair of gems, which flashed in the sunlight from either side of her combative chin. Such a symptom of emotional weakness was about the last thing Matt would have looked for in this girl, and it seemed to explain her lack of politeness to himself. He regretted instantly his own flippant reception of this.

"What's the matter now?" rumbled Uncle Jerry, with a poor attempt at jocularity. "Has Mrs. Catt been poisoned?"

"Please don't joke! Sylvia Gates went out last night in her canoe to paddle around for an hour and not the slightest trace of her has been discovered."

"What's that?" cried Uncle Jerry, starting up.

"That's all," said Nancy, and shook her head. "She went out after dinner, as she often does, and that's the last they've seen of her. There's been a whole fleet of boats of every sort out on the bay, and a launch has just come in to the Gates' and reported no trace of her nor her canoe. At daylight this morning they formed a line ten miles long and went straight out in the direction of the wind, keeping an interval that must have seen the canoe if it had been capsized. They went farther than it could possibly have drifted, even if she'd fallen out without capsizing it."

Matt, glancing at his uncle, was alarmed at the mottled pallor which spread suddenly over his face.

"Good Lord!" groaned Uncle Jerry. "Why didn't Hy let me know?"

"He didn't want to shock you," said Nancy. "May knew about it, but I'd gone to bed and she did not tell me because Sylvia and I were such chums at school that she wanted to save me from being upset. She thought surely Sylvia would be picked up by this time."

"So that's where the launch went," said Uncle Jerry. "May told me that she'd sent Murphy to town to fetch the Cummings."

"The launch has been offshore searching with the rest of them," said Nancy. "They think that Sylvia broke her paddle and was blown out into the bay with that puffy little northwest breeze that sprang up last evening. But now they are beginning to fear that something else has happened her."

"What?" asked Matt sharply.

Nancy shot him an angry look. "Well, what would you think?" she asked. "You write detective stories of sorts, and whatever else your efforts may lack nobody has ever charged you with falling short in far fetched invention."

"Thanks for those few kind words," said Matt, "and I don't think that any of you need be so terribly worried," for his quick, versatile mind, already supplied with the leading details of this mysterious disappearance, may have been working at the problem subconsciously, and at this fresh presentation of it leaped to an immediate and logical conclusion.

"I think that she's been kidnaped," said he.

This daring theory, so abruptly advanced, produced a quick reaction in both his listeners.

Uncle Jerry's craggy head turned sharply on its lean neck like the head of an owl, while Nancy's blue eyes opened very wide, as did also her pink mouth.

"What's that?" croaked Uncle Jerry.

"I think that she's been kidnaped," Matt repeated. "Let's consider the facts. Here's an athletic girl who has grown up on the water's edge and is a good canoeist and expert swimmer——"

"How do you know that?" Nancy demanded. "Do you know Sylvia?"

"I've heard about her," Matt parried. "This girl goes out in her canoe, in a puffy offshore breeze, and fails to return. If she'd fallen overboard or got capsized the chances are ninety-nine in a hundred that she would either have righted the canoe and swarmed back into it, or else swum ashore."

"But hampered by her clothes," said Nancy, who looked, nevertheless, more hopeful.

"The summer girls of today don't wear clothes enough to hamper them at all," said Matt, "nor the winter ones, for that matter. But, in any case, the canoe would have floated and must certainly have been picked up in the smooth water we've had today, even if it were awash. Since they have found no trace of the girl nor of the canoe there is only one conclusion to be drawn. Somebody who knew something about her habits has been laying for her, and they've got her."

Nancy, who had been holding her breath during the declamation, now drew it so deeply as to resemble a pouter pigeon. But her piquant face showed a tremendous relief.

"Upon my word," said she. "It needs a dime novel writer to explain the unexplainable."

Uncle Jerry drew down his bushy eyebrows and surveyed her from the cavernous depths beneath them.

"Well, then," said he, "let's hear a Vassar B. A. improve on it."

Nancy flushed and tilted up her combative chin.

"It's absurd," said she. "That sort of thing only happens in the movies—and in Cousin's or Nephew's, or whatever he is, silly books."

"Well, then," said Matt, serenely, "forge ahead and give us one of your own."

Nancy hesitated for a moment. Matt was rather pleased to note this hesitation, because his impressions of people were impulsively and most times accurately formed, and any hesitation on the part of this positive young lady struck him as being alien to her nature, like the tears. It lasted for a very brief instant, and the following explanation of it gave him pause.

"Well, then," said she, "I think that your theory is fantastic and absurd. But now that you've eliminated the possibility of an accident, or at least the probability of one, I believe that Sylvia has done precisely what I have feared for some time that she might do. I think that she has eloped with a man named Sprague and that we shall hear all about it tomorrow morning."

Uncle Jerry sat up straight. "Sam Sprague, the ship builder?" he demanded, then leaned back and laughed softly at the sky. "By gorry, I believe you're right. I hadn't thought of that. I hope she has. Sam is twice the man that this Griscom milksop could ever hope to be. Won't Hy Gates be wild?" He chuckled with that peculiar fiendish glee which sometimes inspires older men on learning of the discomfiture of a friend whose sudden success has aroused a sort of senile jealousy. Then, turning to his nephew, he asked. "Well, what do you know about that, Mr. Story Writer?"

Matt shook his head and glanced up to find Nancy's blue eyes fixed upon him with a sort of hostile challenge.

"Strikes me as rather weak," said he. "For one thing, Sam went off mad when he learned of Sylvia's engagement to Griscom—left his yard in the hands of the foreman and cleared for somewhere down east."

Nancy gave a gasp. It may have struck her that here could be little short of clairvoyance. "How do you know that?" she asked.

Matt shrugged. "We writers have a way of interesting ourselves in human documents at which we are permitted now and then a glimpse," said he. "In the present case I believe your surmise to be entirely wrong because it is not consistent with Sylvia's character."

And proceeded entirely in the dark to set forth his reasons for this premise. Leaning back on the bench, Matt toyed with the extinguisher, which had a pleasant nickeled polish and was the sort of object one rather likes to handle.

"You see, Miss Uppity," said he. "Your theory does your chum a grave injustice. Sylvia may be headstrong and temperamental but she is devoted to her father"—he glanced at Uncle Jerry—"and she would never for an instant subject good old Hy to any such horrible anxiety as this. Besides why should she—Hiram may have got set up a little over his sudden increased wealth, but at the same time he knows perfectly well folks say he's a profiteer, and when all is said and done Sam's just as good a man as he is, or as his father was, even if he did have the biggest sail loft in Boston and a rope walk in Gloucester. Sam's all right. Everybody likes Sam, even if he is a mite rough at times, and he's one of the very few that did good, honest work for Uncle Sam during the war. If Sylvia wanted to marry Sam there's no reason under heaven why she shouldn't tell this milksop of a Griscom to go chase himself, and then up and marry Sam. And deep down in his heart good old Hy would have been the last person to put anything in the way of it."

The astonishment with which Nancy listened to this discourse (inspired as the result of the half heard commentaries of the loquacious driver impinging on profounder meditation) was even surpassed by the amazement with which Uncle Jerry surveyed this nephew whom he had been previously inclined to regard as a bit of an inspired ass. The gleam of satisfaction in Uncle Jerry's deep set eyes held also a new respect, as of one mistaken in his findings and almost ready to admit his error.

"Where did you get all this about Hiram Gates and Sylvia and Sam Sprague?" he demanded.

Matt pursed up his lips and raised his eyebrows. "We writers," said he, "find it an essential part of our profession to pick up the loose ends of anything which promises to be an interesting suggestion for a romantic situation and try to knot them together. During your illness, uncle, I came here off and on, and in the course of these brief visits I could not help but hear a little of the gossip of the neighborhood. Putting two and two together in the present juncture, I am convinced that Sylvia, who though possibly a bit set up by her father's sudden accretion of wealth through turning his sail lofts to the manufacture of tents for the government, is nevertheless a devoted daughter who would never willingly subject a kind father whom she loves to any such ordeal as this." He fixed Nancy's blue eyes suddenly with his piercing gaze. "You know yourself she wouldn't," he shot at her with violence.

"Well," faltered Nancy, "I really—never would have thought it of Sylvia——"

"No more would I," said Matt sternly. "Sylvia may have had her head turned a bit, but I am convinced that her heart is in the right place. If I am wrong, then she must be a very cruel, wicked girl. But I am not wrong. She has not eloped. There was no reason for her to elope. She has been kidnaped!" Matt barked out this statement in a manner which made Nancy jump.

Uncle Jerry looked puzzled, less perhaps from an effort to grapple with this idea than at the display of so much acumen by a nephew whom he had hitherto regarded as brilliant of surface but of shallow depth.

"I must say, Matthew," said he, "you are deeper than I had thought. You seem to have got a pretty good slant on the affairs of this community."

Matt waved his hand with a deprecatory gesture.

"Besides," said he, "from what I know of Sam Sprague, he is not the sort of man to lend himself to any such expedient, even to gain a bride. You see, Nancy"—he fastened her with his hypnotic gaze—"there are two sorts of men in this world, as you may find when you have been a little longer from the bosom of your Alma Mater——"

"I'm learning it right now," Nancy interrupted. "Those who mind their own business and those who don't."

"If that is a slap," said Matt, "permit me to turn the other cheek. I might point out that it is the first essential of an author's business to study human nature, its traits and motives, and that can't be done from books."

"Not from your books," said Nancy, "but do go on. You are at least amusing."

"Well, then," said Matt, whose mind was forensic in regard to sticking to a point. "There are front door men and back door men, and, unless I am much mistaken, Sam is the front door sort."

Uncle Jerry nodded. "You're right, nephew," said he. "Sam might batter down the front door with a maul or pixie to get his girl, but he'd never sneak her out the back way. I knew his father, Jim Sprague, and Sam's a chip off the old block."

"Quite so, uncle," said Matt pleasantly, "and I might add that the front door and back door simile applies to girls as well"—he turned his serene gaze upon Nancy's angry face. "Now which sort do you consider your friend Sylvia to be?" he asked.

Nancy found herself trapped. She was bound to admit that it would be a very mean trick for Sylvia to cause her devoted father many hours of anguish of mind when as a girl of high spirit she might have said: "I find that I love Sam Sprague and I don't love Freddy Griscom. I'm going to marry Sam and that's all there is about it," and, as a matter of fact, Nancy's knowledge of her chum's character told her that this was precisely what she would have done.

She looked angrily at Matt to find his eyes resting expectantly upon her face.

"Well, what do you think yourself?" he asked.

"I don't know," she answered shortly. "You're so smooth and plausible that you mix me up."

"Do you believe that she is drowned?" Matt asked.

"I do not. Sylvia had the college championship for swimming and diving, and she was as much at home in a canoe as you might be in a lady's boudoir."

"Then do you believe that she sneaked off to elope with Sam?"

Nancy shook her head. "Not now," said she. "I'm obliged to admit that you're probably right about that."

"He is about Sam," muttered Uncle Jerry, who, although inclined to quarrel with his friends, was loyal to them when attacked.

"Well, then," said Matt, "by a process of elimination my kidnaping theory seems to be the only one left, unless a whale came along and swallowed her, canoe and all. Why not, anyhow? There are cases of kidnaping reported every few days in the papers. Sylvia is the only and beloved daughter of a new made millionaire, and supposedly engaged to marry another. Paternal love in one case and lover love in the other would seem to guarantee a prompt payment of the ransom."

Uncle Jerry looked convinced. "Here comes May," said he. "Let's see what she's got to say about it. She's got a good clear head."

happened, the canoe would have spilled her out and righted itself. I know something about canoes. And a girl in such good training as your daughter would not have got a cramp."

Mr. Gates seemed to revive a little and looked at Matt with a sudden interest. "Then what do you think?" he asked.

"I am positive that she has been kidnaped, sir," said Matt, and forgetful for the moment that the sum of his worldly possessions would not have constituted a very interesting wager, he added, "I'd bet my last dollar on it."

"Well," said Mr. Gates heavily, "let's hope and pray you're right. But if you are, we ought to learn something about it within the next few hours. Of course, it's possible that she may have broken her paddle and been blown off shore, but in this case it is almost certain that the swarm of boats out there would have picked up her or the canoe if she had fallen out of it. But on the off chance of her having been abducted, I have just issued an offer of fifty thousand dollars for her immediate return and no questions asked, and her fiancée, Freddy Griscom, has backed it with another fifty."

"I think that money will be collected, Mr. Gates," said Matt, and there may have been some curious inflexion to his voice, for both the stricken parent and Nancy looked at him with a quick, puzzled inquiry. Matt leaned forward in his chair. "I base this belief on my own knowledge of canoes and canoeists," said he. "As I have just pointed out, the mere fact of there being ballast in the canoe would whip it up instantly before it had time to fill if your daughter had pitched out of it. And although you hear a great deal about cramp, it is actually rare and usually happens to thickly muscled people. Take my word for it, Mr. Gates, your daughter is alive and is going to be restored to you."

There was such a ring of conviction in his voice that the face of the father showed a sudden gleam of hope. He thrust out his hand—the tears gushed into his eyes.

"By Gad, my boy," said he, "you bring back my hope."

Nancy rose. She was looking intently at Matt, and her expression was far from approving. "I think we'd better go, Mr. Holmes," said she. "You seem to know what you're talking about, and I trust you're right. But if you are, we ought soon to know for certain, as Mr. Gates has just said."

They went out and walked in silence to their car. As they moved away Nancy burst out explosively.

"It's all very well to be optimistic, Mr. Holmes, but when a man has begun to adjust his mind to a terrible blow, I question if it's right to offer so posititve an assurance as you did. It makes the final knowledge of the truth even more fatal."

"But I am positive,' said Matt. "I was never more positive in my life about anything of which I did not have the actual proof."

"I don't think you've got enough to go on."

"I do," said Matt grimly, and lapsed into a silence which was unbroken until they reached the garage. Here Nancy got out rather sulkily and, ignoring Matt's presence, started to walk up to the house. Thus aloof she did not observe Matt's lingering to inspect the motorcycle nor his pausing at the door of the garage to slip off one of the three keys from the ring which was pendant from the padlock. Then, stepping to a work bench just inside the door, he ran his eye along a rack of tools and, with a look of satisfaction, selected from these a small "crate bar," which is a jimmy with a hooked end, and dropped it into the side car of the motorcycle.

If Matt's host or hostess or fellow guest observed his preoccupation at dinner, they ascribed it to the tragedy which had cast its shadow on them all. Matt had no supporters of his sanguine theory, perhaps because it was based partly on the fact that as a sort of amphibian himself he knew better than they the capabilities of an expert swimmer when dished accidentally into the water, and partly because he had withheld another and stronger reason for his kidnaping theory and one which also explained the problem which had so baffled him in the early afternoon.

Twice in the course of the evening Nancy called up the Gates home to inquire if there had been any fresh developments, receiving a negative reply. Then, as none of them had the heart for such amusements as cards or billiards or music, or even conversation, they retired early. The elderly butler, an old friend of Matt's, had supplied him with some of his uncle's things, and after waiting until it seemed to him that the household had quieted for the night and taps sounded, as one might say, Matt partially undressed, then clothed himself again in a suit of dark gray golfing tweeds.

His next maneuvers might have puzzled the spying eye, had there been one. He was thoroughly familiar with the house from former pleasant sojourns there, and he now went out into the hall and made his way to the housemaid's closet, flashed an electric torch about, and immediately found that which he sought—a bottle of household ammonia. Returning to his room, noiselessly as he imagined, Matt unscrewed the top of the extinguisher and replenished its contents to the mark with the pungent cleansing fluid.

What he failed to observe, however, not having eyes in the back of his head, was a door that opened softly at the end of the hall a little beyond the housemaid's closet, and a piquant face which peered out, while a pair of bright blue eies watched his maneuvers in mystification.

A few minutes later Matt, with the extinguisher under his arm, slipped out of his room again down the back stairs, through the pantry and dining room, where, opening one of the long French windows, he stepped out into the night. It was dark and still, with no moon, but stars twinkling brightly through the clear soft summer air. Matt started across the lawn for the garage, reached in his pocket for the pilfered key with which he had provided himself, unfastened the padlock, and entered. And, scarcely had he done so when another dark gray figure slipped through the same long window, flitted silently across the lawn, and, coming to the garage, ambushed itself behind a farther corner.

Matt wheeled out the motorcycle, then turned to close the door of the garage. As he did so Nancy stepped out from behind the corner, and as Matt turned he repressed with difficulty a startled yelp at finding that he was not alone.

"Well," said Nancy in a voice which would have been sharp if not suppressed, "what's the meaning of this? Are you a Raffles or holdup or something just starting off to work, or have you kidnaped Sylvia yourself?" Something in the side car caught her eye, and, glancing into it, she saw the extinguisher and crate bar. "Well, upon my word," said she. "You choose an odd time to peddle your wares, and I must say I like your nerve in helping yourself to my motorcycle. So you are a crook after all!"

Matt groaned. "I might have been warned," said he. "Uncle Jerry told me you had your pug nose in everything."

"That's a peculiarity of pug noses," retorted Nancy. "Now, suppose you tell me what you're up to."

Matt's resolution was quickly taken. "I'm going to collect that hundred thousand dollar reward for the recovery of Sylvia Gates," said he.

Nancy gave a gasp. "Then you had a hand in it?"

"No," said Matt, "but I shall soon have both hands in it, unless my deductions are all wrong."

"Do you think you know where she is?"

"I shan't go as far as that, but I think I know who grabbed her. I'm going to see what I can discover."

"I'm going, too," said Nancy, promptly.

"You'll do nothing of the sort," said Matt. "You might get croaked."

"Now, see here," said Nancy. "Either I go with you or else I go to the telephone and call up the Gates', where there's no doubt a policeman or two, and tell them that I've just caught you sneaking off with my motorcycle and that you have admitted knowing something of the whereabouts of Sylvia."

Matt suppressed a groan. "If you do that," said he, "you might spill the whole job, and there's no telling what might happen Sylvia."

"Then let me go with you," said Nancy, "You're pretty sure to bungle it alone, and if you were to get croaked yourself you might never learn what happened Sylvia."

"There's something in that," Matt admitted. "All right, I'll take you on, then. You can wait with the machine while I reconnoiter. We'll call it a fifty-fifty job."

"I'll waive that part of it," said Nancy. "Are you armed?"

"Well, rather," said Matt. "I've got the makings of a gas attack. It wouldn't be the first time today that I've advanced through enemy country and covered my retreat with the good old extinguisher. And I've put an added kick in it."

Nancy sniffed. "So that's what you wanted in the housemaid's closet," said she.

"Quite so," said Matt. "What did you think I was after, the vacuum cleaner?"

"Well, for all the inspired idiots," said Nancy, "give me a writer of modern fiction. Are you always like this?"

"I try not to neglect any opportunity for romantic adventure," Matt answered. "Last time it cost me my watch and roll, and I'd like a chance to get even. Hop in."

"You'd better let me drive," said Nancy.

Matt turned, and, hooking his thumbs in his belt, surveyed her sternly. "Now, look here," said he, "before we start on this expedition in quest of the Silver Gates, which may land me at the threshold of the Pearly Gates, I want one thing distinctly understood. You take your orders from me or it's all off. At least it's all off so far as you're concerned."

There was no mistaking the tenor of this ultimatum.

"All right," said Nancy. "I agree."

"Then come on," said Matt, and started to wheel the machine out of the grounds. It occurred to him that since Nancy's coöperation had been thrust upon him, this might not perhaps be without its value. He did not know with how desperate a band he might have to deal, and should there be some ambush set, Nancy waiting some distance down the road might at least report his failure to return and bring up reinforcements.

A hundred yards beyond the gates they started the motor and set off, Matt driving and Nancy in the side car, nursing the extinguisher. It did not take them long to cover the stretch of road to the old Putney place, but within a quarter of a mile of this Matt cut off the motor, and, there being a declivity in their favor, they coasted smoothly almost to the limit of the estate before coming to a stop.

COLORS FLASH FROM THE OPERA BOXES

ankles and comes out in the back as a train. The same trick is practiced also by Vionnet in some of her late models.

Another rule of conduct to which this frock conforms is the very low décolletté in the back. Not back to normalcy, but abnormalcy to back, seems to be the animating principles of many of the present-day designers. If they give you a harness for a waist they seem to feel that they have met every reasonable expectation.

Of course the front of the gown is more liberal. Indeed, high in the front and low in the back is the course prescribed by many of the new creations. Often the reins of jet or crystal or steel or those of the dress fabric show a foundation of some contrasting material underneath. In this present model, by the way, the shoulder straps are of jet.

To go back to our geranium red. Sometimes evening gowns of this tone are combined with gold or silver lace or with embroidery or beads of these glinting metallic hues. It sounds perhaps a little too resplendent—a little too much like a toreador's costume—but nevertheless some of these gorgeous creations dazzle you into conviction that such is the right way to spend your evenings. For example, the evening gown from Poiret which I have mentioned is embroidered in gold and silver. It undoubtedly would be just a little too much were it not for the fact that black velvet is employed for the back and sleeves of the creation.

Many of the evening gowns have V backs. A number of them have corresponding fronts. But there is no hard and fast rule and this is a season when you may do it round, square or as you like. A point which I have emphasized frequently, but which is so important that many repetitions cannot absolve from present mention, is the diagonal line often pursued by both bodice and skirt. Many of the V's in the back come, not at the center, but at the side. And indeed the whole effect of these elaborate toilettes is sometimes so zig-zag and irregular that they look as if a nor'easter had been the dressmaker on the job.

As an example of the diagonal line we present on the seated model a black velvet gown derived from one made by one of New York's most famous priestesses of fashion. Yes, in spite of all that we have said about color, they continue to practice black. Also black and white. Here the bias is achieved by black velvet running counter to black chiffon in the bodice and showing an under section of gold tissue. Ropes of jet form the sleeves and are repeated at one side of the draped waistline.

Do not think when you have got yourself into your evening frock that your toilette is accomplished. The frock of any kind is today hardly more than an accesory. It is the little things that make the perfection of the costume.

First of all, there are earrings. Nowadays we wear these almost as constantly as does an Italian child. Often they are rings almost big enough to look like part of a gymnasium equipment. At other times they are just long chains or pendants. Made of precious or semi-precious stones, just as the occasion or your pocketbook permits, they are, nevertheless, there. And in helping out the color scheme of your toilette they are just about as important as the vase which the interior decorator sets up on your mantel. I realized this when I saw the occupant of one opera box gowned in white chiffon trimmed with white beads. Her hair was as black as the traditional raven's wing and the one note of color was supplied by long, fiery drops of rubies in her ears.

We are dependent certainly upon something to relieve the severity of the present-day coiffure. This is very severe. Our forheads are exposed as mercilessly as a Spartan child. Dear help us if they are too high or too low or too bumpy. For we strain our locks straight back. After that, the program is dependent upon taste.

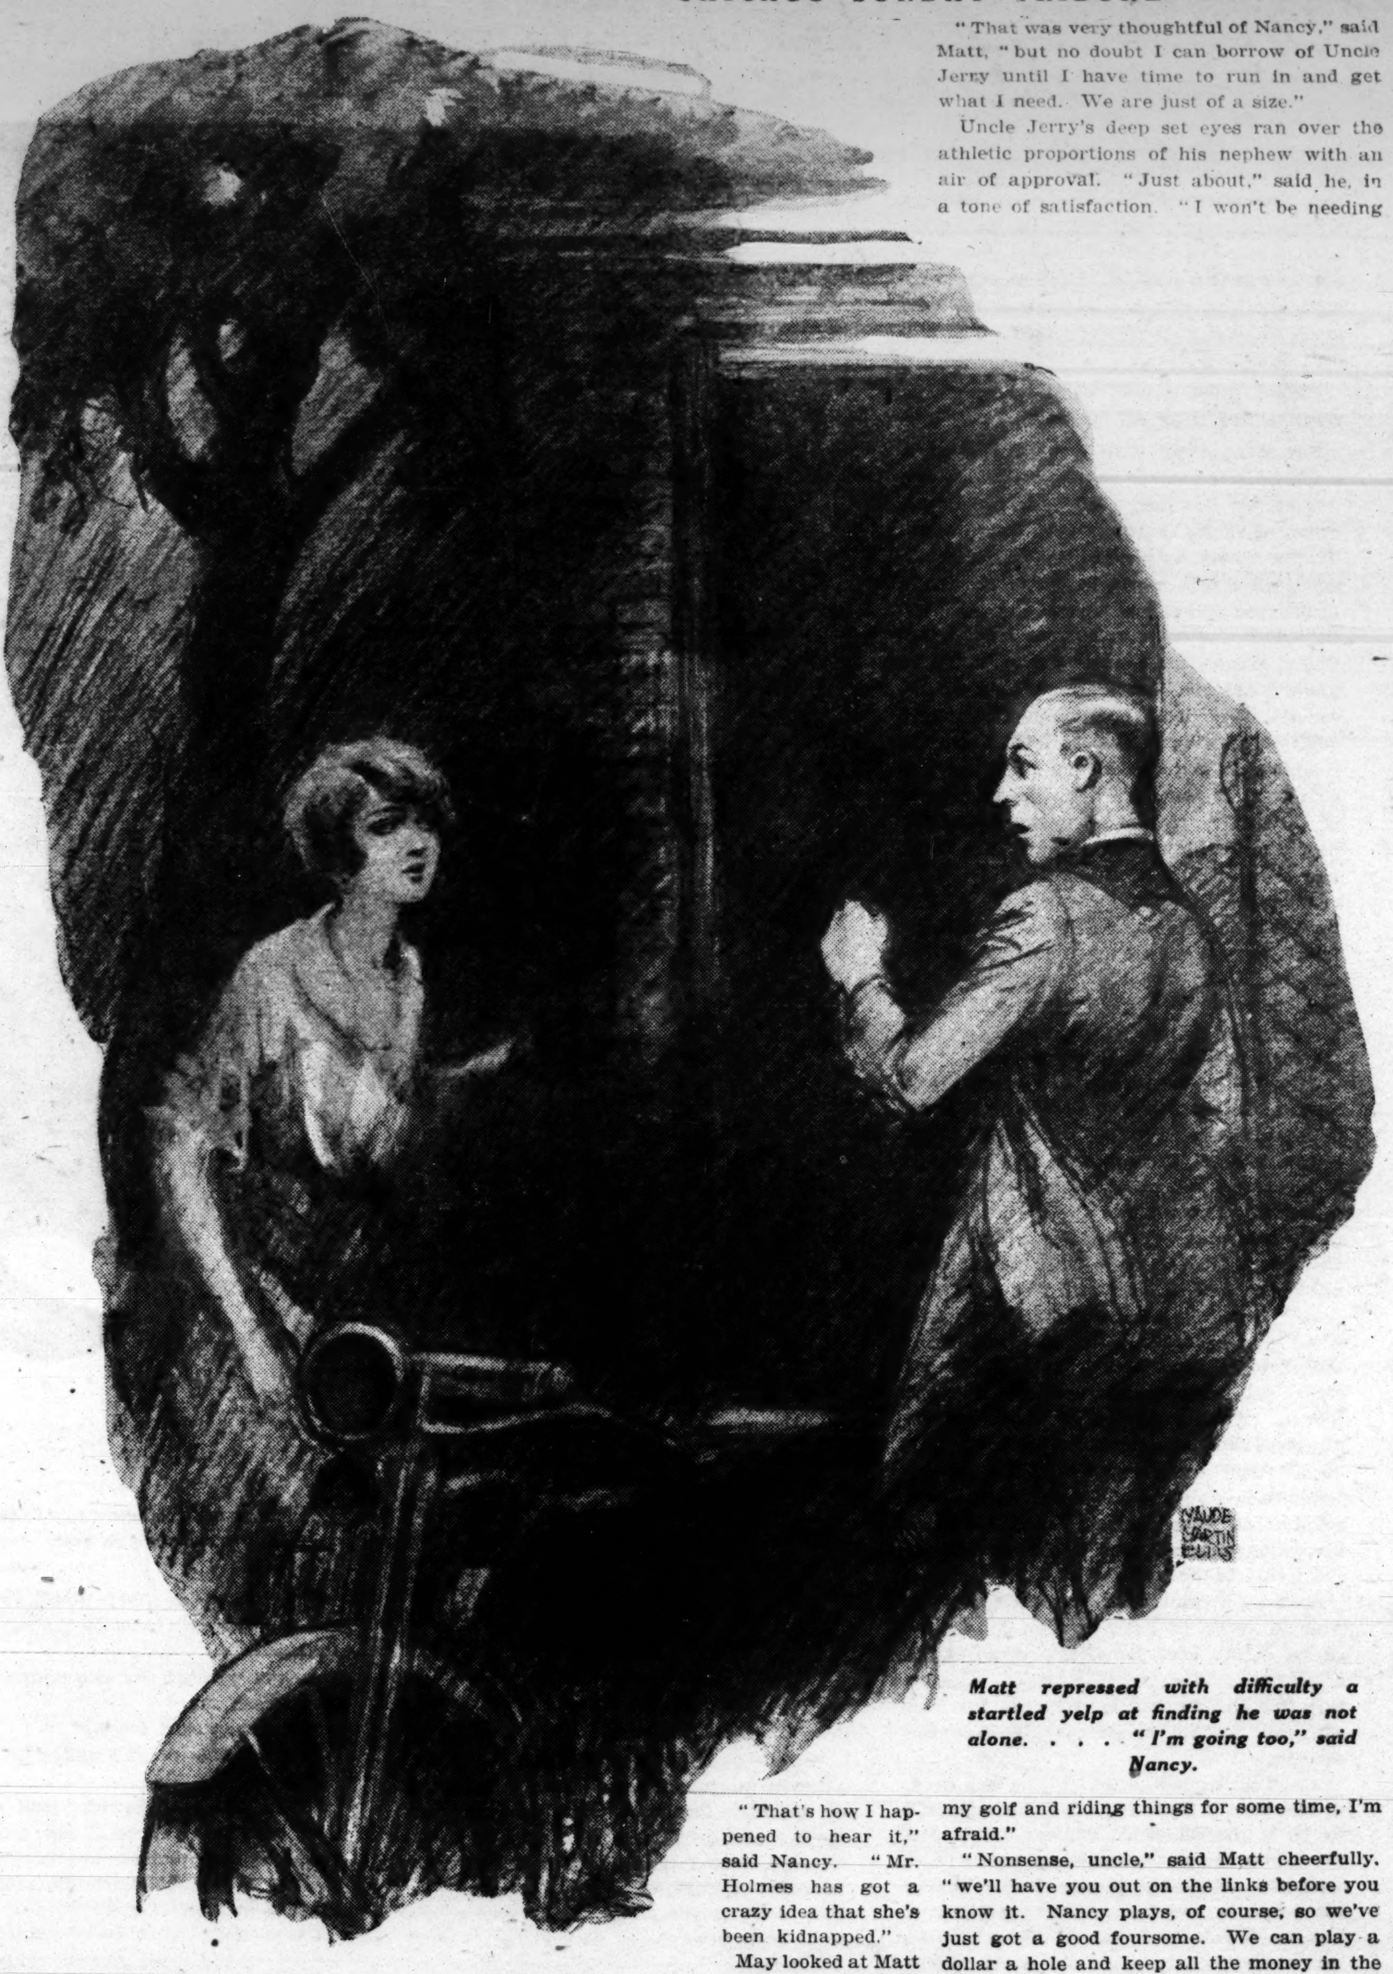
A favored mode is to build a high tower on the head through which we stick at a rakish angle one of the ever-popular Spanish combs. Another is to spread out the knot in a fan-shaped roll. And, of course, if you feel that you are classic enough to sustain it you may do a knot on the back of the head. In all cases there is a forward movement over the ears and cheeks. Indeed, primly trained little side locks often suggest amusingly the old-fashioned gentleman with side whiskers.

We are showing on the page another coiffure particularly adapted to the youthful head and one which suggests the bobbed hair that it may eventually supplant. This is the roll extending evenly from side to side. Here this arrangement is supplemented by a comb, but a garland of flowers is extremely effective with the coiffure. In this connection one might mention numerous stunning headdresses suggested by Paris—a gold lace cap, tight fitting as Pierrot's, and adorned with sprays of thin-flued black feathers, the characteristic Russian headdress; the diadem, the helmet, and many others. Here in this country one notes, however, a tendency to the diadem of either real or imitation jewels.

The seated model is carrying a fan of coq feathers. These are extremely popular, but incidentally we may note that there seems to be a reaction taking place just now in favor of the small beaded gauze fan of other days. Also, there are some wonderfully attractive new models in lace. Of course, the plumy fan is still in the ascendant, but one notes here and there evidences of the returning tide of the fabric fan.

But to go back to our gowns. Velvet is the favorite of the season. However, brocades, gold and silver tissues, laces and crêpes are all good. And it is not to be overlooked—the number of white gowns which combine with those of geranium red to remind our friend of a London window box. White mousseline de soie, white chiffon, white georgette, white velvet, white satin—one sees them all. They are often embroidered in crystal or pearl beads, in rhinestones and silver, and they are set off by all sorts of brilliant accessories.

The latest models on our page are the beautiful evening wrap of ermine and silver lace at the left and the frock of shaded metal cloth second from the right. This is silver melting wonderfully into blue and it is trimmed with silver lace. The skirt is held out, not at the hips, but at the hem, with a hoop. And, by the way, this position of the hoop is indicated in some late models from [illegible]



Matt repressed with difficulty a startled yelp at finding he was not alone. . . . "I'm going too," said Nancy.

A strong and graceful figure appeared coming from the direction of the garage. Mrs. Taylor was an attractive young woman of thirty, handsome rather than pretty, and with an air of quiet capability. There was also a hint of temperamental qualities in her eyes, which were of a lighter blue than those of her piquant sister. As she discovered Matt's presence these expressive eyes held a slightly metallic sheen, and she surveyed the young man a little in the manner of a fearless and self-reliant feline which is quite prepared to combat encroachment of the premises with a presumptuous dog.

Matt rose, laying down the extinguisher.

"How do you, Aunt May," said he affably.

Mrs. Taylor surveyed him coolly, then offered her hand. She was not a vixenish or revengeful woman, and, having occupied and entrenched herself in an invulnerable strategic position, saw no good reason in bearing malice for her defeated adversary.

"Good afternoon, Matthew," said she; then glanced curiously at the extinguisher. "What are you doing with that thing?"

"I have been testing the qualities of this wonderful all round extinguisher, with a view to interesting myself in it——" Matt began, when Nancy interrupted him impatiently.

"We've heard all about Sylvia, May," said she. "You might have told us sooner."

"I had hoped that by this time there would be some news of her," said May, "and I thought I might as well spare you both anxiety. I've just been telephoning from the garage."

"That's how I happened to hear it," said Nancy. "Mr. Holmes has got a crazy idea that she's been kidnapped."

May looked at Matt thoughtfully. "Well," said she, "I'm not sure that it's so crazy. The same thing has occurred to me.

"But how could she have been?" demanded Nancy.

"Easily enough," May answered. "She has a habit of paddling along the shore at night, and a speed launch might have been lurking in the shadows and slipped up alongside and grabbed her."

"Then chucked some rocks into the canoe and ripped a hole in it, and let it sink," added Matt.

"Precisely," said May. "But if that is what has happened, it is a ransom job, of course, and we should soon hear about it."

"I think I'll get in the car and run over to the Gates'," said Uncle Jerry. "The idea may not have occurred to them, and while it's pretty bad it's better than believing her to be drowned. Want to come, May?"

"I've sent Murphy off in the launch to join in the search," said May, "but Nancy can drive you."

"Matthew is going to pay us a little visit, my dear," said Uncle Jerry a bit nervously.

May raised her eyebrows. "That will be very nice," said she without enthusiasm, "where is his luggage?"

"I haven't brought any," said Matt. "You see, I'd only come to call, but since you all insist on my staying I would be delighted. There must be a few of my things somewhere in the house."

"I'm afraid that Nancy got them together and sent them to your apartment in town," said May.

"That was very thoughtful of Nancy," said Matt, "but no doubt I can borrow of Uncle Jerry until I have time to run in and get what I need. We are just of a size."

Uncle Jerry's deep set eyes ran over the athletic proportions of his nephew with an air of approval. "Just about," said he, in a tone of satisfaction. "I won't be needing my golf and riding things for some time, I'm afraid."

"Nonsense, uncle," said Matt cheerfully, "we'll have you out on the links before you know it. Nancy plays, of course, so we've just got a good foursome. We can play a dollar a hole and keep all the money in the family."

"This is scarcely the moment to talk about golf," said Nancy. "It is dreadful to think we can't do anything to help."

Uncle Jerry made an effort to rise briskly, then clapped his hand to the small of his back and sank back with a groan and a strong but smothered word.

"That cursed lumbago again," said he.

"You sat here too long listening to Mr. Holmes' amusing fiction," said Nancy. "It's getting chilly and I think you'd better go in." She looked at Matt. "If Mr. Holmes has nothing better to do, we might run over to Sylvia's and he can give Mr. Gates the benefit of his author's imagination.

Matt grinned inwardly, perceiving in this suggestion an admission that the girl was impressed despite herself. He had not greatly objected to Nancy's stringencies. In fact, he preferred girls of whom the cosmos contained its due quota of ego and with a dash of spice. It made the game of man and girl more pungent, and added luster to the pinions in the wings of victory.

"The chances are they've thought of it already," said he, "but it can't do any harm to go."

The plan was therefore put into immediate execution. Uncle Jerry started for the house in a somewhat crumpled manner, brusquely declining Matt's assistance and stating that the stab of lumbago would quickly pass. Nancy and Matt walked down to the garage, the girl with a chip on her shoulder, as one might say, and Matt with the amiable insouciance of a dog fox trotting warily beside a new made vixen acquaintance. Arrived at the edifice, which was new and spacious and housed at this moment a sedan car, also new, a touring car of some years' earlier model, and a Ford for marketing and domestic service, Matt's eyes lightened a little to discover also a motorcycle with a side car standing in a corner.

"Whose perambulator is that?" he asked.

"Mine," said Nancy, and added a little shortly, "a graduation present from May and Mr. Taylor." Her blue eyes brimmed suddenly again. "Sylvia and I came here from college with it."

"Used to ride a motorcycle myself," said Matt. "More fun than a car, but wearing if anything gets out of whack."

"We'll take the sedan," said Nancy, and, stepping into it, seated herself at the wheel. Matt opined that she was the sort of girl that would be apt to take the wheel through life, or until convinced by some uncommon episode that whoever she might have victimized as her life's companion was better equipped for its direction than herself. And Matt was also of the opinion that such conviction would require a considerable amount of doing.

They rolled out upon the road, and, after having covered some furlongs in silence, Matt ventured to remark in his pleasant voice, "Uncle Jerry seems astonishingly fit."

"Why shouldn't he be?" replied Nancy. "He's got the best care that is humanly possible and a companionship that he always secretly longed for and——" she turned and fixed Matt with a challenging stare, "and love."

"That," said Matt, "is undeniably evident," and at the kindling look in the girl's blue eyes, he added, "Why not? Uncle Jerry is not really old, and underneath his affected harshness he is kind and lovable, and he is and was and always will be a cultured gentleman and very much of a man"

Nancy's red lip curled a little, but the hardness of her eyes appeared to soften.

"That sounds well from you," said she, "when a few months ago you hoped that he would die."

"I did not hope that he would die," said Matt evenly. "I was informed by the highest and most expert authority that he was dying, and I made my plans accordingly. Anybody would have done the same."

"Then," said Nancy, ignoring his remark, "you tried to prevent his marrying May."

"I plead guilty," said Matt. "It was impossible for me to know that May might be able to save his life and I was unable to perceive the sense or justice of a death bed marriage. I considered that as his nearest of kin my expectations from him had more ethical right than those of his trained nurse, whatever her merits."

"May knew that she could get him well, and that the doctors were wrong," said Nancy.

"Well, I didn't," Matt retorted. "A layman is more apt to take the assurance of leading specialists than of a nurse—especially when the latter doesn't see fit to offer any."

"You might have gone about it more decently," Nancy murmured.

Matt sat up very straight. "That'll do, Nancy," said he. "Now, see here. Suppose Uncle Jerry were to die suddenly, and May find herself a very rich widow. Then what if she got ill and the doctors gave her up and on her death bed she wanted to marry some young cub of a medico that had been detailed for her bedside care. What would you do about it?"

"I'd—I'd——" she stopped.

"Say it out," said Matt. "Honestly, now, what would you do?"

"I don't know," said Nancy coldly, then the corners of her lips curled up a little. They quivered as though wrestling to hold down a smile. "But whatever I saw fit to do I'd make a better job of it than you did."

"Quite so," said Matt. "Until today I have been telling myself that the only thing to criticize about my efforts was their dismal failure."

"Why until today?"

"Because I've changed my mind," said Matt. "I'm glad now it all turned out precisely as it has."

Nancy glanced at him with disbelief. "Why?" she asked.

"Because for the first time I believe what you say, that May really loves Uncle Jerry, and I'm rather fond of the old boy myself. I'd really a lot rather have Uncle Jerry than his money. But when I believed it was all up with Uncle Jerry it seemed to me that I had a right to the money instead."

Nancy looked at him again, flushed, mother plays the better cards. In the long run, I believe we enjoy being smoothed down more than we enjoy being rumpled up. I believe," he knocked the ash off his cigar with care; "I believe that your vogue will be fairly brief."

"It's not a vogue," she said hotly. "It's emancipation."

"Who is emancipated?" he asked.

"Why, everybody is. We're all through with the silly old bondages of every description. We're all breathing freely. And we'll never go back and suffocate." She looked at him defiantly.

"Yet it isn't two hours," he reminded her, "since I heard you suffocating your mother."

"What are you talking about?"

"I'm talking about the Woodworths. She likes them. They suit her. You not merely don't like them yourself, but you won't let her have them in peace. You called them those awful Woodworths in my presence, and took all the joy out of poor Helène's evening. As I heard you do it I was dramatizing your own daughter, trying to break the bonds of your tyrannical generation. Of course, I don't mind Locksley Fenimore myself. He's all right in his way. But your children's friends won't stand for him one minute, I give you my word."

"What's the matter with Locksley Fenimore?" Genevieve's eyes were on him, frankly hostile.

"From my point of view, nothing at all. He's interesting to me, just as many objects interest me in my laboratory. I like to see them do things. It doesn't matter much what. I can look at him and go my way. Take him or leave him, as I like. I believe," he said pleasantly, "eventually, I believe I should leave Locksley."

"Why?"

"Well," he considered. "Of course, we are all egotists, more or less. We all want the center of the stage, some of the time. You and Locksley and the rest of you constantly see life as a drama with yourselves as the heroes. Now—that's all right, of course. That's just the way your mother sees it much of the time, and I, and everybody. Only your mother, for instance, is a clever woman. She always contrives that the person with whom she talks shall know that he is the center of the stage—at least while he is with her. Locksley and you"—he paused. "Well—in time, you know, the rest of us will want our moment in the spotlight. And just then we will become ruthless. We will relegate you, not because you aren't perfectly all right in your way, but because you have become such a bore."

"A bore!" Genevieve sat erect on the edge of her chair. Plainly, the idea was inconceivable.

"A bore, Uncle Austen!" she repeated.

"A bore," he reaffirmed, smiling.

It was a relief to hear Austen Junior's gay baritone at the street door just then announcing that he was the monarch of all he surveyed and none should say him nay.

"Particularly," he continued in an impassioned recitative, at the door of the living room, "shall none stay me from attending thee, O beauteous maiden, to the confines of thine ancestral castle whenever thou gettese ready."

Genevieve rose.

"I am boring Uncle Austen to death," she said rather coldly. "I'll run along, but you don't need to bother. I can manage."

Austen Junior was clear, however, that she could not manage. The purple coat, the purple hat, the purple scarf were brought and arranged with their usual carefully considered casualness, and Austen Junior, warbling protective arias, bore her forth, after somewhat reserved good nights were exchanged with Uncle Austen.

He was still smiling into the oak embers over it when Agnes returned. She stood beside him a moment, her wraps about her.

"Did you straighten everybody out?" she asked. He laughed.

"No, I mortally offended everyone. I told Helène that she had crowsfeet. She's hunting for them at this moment. And I told Genevieve that she was a bore."

Agnes looked at him.

"Well, of course she is," she said judicially. "But she'll never forgive you. Has Austen come in?"

"He's gone home with Genevieve."

There was a moment's silence, in which the attempted lightness of his tone sounded hollow against the fear that suddenly bulked itself between them.

"Austen!" Agnes breathed at last in a little voice. "How could you?"

They looked at each other. In Agnes' eyes there was deadly terror. He kicked angrily at the charred end of the oak log that lay upon the hearth.

"For heaven's sake!" he cried, "why not?" He was irritable because of his own fear. "Junior's not a baby."

Agnes pressed her hands to her eyes.

"O! But she is so—so—cruel. It amuses her so to play with the fine young creatures—make them less fine. She degrades them, then she throws them away. She calculates it all, so horribly. And Junior hasn't any weapons against that. He won't understand."

She was walking up and down now, twisting her hands about each other. As she passed him once he caught her.

"Don't worry, mother," he said gently. She looked at him with eyes from which tears were starting.

"She's angry with you. You piqued her especial vanity. She'll show you whether she's a bore or not. And I cannot bear it." Agnes again sobbed against his shoulder.

As he looked bitterly into the embers he told himself that Junior was all right. He might not understand, but his instincts were his best weapons. And his instincts were decent. After all, he was Agnes' child. And Genevieve's game was so crude, she was so frankly predatory, that even at nineteen Agnes' child, and his, would be armed against her.

"Don't worry," he said again, and laughed.

Presently, Agnes found some sewing, and sat under the lamp, beside him, while he read. The oak logs whispered comfortably in the fire place. Furtively behind his book, he looked at his watch. They had been gone only half an hour. Hardly time yet for Junior to be back. He looked at Agnes' face, tranquil now, over her sewing, and told himself not to be feminine.

The next three quarters of an hour dragged. Through its final ten minutes he had not turned a page. At the end of an hour and a half Agnes' sewing was in her lap and they were staring at each other. Wretchedly, he was admitting to himself that he had been wrong. He had given an angered egotist the weapons for her ugliest revenge. He had succeeded in Helène's mission. Genevieve, he knew, would not think of Locksley Fenimore again. But at what price? Junior would go through some sort of a debasing intrigue with Genevieve. He would never again be clear eyed. The wretchedness of it flooding over him, he bowed his head in his hands. What a horrible day it had been! And how horribly, in the end, he had blundered!

"Agnes!" he groaned, "forgive me." She laid a cold hand on his.

"Don't worry," she said, gently.

How long they sat he did not know. Into the waiting stillness of the room there came finally stealthy sounds at the front door. Furtive hands turned the knob, and softly closed the door again. In the tense quiet, while Agnes once again got her sewing and Austen found his chapter, they could hear an overcoat coming off, and careful tiptoeing down the hall. At the door of the living room the tiptoeing paused. As he read, apparently absorbed in his book, Austen could feel his son standing behind him in the doorway. What fevered revelation there might be in Junior's eyes, he could only guess. He could not lift his own.

"Well, of all the humbugs!" remarked the disgusted voice of Austen Junior. "I supposed, of course, you'd gone to bed. And here you sit. One splendidly stealthy entrance wasted!"

He strode in and sat himself on the arm of Agnes' chair.

"Decent women are not abroad at this hour," he said. "It's nearly midnight."

Austen looked at his watch.

"By Jove!" he said with astonishment. "Where has the evening gone?"

"I'll tell you," said Junior, "where an hour and a half of it has gone. After depositing your friend safely, sez I to myself, it is a bully night, and why not walk back? Which accordingly took place. The long way around, across the bridge. And there, in the moonlight, on the bridge, at midnight or thereabouts, I had a remarkable idea. We're doing stresses and strains just now, and it sort of come to me——" Junior, turning his vivid gaze upon his father, began to expound a theory. Austen, giving outwardly absorbed attention, in reality barely heard. Within, he both laughed and wept. He had hung over abysses of remorse for an hour. As he drew back from the brink, life looked jubilant. He nodded wisely as his son talked of parabolas, and strength of materials, and drew arcs in the air.

"I think there's something in it," he said, when Junior paused. "A whole lot in it. You go right after it."

"I'm going right after a few of those doughnuts rumor reports to be in the pantry," said Junior. "Nothing like six doughnuts before retiring to keep up the strength of the human structure."

As he went through the swinging door, Agnes asked evenly.

"Did you and Genevieve have a nice talk?"

Austen lingered, leaning against the door jamb.

"Just between ourselves," he said, "she makes me tired."

Austen stared at him.

"I thought she was quite an interesting girl," he said. "What's the matter with her?"

Junior in embarrassment kicked the brass that protected the corner of the door.

"Hasn't she got herself rather on her mind?" he asked. "Still, perhaps that's natural, at her age."

"At her age!" cried Agnes. "How old do you think Genevieve is?"

"O, twenty-six or seven," Austen Junior hazarded. "Old enough to be kind of on the prowl."

"On the what?" inquired his father.

Austen Junior colored up in some embarrassment.

"Well, of course, I apologize. But you see, when you're young life looks pretty darned interesting. Now Genevieve—well—she's kind of in a past generation. She seems to me to have tried everything out, and have just come around back to herself. She's out for Genevieve, first, last, and all the time. I'll say it again," and he threw his head back in some defiance. "She's on the prowl, and she makes me tired."

He took his long figure through the swinging door. They could hear him opening drawers and putting the lid back on the stone cooky jar, singing softly meanwhile. Austen leaned forward and caught his wife's fingers.

"Dear mother!" he said, gently, laying his cheek against the back of her hand. He could feel it trembling as he kissed it, softly. "Dear mother!" he said, again.

frowned, took another look, and did not appear to be convinced.

"I wish that I could be sure you are telling the truth," said she.

Matt's eyes hardened. "It's not at all necessary," said he, "and after all I doubt if you would be able to manage it."

"Why?" Nancy asked.

"Because," said Matt deliberately, "it is practically impossible for an individual whose honesty holds the slightest flaw to believe in the truth of anybody."

Nancy turned this maxim in her mind, and, to judge from the expression of her face and the slowly rising flood of crimson which swept over it, found it absolutely indigestible.

"I think, Mr. Holmes," said she, "that after that we have nothing more to say to each other."

"As you like," said Matt indifferently; "only permit me to point out that you asked for it and you got it."

For about a mile there was no noise save the purring hum of the machinery. Then, as though having gradually worked herself up to a sublime gesture of self-immolation on the altar of justice, Nancy turned to Matt and said:

"I apologize, Mr. Holmes."

"I have the honor to accept your apology, Miss Upton," Matt answered cheerfully. "I beg, therefore, to retract my own last observation."

"And you really believe that May married him because she loved him and was sure that she could make him well again?"

"Of course I do," said Matt heartily. "You see, Nancy, while the blending of May and December is generally acknowledged as a treacherous combination, it does not apply in the case of your sister and my uncle. He is still a far cry from December, and she is June rather than May. O, come," he went on in his pleasing voice, "Uncle Jerry is only fifty and odd, and his wife about thirty, I should say."

"Thirty-two," Nancy murmured.

"Well, that's a couple of years better. Uncle Jerry is a big, strong man who perhaps because of his very vitality managed to stand off the slam that most concentrated business men of his sort get in the forties. He's in September rather than December, and you get lots of June days in September."

"If you could write as well as you talk," said Nancy grudgingly, "you wouldn't have to take up selling fire extinguishers."

"Thanks," said Matt, always ready to drink gratefully the milk of the cocoanut and disregard the rough husk, "but perhaps my smooth talk might sell more extinguishers than my faltering pen did books. Besides it is a more elevating profession selling extinguishers, the deus protectrix of the home, the guardian genii of the little ones while they sleep. The defender of life and property against the fire devils and the confusion of the sneaking hound with arson in his heart and the rampant red with his brandished torch. It is hard to think of anything nobler than the distribution of extinguishers like mine."

With such pleasant converse Matt sought to distract his companion's mind from her anxiety until they reached the newly pretentious Gates estate. Here they found that peculiar sort of hushed and hectic tension with intermittent bursts of impatience or despair to be expected of such a situation. Quite a number of people, friends and neighbors and reporters who had swooped down like kites from the blue and police and others, were collected in little groups discussing the affair and waiting the news from the searching squadron. Voices were hushed as though there had been a tragedy and its victim within the house instead of nobody could hazard where.

Nancy and Matt parked the car behind a string of others and went to the front door, where Nancy was informed by a man servant stationed there as a sort of sentry that Mr. Gates was in his study in consultation with an aviator who had arrived and was to be sent out to skin the surface of the bay. It was by this time about four o'clock, the middle of July, and the afternoon calm had as yet been unruffled by a draft of air.

The young aviator came out as they were standing there, Mr. Gates following him, and at sight of his daughter's chum the harassed father held out both hands. He was a heavy man well past middle age, rather typical of the prosperous American manufacturer, kind and jovial by nature, yet shrewd in business. At this moment his fleshy face, with eyes red rimmed from tears or loss of sleep or both, showed the effects of the ordeal through which he was passing.

"Can we speak to you a moment privately, Mr. Gates?" Nancy asked. "This is Mr. Holmes, Mr. Taylor's nephew."

"Yes, come right in," said the stricken father, giving Matt a limp hand and a nod.

He led the way into his study and offered them chairs, then sank into one himself. "This strain has nearly finished me," said he, "but I can't rest until something definite is reported."

Nancy leaned forward. "Has any one suggested that it might be a case of kidnaping?"

"O, yes," he answered, wearily. "That's all been threshed out and thrown in the discard. In the first place, Sylvia would have kept close under the lee of the shore with that puffy breeze coming off the land, and as the night was fine after the shower in the afternoon, people were moving about and somebody would have heard her scream. She's a big, strong girl and could not have been grabbed up like a child without a struggle." He looked at Matt. "As you probably know, the properties adjoin along the shore and the houses are not far apart. Besides, if she'd been kidnaped the chances are that we'd have got some news of it in the course of the day and been warned not to interfere until a ransom had been paid. We fear the worst." He slumped down in his chair with a haggard, mottled face.

"But she's such a splendid swimmer and so used to her canoe," Nancy protested.

"The best of swimmers sometimes come to grief," muttered Mr. Gaes.

"But the canoe, sir," said Matt.

"What we fear is this," said Mr. Gates. "When the wind happened to be strong or puffy, Sylvia was in the habit of putting a couple of sand bags in the bow to trim it down and keep it from blowing off. We think that she may have broken her paddle while making a vigorous stroke and pitched overboard, capsizing the canoe, which filled and sank. Then in swimming ashore she may have been taken with cramp, for the water is still very cold and she had just eaten a hearty dinner."

Matt shook his head. "I don't believe it, sir," said he. "If what you describe had

SURVIVALS

Blue Ribbon Fiction

The Generation That Strives to Please Collides with the Generation That Prefers to Shock.

HELENE BIXBY'S monogrammed note paper slipped from the envelope into her old friend's hand. The old friend sighed. For fifteen years that square envelope, that flowing script, that monogram had spelled ill omen in the morning mail. Howard Bixby's death, the disentangling of his affairs, unjust landlords, troubles with drainage, with pastors, with rights of way, with Genevieve's tendency to sore throat, with unsatisfactory investments, with neighbors whose dogs trampled the flower beds, all had come heralded by the pale blue of Helène Bixby's elected stationery. The old friend paused to indulge in forebodings. What would the trouble be this time? Then gallantly, because he had long since accepted Helène as part payment on his inexpiable debt to Howard, he slit the envelope and read.

After all, it was only an invitation to have tea with her on Thursday. She knew the thousand demands upon his time. But his unfailing generosity made her trespass once again. There was a matter upon which she needed his wisdom.

The old friend looked at his calendar. This was Thursday. He telephoned, and apprised the voice invisibly responding that he would be by Mrs. Bixby's fireside at five that afternoon. He wrote the engagement into his little red note book, slipped it into his waistcoat pocket, said "Come in" to the knock upon his office door, and temporarily forgot Helène.

The tall sophomore who followed the knock was in trouble. He had been the inspiration behind the painting green of certain lanterns last night. The green paint had gone farther than had been foreseen. Certain steps and a doorway, emerald in the morning sunshine, betrayed the illegal activities of the night. Helène's old friend was not on a faculty disciplinary committee. The sophomore had merely come in for a friendly talk.

"I guess it's up to me to do something," he ventured, an experimental eye upon his friend.

"You did the painting?" The sophomore hesitated, then indicated that there might have been a few others mixed up with it. But it had been his idea. Of course, if the committee once started to investigate it might miss him altogether and penalize the others, which would be unfair.

"Well," counseled his friend. "If you hunted the committees up first and took all the responsibility it would probably lose interest in the possible others."

It was a good idea. The sophomore arose, visibly relieved.

"Good-by, professor," he said. "Thanks very much."

Helène's friend looked after his sleek head as it disappeared. The instincts of these young cubs were all right. He could hear the discussion in the faculty committee. Williams would say vandalism a great many times and vote for expulsion. Jefferson, on the other hand, would think it was funny and vote to pay no attention to the affair. Sommer would say it was a matter for the students themselves to handle. Hayes would point out that when the newspapers got hold of it it would have a bad effect on the state. The state was not sending its young people up here to learn to destroy state property. The state would reflect this act in the next legislative appropriation. He would vote to make all concerned a glaring example.

Helène's friend sighed. He hoped his sophomore would be prompt. Then he said "Come in" to a knock on the door.

The girl who followed the knock was perplexed. She was, she told him, up in the air over her freshman laboratory.

"He tells us to ask ourselves questions and discover the answers," she complained.

"And you want a manual saying, 'Look at this spot. See this object. Write down that you saw it.'"

Yes, that was exactly what she wanted. She beamed at him.

"Well," said Helène's friend, "I can't blame you. It's what is generally called teaching. But, to my mind," and he beamed in return, "it's really forcible feeding. Painful. And in the long run inefficient."

It was the beginning of a half hour's talk. At the end of it the girl's eyes were large with the excitement of a new idea. She had always supposed a teacher was an institution created to drive information into the resistant surface of a student. Here was the revolutionary idea that a student was one who made life stand and deliver itself. The student was the pursuer.

"It's a great game," he told her. "You want to play it for all it's worth."

She went away with a quickened step. Helène's friend looked at his watch. He was due at his Seminar. The Seminar was a group of young creatures very dear to him. They were vividly alert to the excitement of being alive in a world in which the riddle of life was always just beyond analysis. Today there was to be talk about Light Reactions. Woods, the education man, would be present, his nose in the air. Woods did not exactly deny light reactions. He merely deplored drawing inferences from them. It wouldn't do to make beings seem too mechanical. If you did, what was to become of the soul? It was all right for young people to look into these things. But all he had to say was. "Go slow."

After the Seminar, in which Woods was unusually deprecatory, and it fell to Helène's friend to do an uncommon amount of untangling, there was the department luncheon. It was his business at the noon hour to centralize the purpose and kindle the enthusiasm of some dozen associates.

After the luncheon there was a lecture and a two hour laboratory. These were not in his case perfunctory. He gave the best of himself, leaving, fairly fagged, at four to attend a faculty committee discussing problems of university organization. On the whole, faculty committees worked with an intelligence that compared favorably with that of committees of business men with whom Helène's friend often sat. They deliberated more, acted less impetuously. When they acted it tended to be from knowledge. Yet, as all things are relative, and faculty committees, like all others, composed of human beings, all these qualities produced in their own degree their own weakness. The faculty committee, strongly deliberative, had not acted at all when Helène's friend looked at his watch and saw that in fifteen minutes she would be waiting for him.

He let her wait an extra quarter of an hour in order to hear through an impassioned debate over democratic versus autocratic organization of departments. At a little after five he sat by Helène's fire and saw her delicate hands playing over the teacups.

As he sat he recognized that he was tired. It had been a futile day. He was supposed to be a physiologist. Popular fancy pictured him one of the fortunate, sequestered from the maddening throng, buried among his reagents and his smelly experiments, happily dreaming scholarly dreams, while the wicked and ignorant old world rocked in passion beyond the sound proof walls of his laboratory. In reality he had not known three consecutive solitary moments since eight o'clock. His one o'clock lecture lay upon his conscience. It was all right in a way. But the subject was moving by him. While he ran other people's errands the great forces of living truth were marshaling themselves far in advance of him. He sat back weary, not with work, but with the centrifugal pulls dragging him in a thousand directions. Helène's hands, meanwhile, delicately pretty and glitteringly ringed, hovered over the cups, doing their beautiful share of dragging at him.

"You are such a dear, Austen," she said. "There isn't any one but you to help me. Nobody else would understand. Two lumps, isn't it?"

"And make it strong," he added. Helène's eyebrows went up

"That means you're tired out. And here I am, asking something more of you."

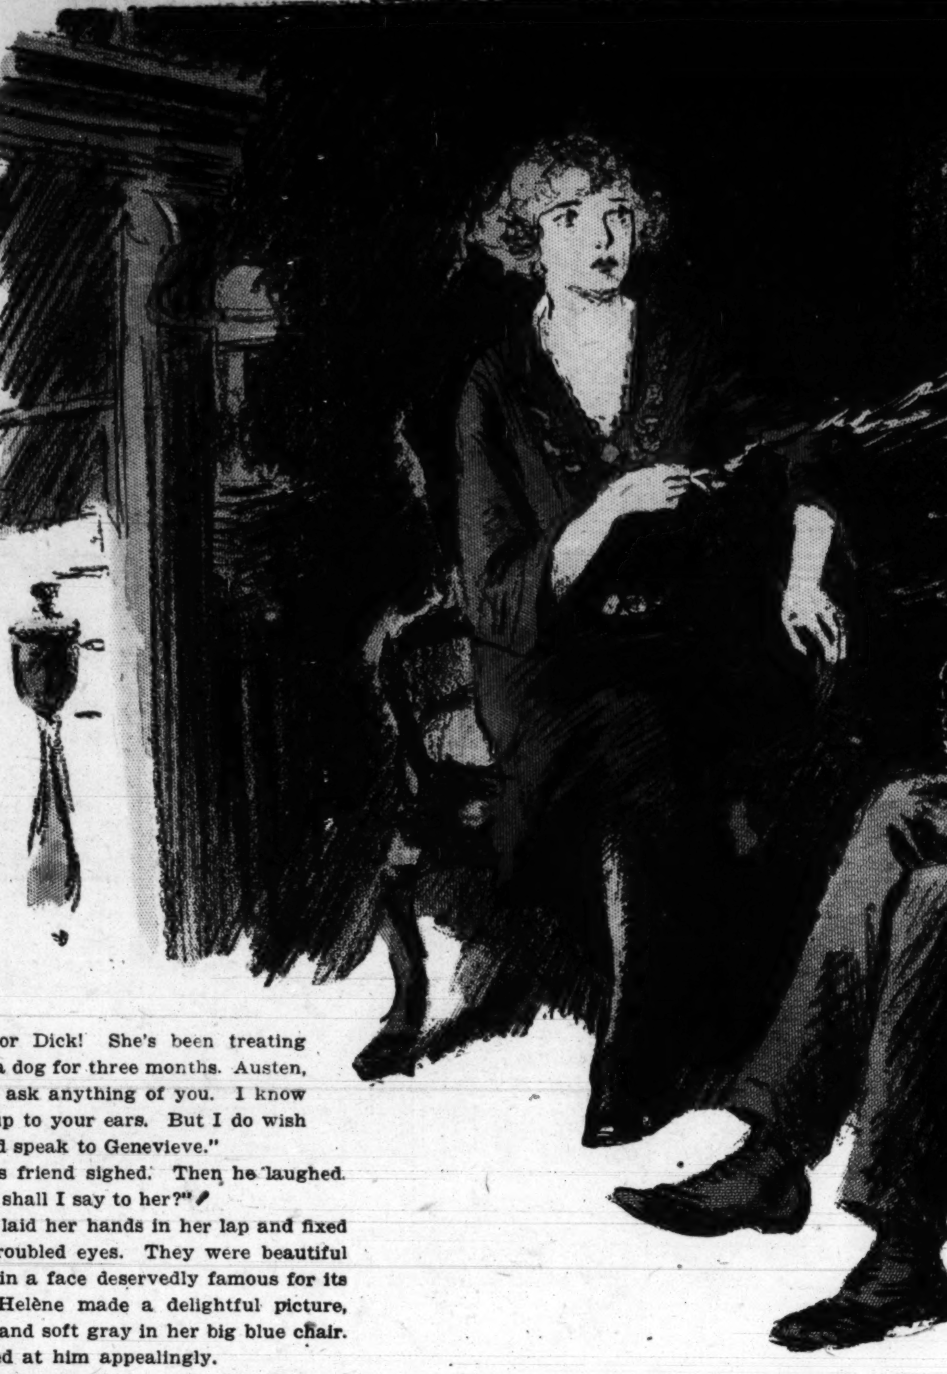
"Genevieve?" he smiled at her over an excellent piece of toast. After all, Helène made things wonderfully comfortable. Her eyes paid him astonished tribute.

"How could you guess it? I think you are marvelous."

"I saw her at the concert last night with a new captive."

"That poet," said Helène, with infinite distaste. "Isn't he dreadful? His finger nails are beyond belief."

"Is Cameron deposed?" Cameron was the last year's football star.



"We will relegate you," said Uncle Austen, all right in your way, but because you
"A bore!" Genevieve

"O, poor Dick! She's been treating him like a dog for three months. Austen, I hate to ask anything of you. I know you are up to your ears. But I do wish you would speak to Genevieve."

Helène's friend sighed. Then he laughed.

"What shall I say to her?"

Helène laid her hands in her lap and fixed on him troubled eyes. They were beautiful eyes, set in a face deservedly famous for its charm. Helène made a delightful picture, all silver and soft gray in her big blue chair. She looked at him appealingly.

"Austen, I wish I knew. There isn't anything I can say. I'm sure I don't know what anybody can say to her. Perhaps what I really want is to have you hear what she has to say to you. Of course, I am an old woman." She paused imperceptibly.

"Never!" He roused himself to protest.

Helène dimpled. She could not resist even a tardy compliment.

"Well—you are very sweet. But I am. I never was modern, you know. Suffrage, or anything like that. I've tried to be a mother and keep Genevieve nicely dressed, and I'm sure I tried to have her properly educated—thanks, of course, always to you. But, Austen, you know, really, she seems to be quite beyond me. It isn't that I mind her being a decorator. The war made me see that the young woman of today must have her own life. I don't object at all to that. And I think her studio is nice, and lovely for teas. She has talent, too."

"Genevieve is a clever girl."

Helène played with her sapphire ring.

"Do you think she—do you suppose there is such a thing as being too clever? Of course, she is cleverer than I am. Every one is. I am not clever at all."

"That is why," he said, with a certain degree of sincerity, "you are so irresistible." Hèlene dropped her eyelashes. She conveyed without blushing the effect of having blushed.

"You always say such nice things, Austen. But, seriously. It seems to me that Genevieve is getting so clever she is actually—well—queer!"

Helène brought out the word in a desperate climax. Her friend suppressed his smile. That would, of course, be the difficulty. No crime, he knew, equaled in Helène's lovely eyes the crime of being queer. She went on.

"Austen, I am afraid she is going to get herself—well—talked about. And there isn't one thing I can say. She tells me I am of a past generation. Of course, that is perfectly true—in a way." Her eyes hung upon him.

"Beauty," said her friend, "is eternal."

Helène accepted this, with a fleeting look of acknowledgment.

"At any rate, Austen, it's perfectly useless to tell her that in my day nice girls did not do such things."

"Of course." Austen held out his cup for replenishment. Helène looked at him.

"Do you mean that? Don't you think a girl ought to be guided by the advice of her mother?"

Austen watched the two lumps dissolving in his fresh cup.

"Has she asked for it?"

"Mercy, Austen! If I waited till she asked for it——"

"Well," he said slowly, "isn't it a practical question? What a girl ought to be guided by and what she is guided by—aren't the two things sometimes different, in spite of what we might desire?"

Unexpectedly, Helène's eyes filled.

"It's rather hard, Austen, when I've always had so much deference. I suppose I have been spoiled."

Her friend looked at her. What she said was quite true. Her world paid Helène extraordinary deference. It was not entirely Howard's money that bought it. Howard, too, had always been at her feet.

"I pay her extraordinary deference myself," he admitted, amused at the admission. He had always thought Helène a goose, a remarkably pretty goose, but a goose. Yet he paid her extravagant compliments, and in effect threw his mantle before her feet at every muddy crossing. Every one, as he thought it over, did the same thing. Women long since had paid her the marked deference of electing her czarina of local society. Mrs. Howard Bixby's name was the magic by which every dance, Red Cross drive, debutante reception, or college festivity hoped to gain itself prestige. He had it, on authority of his wife, Agnes, that her name was all Helène Bixby ever gave to these things.

"O, a cheque, of course. But when they want hard work done," she said, candidly, "they come to women in ground grippers, like me."

He looked at Helène thoughtfully. He knew she had not fought for this deference. She had kept remarkably the air of letting it come of itself. As she sat, now, carefully harmonious, in her big blue chair, her blue eyes, tear wet, upon him, her little foot in its gray suede shoe upon its footstool of blue velvet, he said to himself that, goose or not, Helène staged herself wonderfully.

It must have shocked her beyond measure to have deference refused her by Genevieve, of all people.

"Our children," he smiled at her, "are too close to us, aren't they? We look pretty fine from the gallery seats. But the people in the parquet see the crow's-feet under the grease paint."

Helène's eyes gave him a horrified look.

"Crow's-feet," she gasped. Then she laughed slightly. "O, I see. You're talking in metaphors, or whatever you call them. Well, it seems to me that makes it all the worse." Her color rose, a little angrily, and the small foot tapped its footstool. Her friend knew that he had blundered. He looked at his watch and got hastily to his feet.

"Wretched man that I am," he said. "I am about to be late to dinner." Helène looked appealingly up at him.

"How Agnes must hate me! I am always making you late to dinner." The idea gave her, he could see, profound consolation.

"No one could ever hate you," he brought out, he hoped, quickly enough. Helène smiled upon him and rose.

"And you will help me about Genevieve," she pleaded. "You are so analytical. You know, Austen, I can't analyze. But," her lips trembled, as she brought out, "I can't help feeling things."

"I'll do what I can," he promised.

"You will talk to her?"

"Well," he hesitated—"I'll see that she talks to me."

"O, of course, that is much better. And you will do it soon, won't you? I have a feeling that Genevieve has some horrid ideas in her mind just now."

"Such as what?"

Helène shrugged her beautiful shoulders. The ideas were much too horrid, she conveyed, for her to phrase. But Genevieve would phrase them in a minute.

The two stood with the air of conspirators as the door far down the hallway banged and a boyish whistle came nearer, in advance of the figure that in a moment waved a hand to them from the archway.

"Hello, people," said Genevieve. "Isn't this nice, Uncle Austen? Staying to dinner?"

"I'm sorry," said Helène's friend. "I haven't been asked."

"O, Austen!" wailed Helène. "You are always. You know you are. Do stay. The Woodworths are coming and the Jimmy Davises."

"The Woodworths!" cried Genevieve. "Not those horrible Woodworths?"

"Why, darling! Don't talk so about my friends. The Woodworths are the nicest people in this town."

"Uncle Austen," begged Genevieve, "please ask me to go home with you. The Woodworths make me laugh so. They're so dull. Couldn't I come home with you? I don't really care a thing about eating. But I will not live through a dinner with the Woodworths."

She took him home in her small car, which she managed skillfully. Uncle Austen, who dreaded the nervous driving of most women, leaned back, enjoying the control with which she threaded in and out among the traffic, losing the minimum of time, yet staying by a hair's breadth within legal limitations.

"You drive well," he said presently.

She shot him a quick glance.

"Praise from the emperor. Think I can let her out a little in this straightaway. You keep an eye out for the cop."

He watched her, covertly keeping the eye out, meanwhile, as directed. Her profile, showing cameolike against her purple hat and scarf, was well designed by nature in one of her best inspirations. Genevieve had taken a hand obviously in later improvements, using a lip stick and, he suspected, having her eyebrows pulled out. Or perhaps they were shaved. At any rate, he remembered when they had been broad and black, and rather impressive above her big green gray eyes. Now they were a thin arched line, well above the eye socket. To Uncle Austen's eye, nature had been the better decorator. Her purple suit, well cut and expensive, rumpled as she slouched well down on the end of her backbone. He reflected that Helène, straight backed and slim, must shudder at her daughter's barrel-like silhouette.

He sensed, several times, throughout the dinner to which Agnes gave them tranquil welcome, that Helène probably shuddered whenever she looked at Genevieve. The purple coat once off, a smock of purple chiffon was revealed. A good deal of torso was evident, and what little Genevieve wore under the chiffon blouse was low cut in front as well as behind. There were jade pendants in her ears, there was woolen embroidery in orange and green, and there was a necklace of Chinese jade offering refuge to any eye that sought to evade full verification of anatomical fact.

He could see the eye of Frances, his thirteen year old daughter, taking absolute refuge in the green woolen birds and woolen poppies that bloomed upon Genevieve's diaphanous purple bosom. Frances, he reflected, was not as yet intrigued by flesh. Austen Junior, he watched with some covert anxiety. Austen Junior was nineteen. Every moment of his nineteen years had marked in his father's consciousness a fresh epoch in the miracle of himself and Agnes. Even yet, the long habit of married life between them as they faced each other at the candle lighted dinner table, he could not look across at her without a throb of thankfulness and ecstasy. She had been so perfect to him always, the sense of her so unfailingly had meant restfulness and affection, that no habit could dull for him the wonder of her existence. At Austen Junior, who for nineteen years had lived the patent bond between them, he had never been able to look without at least the memory of that catching of the breath with which he had first seen his face.

"I suppose Junior's just an ordinary boy," he told Agnes often enough as the boy grew before them. "But I do like him most extraordinarily."

As his son sat beside Frances, facing Genevieve's tremulous pendants and greening parrots, Austen caught himself, more than once in the intervals of laugh and talk that went about the table, searching the boy's face. He felt that he could not bear any cloud upon that clear glance of his son's eyes, in which he had always found comfort. No eyes, looking at life with that directness, could conceal anything furtive behind their steadiness. It almost seemed impossible to him, however, that any adolescent boy could face Genevieve without furtiveness. Yet as dinner flowed on smoothly, helped to its ease, he realized, by Agnes, perfect as always, no furtiveness appeared. After dinner Agnes remembered that she was to sit with a neighbor's baby until ten o'clock. And Frances had a paper to write on the early life of the Romans. Austen Junior found his hat. He was awfully sorry there was the glee club tonight.

"But I'll be back in time to get you safely home," he told Genevieve at parting. It was not furtive. Yet his father knew a bad moment, as he found a seat for Genevieve opposite him, beside the hearth.

"Mind if I smoke?" she said, looking about the quiet room. Austen found the cigarettes, and they smoked for a few moments in silence. Austen waited.

"It's nice here," Genevieve said finally, knocking her ash off into the oak embers. "Think of the awful Woodworths!" She sighed and Austen let another silence come between them. Genevieve found a fresh cigarette.

"I suppose," she began at last, "mother wants you to speak to me," Austen laughed.

"What makes you think that?"

"O, I saw the symptoms. Tear wet lashes, air of guilty innocence, as I entered. Poor old Uncle Austen!" She smiled at him. "I'm a terrible care to you." In her smile he almost saw a replica of Helène's satisfaction over Agnes. Helène, he thought swiftly, built up a universe about herself in which all women had cause for jealousy. Genevieve, on the other hand, fancied herself an enfant terrible.

"Not at all," he said heartily. "I only hope you're enjoying this quiet smoke as well as I am." This was a trifle wicked. Genevieve's smoking, he more than suspected, was somewhat heroic, necessary for her pose, but in itself distasteful. As if to confirm his theory, she let her cigarette die out, gesturing with it gracefully as she talked.

"Well, I'm glad to have a chance to discuss things a little with you if you don't mind. Of course, you know, I get dreadfully on mother's nerves. Just"—she hesitated, then plunged—"just as she does on mine."

Austen, who was determined to be shocked at nothing, gave her a comprehending nod.

"It isn't that mother minds being kissed when the lights are low, as it were. But she would die before she'd admit it. Now I——." The wave of Genevieve's cigarette was expressive.

"In fact," she went on, "I made up my mind when I was quite little that I would be kissed when I got to be a lady. And I am. A good deal."

Austen laughed.

"I like your candor," he said.

"That," said Genevieve, "is just what mother can't abide."

"I wonder." He looked at her doubtfully.

"Fact," said Genevieve, settling more comfortably in her chair. "It isn't at all what I admit that bothers her. It's that I admit it. Of course," she brought out with finality, "mother is of the past generation."

Uncle Austen smiled at her.

"Just what do you mean," he asked, "when you say that?"

"O, of course," Genevieve apologized, "I don't just mean that she's fifty. You're fifty, aren't you?"

"Forty-nine," he admitted.

"Well!" She tried another cigarette. "I'm not silly enough to think that fifty is old, or anything like that. What I mean is that mother is crystallized into her form. You say you're forty-nine. But I can talk to you. Now, mother is sure that anything I say or think that she can't recall that some one else—some one of the right sort—said or thought some time in her own set must not be said or thought by me. I shook her to her foundations the other day by throwing out that monogamy is no longer smart. Our best people are quite polygamous. You know mother. After she ceased to 'Why, Genevieve!' she began to think. I gave her a list of names offhand, right here in town, and then any number besides. Well! She was so bothered! And it wasn't at all for the reason you might think. Mother could not bear to be out of style."

"How do you feel about that yourself?" asked Uncle Austen. Genevieve gave him a frank stare.

"About being out of style."

Genevieve laughed.

"Well! Uncle Austen! You surely give me pause. I've never thought of myself in those terms."

"Terms of stylishness?"

"Yes. Stylishness, or not stylishness. That's just what I'm trying to say to you. Let's get down to fundamentals. Let's be sincere. What on earth is style, anyway?"

"You surprise me greatly." His eyes, wide and innocent, were upon her.

"Surprise you? How can I surprise you? You surely don't think I'm stylish—conventional—any of that awful nonsense!" Genevieve almost sat erect in her alarm.

"Why, certainly. What else?" Uncle Austen remained tranquil.

Genevieve laughed.

"When mother is sitting around wringing her hands over me and Locksley Fenimore this minute."

Uncle Austen felt that the important moment of the interview had arrived.

"Is there something about you and Locksley Fenimore about which your mother ought to wring her hands?"

"Well," she said, with effect of reasonableness. "That's as you look at it. You know what we're discussing?"

Uncle Austen smoked in silence for a moment.

"I don't know," he admitted finally. "But I believe I can guess."

"Well, if you guess right," she told him, "I'll admit it."

"You probably have in mind a trial marriage, or something of that sort.'

"How did you know?" she asked.

Uncle Austen laughed.

"Because you are so—I hate to say it, since the word bothers you—but it's the right word—so stylish."

"Stylish!" her voice was an amazed echo.

"Why, yes," said Uncle Austen. "As I look at you, you seem typical of a considerable class of girls of your age. Your pendulum has swung through about the whole arc of a hundred and eighty degrees away from the point where your mother's generation struck twelve. In her day nobody did such things, or if he did them he would die before he'd admit it. Now the style is as different as possible. You all take off your clothes, mentally, physically, socially, as publicly as possible. I vow, I can't tell one of you from the other. Ideas, phrases, habits, all exposed, and all identical. Of course," he smiled at her, "the style will change. When you are your mother's age your daughter's friends will think you of a very funny past generation."

"I think," said Genevieve, "that you are the meanest man in the world."

"What impresses me," he went on, undisturbed, "is the scarcity of individuals. So few people of any generation ever emerge. I knew your father well. He was a person. His brain actually functioned. He never went with the herd. Your mother—well—you and she are more alike. Very conventional."

"Uncle Austen!"

"Of course," he admitted, "there is this difference. It was the style in your mother's girlhood to please—your generation aims to shock. In the long run, I believe your

Fashions Beauty Contests

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

BY MARY BRUSH WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.—The first offering, as shown in the accompanying illustration, was done after seeing Lady Ribblesdale, who was Mrs. Astor, at the Ritz on a Sunday evening for dinner. She has yellow hair now, and her skin is as smoothly unwrinkled as a young girl's. One of the stunts of the day is to look as if you were the daughter and the daughter were you.

The former Mrs. Astor does not appear often with her daughter, so no one has a chance to say, " Why, she looks younger than that girl of 20 beside her."

That is what happens almost every time Fannie Ward goes any place with hers. A man actually came up to the girl one day and extended an invitation to her and her daughter—the latter supposedly being Fannie Ward.

The artist describes Lady Ribblesdale's dress as of ruby crystal beads and diamond accents. I don't know that I could improve on that in the matter of getting the description before you. To quote him further, the skirt is in a series of tabs, a wide one, heavily embroidered in the beads, beside a narrow one, floating and likewise embroidered. He was also quite taken with the eagle's wing fan, which people referred to as a " pleasant accessory " to the costume.

You will observe that the dress is lower in the back than we have been accustomed to see recently. I have noted a number of dresses at formal functions cut extremely low. Some of the smartest houses, however, show dresses as elaborately embroidered as this one of Lady Ribblesdale's with merely round necks, cut not a great deal lower than we have frequently worn for afternoons.

Lady Ribblesdale's necklace is of rubies and diamonds.

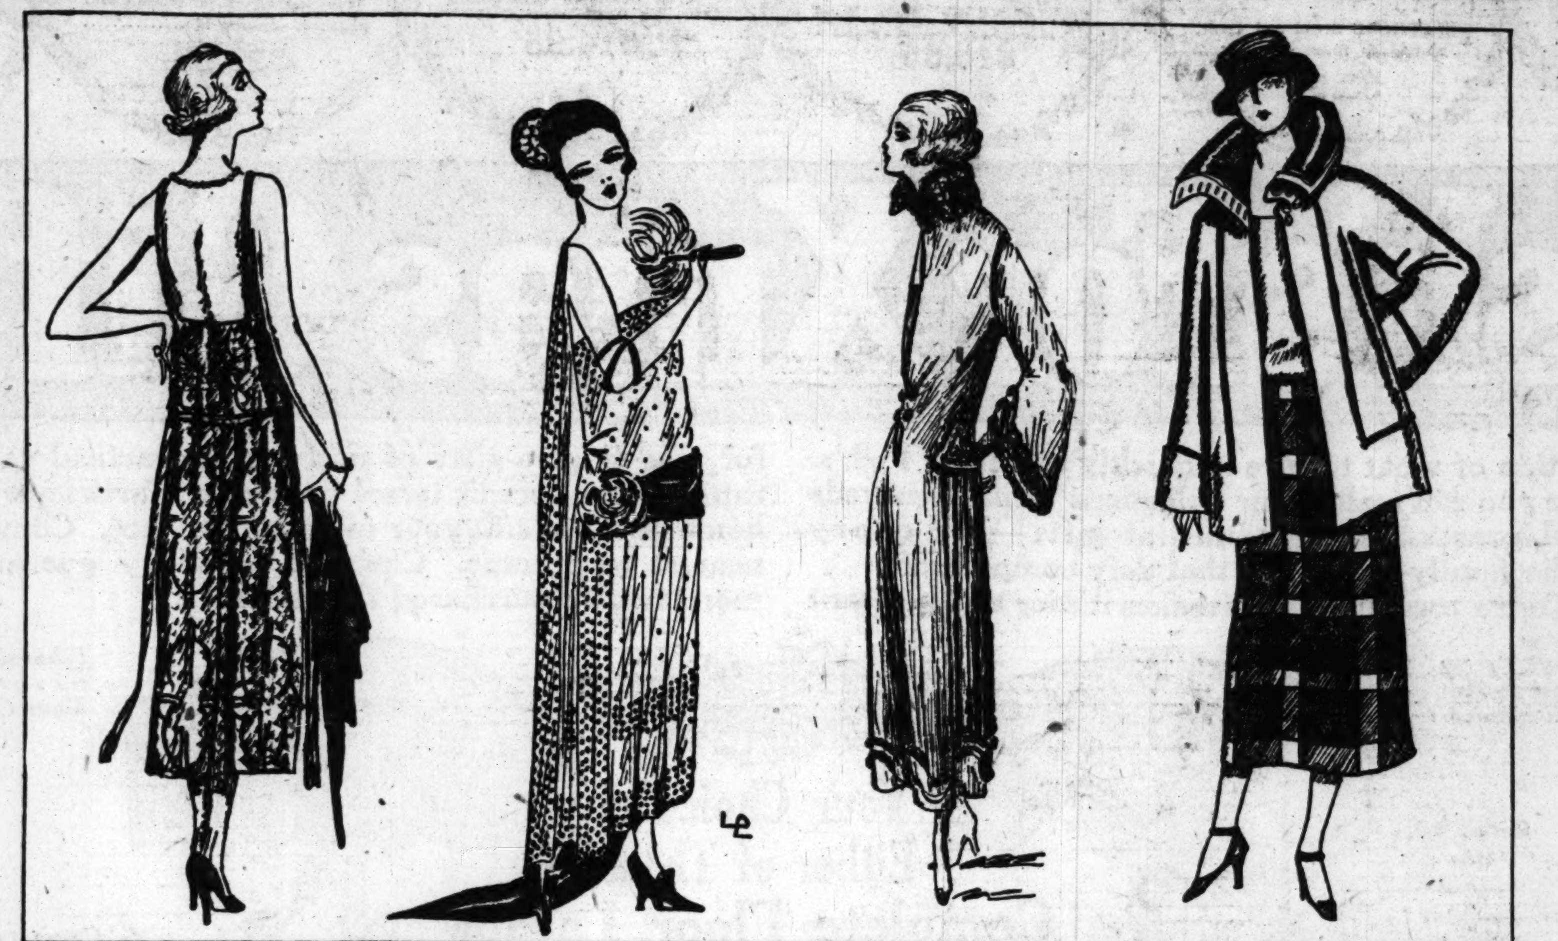
We haven't shown many Chanel dresses this fall, but that is not because she hasn't pretty ones—nor because Mme. Chanel herself is not pretty and does not wear pretty ones.

She was at the last Sunday night ball at the Ritz, and had on the prettiest dress there, except the woman who had the copy of it, which had been made in Mme. Chanel's establishment.

It was a Chanel-like model, in soft black lace, with spangly things over it, and a low belt line.

To take the curse off the black—which is on the toboggan slide toward the passe as much as black can ever be—hers was over bright red, and her counterpart's over bright green.

Here is a Chanel dress shown in the second offering. The material is black tulle embroidered in chenille—that favorite trimming for parlor centerpieces and French dresses of late. It is polka dotted, as you can see, in borders, and is scattered specks. The two features of the dress are the panel down the back closely studded in the dots, and the black ceinture, punctuated with a huge rose on one side and flowing into a train from the other.



A black tulle foundation is embroidered with ruby crystal beads and diamond accents.

Here black chenille is used to embroider black tulle. The sash flows into a side train.

Jean Patou made this coat dress of blue gabardine, black braid, and astrakhan.

Jacket of dark blue kasha joins forces with a plaid skirt for a skating costume.

It is scarcely a feature any more that the belt is low. The sensation would be if it were high. Of course, the figure must look uncorseted, and the stomach must protrude a little. What will become of us when the clock swings round to where we have to go back to those stiff encasings of corsets—for, of course, by the law of averages we must get back to them in time.

Speaking from my own viewpoint exclusively, so that you had better not risk too many of your next season's clothes on the prognostication, I should say that the silhouette is going to be tight. A good many signs point that way, and I offer one convincing item.

A dress I ordered came home the other day. I could not launch a full sweep of step in it. I sent it back.

They said: " Well, you'll simply have to take a motor. And never walk with your husband or any man taking long steps. And never walk fast. You will ruin your silhouette, and it's perfect according to the latest models."

You may use this information as you will. The accompanying is a fashionable silhouette, and if the skirt hangs a little fuller than I have indicated mine does, at least it is straight. It is one of those coat dresses so useful over here for a large part of the year, with a fur piece supplementaire. On some of the dresses they fasten with hooks and eyes, and some women, even in these years with furs so scarce in Europe, have three and four detachable collars and cuffs for one costume.

The collar presented is of astrakhan and is, I believe, fastened on. But with muff shaped neckpieces like this one often another fur is worn also in the form of a scarf to cover the shoulders.

This dress is of navy blue tricotine trimmed in black soutache braid, along the lines of which runs a border of astrakhan. The dress fastens at the throat and then again at the waistline with two buttons.

Nearly always the houses will have some little touch in common, and this year it seems to be the little fantasie of catching the dresses with only one fastening, at the waistline. Jean Patou made this costume.

With Lady Ribblesdale my text began; with Lady Ribblesdale my text shall end. Molyneux has made her this costume to skate in at St. Moritz. The jacket is of dark blue kasha piped with green. Black satin lines the collar. The skirt is of yellow, blue, and green plaid. The hat is of the blue cloth, piped with yellow.

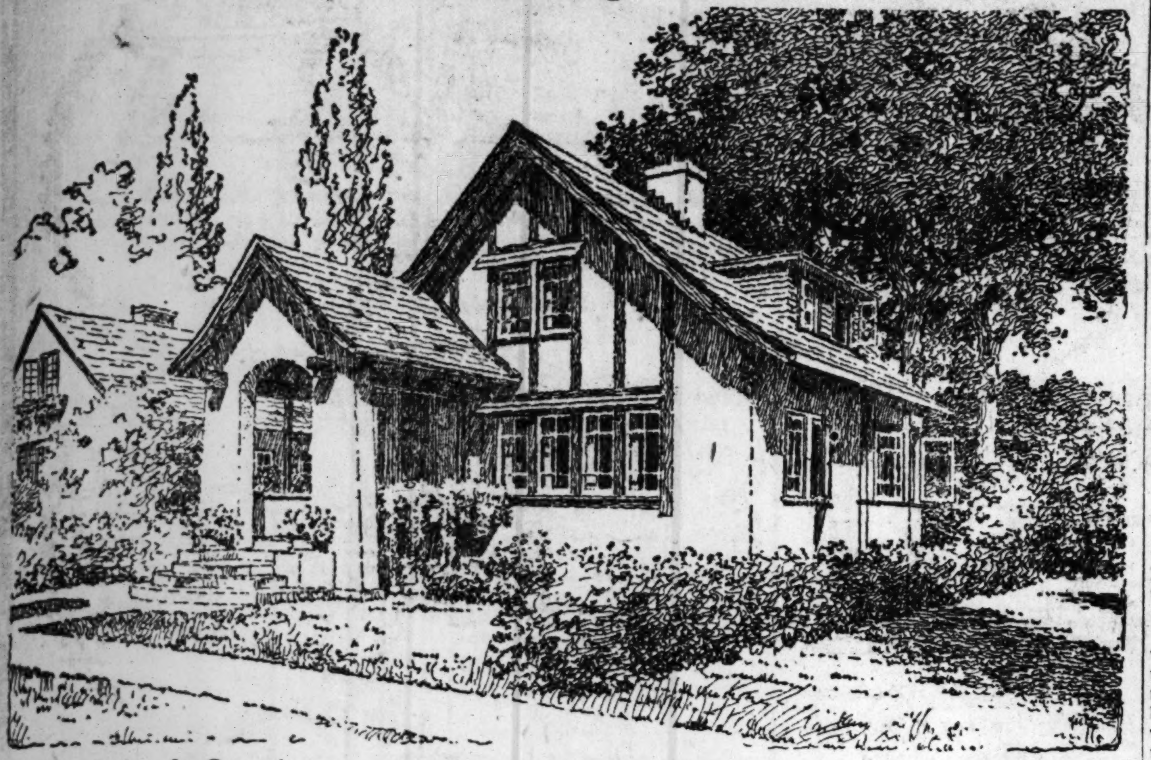
Designed with Economy as the Watchword



By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

FOR the city or suburban home, what could be more attractively substantial looking than the four room stucco house shown here. All the charm and economy of the stucco house is brought vividly into play.

The semi-inclosed porch with flower boxes and the vertical, half-timbered treatment adding the effect of height to this small house are details which are well handled in buildings of this material.

Much of the inviting appearance of the exterior is supplied by the generously sloping roof with the wide overhanging of the eaves and the promise of congeniality by the chimney.

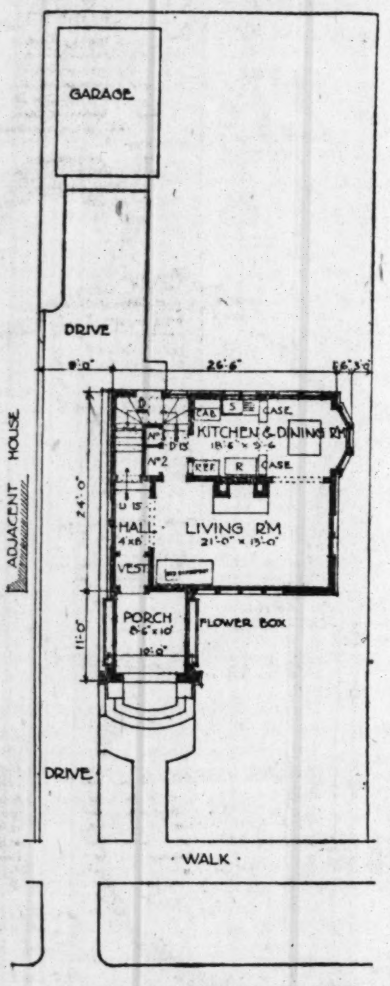
On entering the small vestibule which demarks the living room, one is greeted by an attractive brick fireplace such as no home can afford to do without, a feature which should always be included in a house in northern climates. For these days are days of the return to normalcy, and the uninviting, stilted apartment is furnishing many recruits for the army of home builders.

A bed davenport occupies a permanent corner in this room. The living room is unusually large for a house of this size, and it is a question of whether we should call it a three room or a two room downstairs, because the kitchen and dining room are built on the lines of a modern kitchenette apartment, the built-in case hiding the sink on the one side and the range on the other, making practically two rooms out of the culinary department.

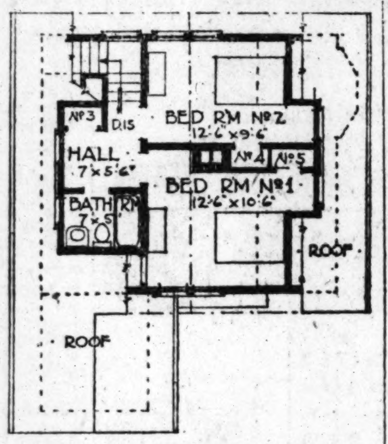
The downstairs is not without closets, and there are two just back of the living room. An attractive feature which is worked into this small house is the bay window in the dining room which looks out upon the front, rear and side.

The kitchen has a splendid rear entrance arrangement, which allows easy access to the garden and to the basement.

Going up a well lighted staircase cleverly set below the roof line to take full advantage of head room, we enter a small hall which acts as a communication between the two bedrooms and the bathroom. Closets are found in both bedrooms and also, last but not least important, each bedroom is so designed that there is cross ventilation.



PLAN OF FIRST FLOOR AND PLOT PLAN



In the basement we find a well lighted laundry with the tubs on the sunny side of the house, and another set of windows opposite to facilitate drying.

The furnace room is enclosed to keep dust from spreading to other parts of the house, an important point. Space is also provided for vegetable and store rooms.

In keeping with the permanence of the exterior stucco, gypsum plaster is used on metal lath throughout the most important parts of the interior.

Metal lath is made from thin sheets of steel, and is nailed directly to the wood joists and studs, after which plaster is applied over it in a manner similar to common, ordinary lath. The metal lath reinforces the plaster to keep it from cracking and is unburnable, as numerous authoritative tests have demonstrated.

As the metal mesh is absolutely permanent and fire resistive, and prevents the formation of plaster cracks, except when extreme settlement in the building occurs, it is being widely advocated as a solution to the fire and depreciation problems. With economy as a watchword for all present building activities, it is interesting to note that the added cost of using metal lath does not exceed 1 per cent of the cost of the building as compared with inflammable ordinary lath.

As we leave it, we pause again to view the attractive gem with its rough buff stucco, half timbered gable, attractive dormer window, French bay window and semi-inclosed porch. This house combines the cozy attractiveness of the suburban stucco residence with the modern ideas for domestic economy.

Architects Spencer, Powers, and Martin of Chicago designed it.

Answers to Inquiries.

L. K.: We do not object to a combination dining and living room; in fact, we rather favor it. We would suggest barley colored wall paper with old ivory silk gauze glass curtains and plum colored drapes. We would suggest two windows on the east side of the room to match the one on the north side.

Too Deep to Solve.

"Dear Miss Blake: Would you kindly tell me why girls and boys close their eyes when they are being kissed? Thank you ever so much. LILLIAN."

It is too deep a query for me to solve, Lillian. But may I ask you one? Kindly tell me why girls and boys indulge in the pastime? Why should their young heads be troubled with a query that belongs to a class on the eve of matrimony, at least? I hope you are not asking this question prompted by a personal inquisitiveness.

Actions Will Tell.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a fellow about a year older than I. Could you tell me whether or not this fellow loves me without asking him. ELEANOR."

No, dear Eleanor, I could not tell you whether the young man loves you or not. But you ought to be able to judge from his actions. When a boy is in love with a girl, he advertises the fact with unmistakable attention and devotion.

Anita was visiting her grandmother in the country. Walking in the garden she chanced to see a peacock, a bird she had never seen before. After gazing in silent admiration she ran into the house and cried out: "O, granny, come and see. One of your chickens is in bloom." M. B. F.

I took my son to the doctor's office, and while waiting a few men passed through the office and patted Gerald on the head.

One said, "Hello, Sport."

Gerald turned to me and said, "Mamma, they must think I am a dog." M. D.

A neighbor asked Elizabeth if there were any peaches on the tree in her backyard.

It was too young to bear fruit and Elizabeth had never heard us speak of it as a fruit tree.

The question seemed to her an impertinent one, and she answered indignantly, "That tree grows switches." T. B.

Jerome was practicing his piano lessons the other day. Every now and then his grandma, who was in the kitchen, heard a heavy thump.

Knowing it was Jerome banging on the pedal, she told him to stop.

Jerome looked, with an angry expression, and said: "Ah, heck, can't a fella even put on the brakes once in a while?" L. C. J.

Jimmy had received letters always ending "With love and kisses." One day he was busily engaged in making X kisses at the end of a letter I had written to his mother, when he looked up and inquired, "Aunt Jo, how do you make loves?" J. D.

Mary had finished her first month of school. She brought home her grade card, gave it to her father.

The teacher had written these words on the card: "Whispers too much."

Her father asked: "Do you whisper much, Mary?"

"Well, I have to daddy," she replied, "they won't let us talk out loud." MRS. V. M. W.

One of our neighbors, who is childless, dearly likes to have the children of the community come and visit her. After being entertained for an afternoon at this home Helen remarked, "Even if Mrs. B. hasn't any children, she knows just how to little girl us." L. R. C.

The Lasting Beauty of These Fine Lamps

The gift lamp should be chosen with unusual care, that it may harmonize with other furnishings.

Almco Lamps have become widely known as "America's Most Beautiful Lamps" because they adapt themselves so well to the rooms for which they are selected.

They are designed with regard to all that is best in modern interior decoration, and worked out as one complete unit. Shade, base, fixtures, decorations and every detail of finish are planned together, to secure harmony of coloring and correctness of proportion.

Part of the unusual charm of these lovely lamps is due to the unstinted employment of skilled handwork upon them. Wood carvers and workers in hand-wrought metal contribute their artistry to Almco Lamps. Deft needlewomen produce the exquisitely finished shades.

Among the other refinements of detail are the carefully chosen trimmings, fringes, cords, tassels and finials; the extra strong, rigid, non-tipping shade frame; weighted, felted base; iron-enclosed wiring; special fixtures.

You can find Almco Lamps in the store of any dealer who specializes in fine furnishings. You can easily identify them by the blue Almco tag or the Almco label on shade and base.

ALMCO LAMPS

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are Original.

SAGITTARIUS being the sign covering the period from Nov. 22 to Dec. 21, and Capricorn entering Dec. 21 and covering the dates from then on to Jan. 20, this is another of those divided weeks where two influences are felt. Consequently, you possess characteristics ascribed to both signs of the zodiac.

You Sagittarius born will be most successful along the following lines: Dressmaker, milliner, florist, artist, designer, decorator. Even though your vocation be something else, your originality along the above mentioned lines of artistry will crop out.

You will be artistic even though you may have scarcely enough with which to pay the rent. Your tastes and talents are known throughout your neighborhood, and your friends seek your opinion on purchases planned and made. As I said before of this sign, you can take an old chair, and, given a bit of paint and a piece of chintz, you can create something worthy of a place in your home.

In harmony with this artistic sense is a love of music and art, quite above the average taste. And you like to look into the deeper things of life. Your desire to please people never interferes with your natural originality. You act more from an inward motive than from example or outside influence. In other words, you blaze your own trail rather than follow an established cult or taste.

You are not one of those "fall in love at first sight" persons, but when you do fall it is for good and all, for better and for worse. The love you give your helpmate is the highest most devoted kind, and if perchance fate should lead you into an unhappy union it is apt to completely wreck your nature. You do not seek for solace or a renewed happiness from another source. Your most congenial companions will be found in Aries (March 22-April 20) or in Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23).

Your colors are red, green, and gold your birthstone, turquoise and diamonds.

Now, those born under the sign of Capricorn (the goat) will be most successful as teachers, elocutionists, musicians, preachers, lecturers, and book keepers. You may consider yourselves fortunate enough to be endowed with more sparkle and brightness than those whose birthdays fall later in the sign. You are a great thinker, and you are kindly and broad in your views; in fact, so broad you do not care to be bound by strict rules of convention.

You are a natural teacher and exceedingly popular with your pupils because your teaching is simple, plain, and easily understood. Even though you may not write textbooks along original lines and startle the world by your ideas, you are a potent factor in shaping other people's ideas. If a preacher, you may startle your audience by the freedom of your expression, but they as often find themselves convinced.

Like Sagittarius folk, you mind your own business and expect others to do the same. Should any one meddle with your affairs your vengeance will be sharp and vindictive. At such times you are sarcastic and severe to the point of harshness.

Your colors are maroon, brown, silver, and black; your birthstones, the moonstone and onyx.

You need companionship and hate to be left alone, so you will be happier in the married state. A happy union is that with Taurus (April 21-May 21) or with Virgo (Aug. 24-Sept. 23). A marriage with Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23 is conducive to greater intellectual activity and growth. Indeed, your general faculty for adapting yourself to every condition will insure you congenial friends among people of every sign.

You will be the most fortunate during the two weeks beginning Oct. 14 and May 27.

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful: in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife: the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor The Sunday Tribune.

Full of Possibilities.

Why should marriage be "on trial before a hesitating jury"? Rather hold up poor frail human nature for judgment, and let the jury hesitate.

That many men and women make a sorry thing of marriage is painfully true. But what of the pitiable attempts at music, art, business, the professions? Do we label these "failures," to be abolished because of the many who are not equal to success in them? It has been the heartrending experience of all of us to know souls who have made a miserable failure of life itself, still we keep fast hold on the belief that life is sweet and fine—full of exquisite possibilities—a thing greatly to be desired.

It is not marriage that is a failure, but the individual. Marriage as an institution is the solid rock upon which our civilization is built. There can be nothing wrong with an institution ordained of God and proven through centuries to be the foundation of all satisfactory social order. To say that marriage as an institution is a failure is to say that civilization has failed, and to advocate its overthrow is to favor a return to savagery.

The blind knocker who hammers away at this established order often points to the crowded dockets of the Domestic Relations court to prove his assertion. As a social worker with varied experience, I have yet to be shown that these records prove marriage to be a failure—one might as well display a rotten peach as proof of the fruit a tree will bear. What they do prove is human frailties—the incompetency, the terrible diseases of mind, body, and soul, and they do point to the horror of an ill chosen marriage.

For our true light upon this subject we can turn to the millions of homes where husband and wife live with a single aim—the establishing of happy home life with adequate opportunities for the young lives intrusted to them. The brightness of such homes, standing out in strong contrast to the pictures painted by those who would assert that marriage is a failure, is enough to strengthen the conviction that marriage, like life itself, is sweet and fine, full of exquisite possibilities—a thing greatly to be desired.

R. D.

Successes in Minority.

"Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." Thus spoke Christ regarding the wedding of man and woman. This has been repeated at most Christian marriage ceremonies since that time.

Now, the question which naturally arises is this: Who is to decide whether or not God joins two people together at the marriage ceremony? Can any persons, outside those two, decide this question truthfully?

I maintain the majority of marriages are failures. There are cases, I will admit, where husband and wife have not made a mistake and have found themselves adaptable to one another, are congenial in most matters, and have love deep enough to overlook the faults of each other, but they are in the minority. I will not venture to give the percentage but will state that, from my observation, if it were not for the fear of having to pay alimony or being afraid they would be punished in the future life, the majority of husbands would be happy to be single again.

I contend marriage is ordained of God only where real love is the binding tie. Also that a great many people confuse marriage and love. There is not necessarily any connection between them. Marriage may result from love, but there are many people who are legally and religiously married who realize later on in [illegible] that they love, are truly devoted [illegible] and wedded to another peson entirely.

Marriage, as recognized by law and church, is nothing more than a legal and moral obligation regarding the support and protection of the wife and children that may be born and of the disposition of property that they may hold and wish to dispose of. But, as far as being really married, the church and the law have nothing to do with it. Am I right?

D. M. C.

Happy and Carefree.

Who are the bride and groom? Do we know his disposition and hers?

Are both happy?

No. I don't know any couple that is. I consider marriage an absolute failure. If not, why are the divorce courts so busy filing suits against husbands and wives?

All my girl friends weep to see how happy and carefree I am. No worry or trouble or sickness.

He is never home to take her out; nor will he stay home with the children so she can go out. Can she ever go on a vacation before his voice has either said yes or no? If his answer is yes, can she leave them without worry? If his anwser is no, has she not a wall built on all sides?

But a man is taking the same chances when he gets married. She may be lazy or a gossip. It is all right to marry when you have gone with each other for years and know each other and understand. But that person hasn't blown my way yet. So I'll take life easy and continue to support myself.

Varied Activities of Women

The grand jury at Lancaster, Pa., has recommended that better accommodations be arranged for women forced to attend court as jurors.

Miss Mary L. Trescott, appointed a referee in bankruptcy at Scranton, Pa., is the first woman in that state to be thus honored.

Miss Pearl Cartmill, examiner of small loan agencies for the state of Illinois, is the only woman in the United States to hold such a position.

The women in Argentina are about six months ahead of New York women in the matter of fashions.

The average woman possesses only about two-thirds of the physical strength of the average man.

The low salaries paid chorus girls in London are driving them to become parlor maids and cooks.

The distinction of being the oldest club woman in America is claimed by Mrs. Judith W. Smith of Boston, who for nearly fifty years has been a member of the New England Woman's club. Mrs. Smith is now nearing her one hundredth birthday.

Poslam
did clear my skin, dear
"I am thankful you told me about Poslam, Bess! I bathed my face with Poslam Soap and good hot water, then I left a dab of Poslam itself on each pimple over night. In the morning most of the little ones were dried up. Even the worst are gone now, and I only began using Poslam three days ago." Poslam is so concentrated that a little goes a long way. L. KLEIN—HALSTED FOURTEENTH AND LIBERTY STREETS, CHICAGO
Make This An Electrical Christmas
by giving "her" one or more of these electric servants
THE man of business whose tasks are made shorter and lighter with modern devices should be the first to advocate and promote similar efficiency in his household. In particular should he approve the home labor-savers, such as the Electric Washer, Ironer, and Vacuum Cleaner, which eliminate the harmful drudgery of washing, ironing, sweeping and dusting and pay for themselves in a short time. These efficient and modern machines preserve health and energy, put an end to laundry and carpet cleaning expense, and prolong the life of clothes and floor coverings.
Our machines, illustrated here, are standard. They carry a double guarantee—that of the manufacturer and our own.

“EVERYBODY IS DOING THE SCANDAL WALK” says Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Thinking you might be interested in knowing what the latest thing in dance steps might be, I buckled on my best pumps and went the rounds of the smartest dancing places in New York. It was a trifle confusing, for no matter whether the orchestra played two-four, three-four, or four-four time, as far as my practiced eye could see, the steps varied not a whit, excepting perhaps for a couple unmistakably not of the deb variety, who would grab at the old Blue Danube refrain as at a life line and betray their not-up-to-the-minuteness by perpetrating it as gran'ma used to do it.

Not being able to figure it out alone, I went along until I found Oscar Duryea, from whom I managed to extract the following gems of dance information. Mr. Duryea, by the way, conducts an ultra-fashionable school uptown from whence most of the young society folk emerge completely equipped to battle the dance world in right victorious fashion.

They Walk to Any Tune.

“It is a one-dance season,” explained Mr. Duryea. “The young people will have nothing else. A few of the older crowd with an inherited fancy for the waltz indulge in it, but with its new commands it resembles the walk so much the average observer would not recognize any difference. But I shall explain the waltz later.

“The varied steps of the last few seasons have boiled themselves down to the ‘scandal walk,’ and everybody's doing it. It doesn't matter whether it's a dreamy waltz or the latest jazz tune they're following, they're ‘walking’ it,” said Mr. Duryea.

It's a pretty dance, too, as demonstrated by Mr. Duryea and Miss Helen Keller; the scandal in the walk, if there at all, being so nicely covered up as to be acceptable in the best drawing rooms. I could not detect any.

The Shoulder Hold's Important.

And this is how it is done, following the illustrations posed by Mr. Duryea and Miss Keller:

The 1922 Waltz.

If dancing foxtrot time the walking steps are taken on the first and third beats of the measure, that is to say, two steps for every measure. The same steps are also taken in waltz time and two steps are also taken to the measure and also on first and third beat of measure.

Waltz time, however, being uneven, necessitates a more pronounced sway to the left as the man steps forward on his left foot (reverse for girl) with a slightly longer reach on right foot and a more pronounced sway on right side.

The 1922 waltz: The old manner of bending the knees for the waltz has been corrected, and now the waltz is done from the ankle instead of the knees. That is to say, the steps are taken with legs stretched almost straight down from the hips and the weight is received on the ball of the foot as the step is taken. Whatever up and down action there is must come from the ankle, instead of from the knees, the rise and fall coming from ball of foot to heel. This makes an infinitely more graceful step than the old style waltz. When you get the step down right, your next move is to make as much of a walk out of it as you can.

Now, sez I, in conclusion, may I walk the Blue Danube with you?

Beauty Answers

RUTH: THE WHITEHEADS MAY be easily removed by pricking with a sterilized needle and pressing out the contents. They do not recur as persistently as blackheads, and local care of the skin will prevent further trouble. I have a little booklet on care of the complexion which I'll be happy to send to you if you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

BERTHA M.: IT IS HARD FOR me to advise what style of hairdressing is best for you, never having laid an eye on you. Suppose you study the contour of your face. Study pictures of lovely women, magazine cover girls, and lovely girl “ads” for ideas on hairdressing, and when you find a way you think right, practice that style until you perfect it. But remember always the basis of a lovely coiffure is clean, well brushed hair.

MISS JOSEPHINE B.: YOURS IS something for a physician to diagnose. I would not nor could not recommend anything for “fits.”

AGNES: DON'T USE AMMONIA on the hair. It makes it too brittle and dry. A little borax used occasionally won't do any harm, however

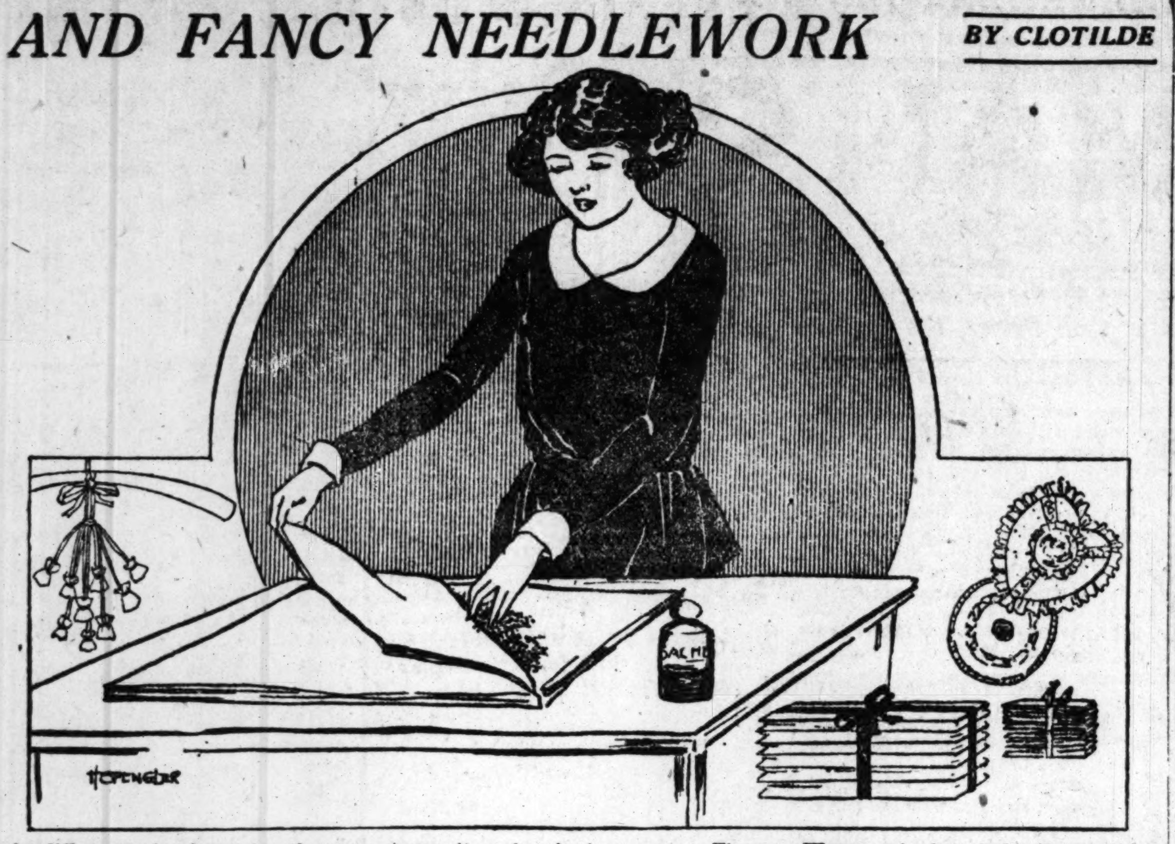
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE



SACHETS FOR GIFTS.

SACHETS that fit bureau or chiffonier drawers make acceptable gifts, and are appropriate for a man or woman. These may be made of silkoline, China silk, or taffeta. It will be necessary to have the length and width measures of the drawer or drawers you are making them for, and you will need enough to cut two pieces exactly alike, allowing a half inch seam on all four edges, so that when finished the sachet will entirely cover the bottom of the drawer.

Sheet wadding is cut the exact drawer size, and then carefully pulled apart and sachet powder thickly sprinkled over the surface. The wadding is laid together again, and carefully laid on one of the pieces of silk that is to make the under part of the sachet. Turn the edges in evenly all around, over the wadding, and baste to hold down, if necessary. Then put the top piece of silk on the cotton, and after turning in all four edges baste carefully to the under piece of the silk, and overhand all around. It will be necessary to allow the sachet to lie quite flat on a table while you work, so as not to disturb the placing of the powder.

Mark with a sharp pencil at even distances, the points where the tufting is to come, and then use embroidery floss in a contrasting color, cutting your floss off on the right side. Make tiny bows of ribbon and sew over each tacking, and use the blanket stitch in floss as an edge finish.

Or after the overhanding is done, a single line of fine feather stitching would make an adorable finish, using floss to match the color of the ribbon.

A set of these sachets, each one made of a different color, but using the same perfume, would make a beautiful gift, would not take a great deal of time, nor need the cost be great.

Another sachet that makes a charming gift is a rather flat pad of satin measuring 5x10, or 4x9 inches. A layer of the sheet wadding is used, the sachet powder being sprinkled in between it as for the larger one. These sachets may be seamed together on three sides, turned to the right side, the wadding slipped in place, and the remaining end neatly overhanded together. Six of these sachets, each one of a different color and tied together with a narrow satin ribbon, would surely please any recipient.

Women who love to have everything about their homes as nice as possible would surely be pleased with one or more large sachets for their linen shelves or drawers—where sheets, cases, towels, etc., are kept. And it seems to me nothing could be better to fill these sachets with than sweet lavender.

SOME CHRISTMAS RECIPES.

A GREAT sum of attainment may be put to service when it comes to preparing holiday dinners. How much can be done with small attainment? We may answer: A great deal in this day and generation, when favors and Christmas pies—both mince and meat—plum puddings, and fruit cake may be purchased at one and the same shop, along with tiny candles and almost every sort of knickknack of a holiday sort.

By the way, the Christmas tree candle dethroned from the tree because of the risk of it, and replaced by the electric bulb, is still used for table favors. To gum it firmly into these, heat the end a bit. It will not then fall out to burn cloth or table.

Fruit cocktails, and all the endless relishes which we might introduce, are but more or less entertaining trifles, therefore no recipes are given below for them. In general they cost more than they come to, and are not as good dietetically as the fringed and chilled celery, or the radish flowers, neither of which has calories to speak of but which list with hors d'oeuvres in spite of their extreme simplicity. Ripe olives have more calories than celery and radishes and when well chilled are highly acceptable as a relish. Salted nuts should never be used with a big dinner, because they make it so much bigger, containing, as they do, more calories per given bulk than almost any viand or dainty on the bill.

The Soup Introduction.

The soup may with reason be considered the best and simplest of appetizers. For the highest convention we use the consomme, but accomplished chefs are the main supporters of this soup today, and what they chiefly and chefly prepare of this nature gives me no satisfaction. In fact, the last "iced bouillon" I partook of, at rather a high price, seemed to me a little worse than nice glue. Bones and meat used for the consomme must be most exquisitely clean, or all the vegetable flavors added—the bay leaf, the browning, the "royale"—go for naught.

Oyster soup or stew was formerly the great favorite among American soups, for holiday use, but the cream of salsify (oyster plant) soup is a cleaner thing and more refreshing and suitable for a big dinner. If a soup in color is desired, there is always the mock bisque of tomato, which need not be as common as it usually is. When goose is the meat, a cream of onion or even a potato soup—you may find fine names for each of these—need not be so plain as it sounds. To introduce a delicate roast capon, a cream of almond soup, more expensive than any of these other cream soups, may be used.

Green and Red Coloring.

In choosing to make our Christmas table colorful, we may get beautiful greens in vegetables, if we will but cook them correctly. The green of the pistachio nut may be used for icings, ices, and cake garnishings. For the Christmas red there is the pimento and the cinnamon drops.

A little essay might be written about the use of nuts in holiday dinner menus. They will never be used when we wish to keep the dinner light in calories, since they contain almost as many of these energy units as butter. Yet see how some people use them in the shape of salted nuts, nuts in the salad, in the plum pudding, in the fruit cake, in the ice cream, and then, finally, in the nuts and raisins of a Christmas dinner menu at which point they are served in order to live up to tradition in this matter.

With a sentimental feeling for the Christmas chalice, we may make spiced beverages of cider, but so much depends on where you get your cider that recipes for these are just a risk.

Vegetable Oyster (Salsify) Soup.

Six good sized roots of salsify are enough for from four to six cups of cream soup. The inside leaves, if fresh and unwilted, may go into the salad bowl. Wash the roots and brush them if necessary, then drop them into boiling water over the fire, and blanch or boil for five or ten minutes, or until the skins will rub off easily. This is to prevent the root from turning dark in further preparation. A few drops of vinegar or the half of a squeezed lemon in this blanching water helps to insure whiteness.

Rub off the skins, slice thin, and with the amount of slices from six roots, use one carrot sliced and a few dice of celery. Just cover with boiling water or use less water, if a careful cook, and cook for twenty minutes, or until salsify is tender, adding salt at the last.

Put salsify through a strainer, and for each cup and a half of seasoned pulp add some butter and two cups of hot milk or two cups of thin white sauce, and serve with a little lump of whipped cream, lightly salted, as a garnish. If the butter is added to the salsify pulp, and the whole is stirred for a minute or two over a hot fire before the milk is added and the two cooked together long enough to blend, the soup seems richer.

Cream of Tomato Soup.

Heat up milk and tomato separately—the milk may be slightly thickened, but usually is not. The proportions may vary from one-half as much tomato as milk to equal parts of each. Sift or strain the tomato, and add salt if necesary. Do not add the salt to the milk. When ready to put the tomato into the hot milk, add a pinch of soda to it, stirring thoroughly so that every bit of acid is neutralized, then pour in a fine stream into the milk, stirring all the time. Some butter may have been melted in the milk to enrich the soup. An onion may have been cooked in it, and so forth. With this sort of management the soup should never curdle. An agreeable way to thicken a tomato soup is to add finely rolled cracker just before serving it.

Cream of Almond Soup.

A cream of almond soup may be nothing more than a cream of celery soup, plus some chopped and cooked almonds. For each four cups of soup, cut up three long stems of celery into small pieces, after washing and brushing or scraping—if this is needed—and cover with one pint of cold water. Add a pinch of salt, a half teaspoon of sugar, and the least bit of cayenne pepper. Put over fire, bring to boiling point, then turn down flame to lowest point it will keep alive, and simmer for forty minutes.

Strain and pound the celery, then return the cooking liquid to it. To a scant tablespoon of melted butter add a tablespoon of flour, stir them smooth and add the celery in the liquid. Stir and cook about fifteen minutes. Some salt to bring up flavor, and a little cream might be added at this point and the whole served as celery soup.

For the almond soup, take half a cup of blanched nut meats, chopped fine or pounded with a bit of water, and cook these for ten minutes in three-fourths of a cup of milk. Then add to the celery mixture, and cook the two together for five minutes. If this does not have the rich flavor expected, add a teaspoon of sugar, but be careful not to make it noticeably sweet. Garnish each serving with a bit of whipped cream, and serve with strips of toast.

Roast Goose.

After regularly singeing, scrubbing, and washing a goose, scrape the surface with a small and not too sharp knife. The young goose is most often cooked like game, with only a celery and onion in its pouch. The older goose may be stuffed, but undoubtedly the best stuffing is one of meat—veal and some pork—pounded to a cream and seasoned.

A fine flavored mashed potato, mixed with a little finely chopped onion, may be put in under the apron and fastened in with the trussing. It must be fastened in, for a potato stuffing is one that most readily boils out.

A bed of vegetables may be used under the goose for seasoning the basting liquid. Some hot butter may be poured over it at the start, or, when the goose is exceedingly fat, some hot water only. Baste every fifteen minutes until tender in an evenly solid heat.

Apple Sauce.

The goose is universally served with apple sauce—unsweetened—or an apple puree. Perhaps a fine greening apple makes the best sauce for this purpose. Wash, peel, quarter, core, and cut each quarter in thin slices. Just cover with boiling water and cook up quickly with a cover over saucepan. Whip up apple as it softens and when done put through a strainer and serve in a gravy boat.

Brussels Sprouts.

Remove the yellow or broken leaves, wash, parboil, then stew a box of Brussels sprouts in two ounces of butter. If the fire is kept low they will remain as green as grass and be ideally cooked.

Mince Pie Meat.

For four pies—two pounds of boiling beef, three to six pounds of apples, one pound of raisins, one cup of white or brown sugar—or sugar to taste and according to amount of sweet fruits used—one cup of cider boiled down a half, and spices such as cinnamon, cloves, ginger, allspice, and nutmeg in small proportions. Half a cup of home candied citron chopped fine adds a delicate flavor and other candied fruit may be used.

Boil meat, remove skin and gristle, and chop. Pare, core, and chop apples. Seed and chop raisins or use seedless raisins. Cook the whole together bringing it to the boiling point and tasting, when more sweetening or more of sour can be added. When the pies are to be served hot, as they usually are, half as much chopped suet as raisins may be added before the mincemeat is cooked. Butter in a smaller proportion may be used instead.

The pie deservedly has a reputation for being hard to digest, and the addition of suet makes a good sized triangle of it equal to a whole meal, as far as calories are concerned, therefore undesirable at the end of a meal of many items and other foods rich in fats. It is often the one thing too much or one of several things too many.

Frozen Pudding.

An ice which may well substitute for the heavy plum pudding, or the fruit cake, may be made as follows: Thicken one pint of milk with one tablespoon of flour and add one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth cup of sugar, and one-fourth cup of sorghum, and cook. One-fourth cup of chopped raisins may be cooked in the milk or added with the nuts. When the milk has cooked and thickened, add to it the beaten yolks of two eggs and cook for a minute or a bit more. Take from stove and cool, and when partly cooled add the raisins, if not put in earlier, and a fourth of a cup of chopped nuts. A washed fig, chopped, adds quality. Freeze like any ice cream. Enough for six.

Serving Ice Cream.

Cream sweetened, flavored, and frozen makes the finest of ice creams. It may be whipped and simply packed in ice and salt and frozen. Then the mold must have a tight fitting cover, and it is best to cover the whipped and flavored cream with a piece of buttered white writing paper before putting on the cover. This may be served like any brick or mold of cream, but when the cream is frozen in a regulation freezer one nice way to serve it is to heap it into a chilled glass bowl from which it is spooned out. Have, if you choose, another bowl with whipped cream to serve over the ice cream and perhaps a third with bits of candied fruit to add as a garnish to each portion.

Something to Remember

That which makes or mars the quality of cheese to you, is flavor. A perfect unvarying flavor is the one big thing in cheese that makers have always striven for.

But the flavor of ordinary cheese is not and cannot be controlled. There is but one way by which a perfect unvarying cheese flavor can be produced—by blending.

Kraft Loaf Cheese is a blended cheese, always the product of several selected makes scientifically blended together to produce that perfect cheese flavor.

Kraft Loaf Cheese cannot be imitated except in shape, the process is patented and ranks as one of the great discoveries.

When you buy cheese ask for Kraft and avoid disappointing quality. The name is on the protecting tin-foil wrapper. There is no rind,—no waste, no preservatives—all cheese—always the same—always delicious. Three varieties, American, Pimento and Swiss, sold by the slice, pound or loaf, at about the price of the best bulk cheese.

KRAFT

Every good grocer and delicatessen sells it. Insist on the original loaf cheese with the Kraft label.

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

JERRY SQUIRREL, BENNY MOUSE, AND THE TEENIE WEENIES SPREAD A LITTLE CHRISTMAS CHEER

BY WM.DONAHEY.

[Copyright: 1921: By William Donahey.]

HERE'S an idea for all the little friends of the Teenie Weenies to carry out. You will notice the Teenie Weenies are shown today in black and white, and so you can take your box of paints or crayons and color the picture yourself.

The floor should be a light tan; the engine's body should be black, not too dark; the stripes around the body yellow, and the smokestack red. The car can be red with dark wheels. The background should be light yellow. The Teenie Weenies' faces and hands should be pink, except for Gogo and the Chinaman. The Chinaman should be light tan and Gogo's face and hands should be brown. The Teenie Weenies' clothes can be colored to suit your fancy. The tool chest ought to be a dark brown.

When you have it all fixed up send your picture in, and a Teenie Weenie book will be given as a prize for each of the ten best pictures submitted.

Address your picture to the Teenie Weenies, care of The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Be sure to give your name and address correctly. Use this coupon if you like:

I am.........years old and in............grade.

IT had been reported to the Teenie Weenies that Santa Claus would not stop at the Logan house on Christmas Eve, because Tommy Logan had been a bad boy and would not receive a single present.

Jerry the squirrel brought the news and the Teenie Weenies felt very badly over it.

"Tommy isn't such a bad boy," said the General. "He's full of fun and plays a great many pranks, but almost every boy does that and I think it's too bad if the little fellow doesn't get a Christmas present."

"Well, I was up in the maple tree back of the Logan house yesterday and I heard his mother tell him that she had asked Santa not to stop at their house because Tommy had been so naughty," said Jerry, switching his big shaggy tail in the direction of the Logan house.

"It's too bad, that's what it is!" cried Paddy Pinn. "I'll bet there were many things Tommy would have liked to have had for Christmas and I'm mighty sorry, that's what I am."

"He wanted a train of cars," said Jerry. "I heard him say that, for when his mother said that she had asked Santa not to stop at their house, Tommy cried and said that if Santa would only leave him an engine and a couple of cars he'd be just as good as he knew how."

"Oh, dear!" cried the Lady of Fashion, "can't some of you men make an engine and some cars and give them to Tommy?"

"Not possible," said the General. "It would take months to make an engine and a couple of cars."

"I know where you could get a train of cars," cried Benny Mouse, who had been listening to the talk. "I used to see a little engine and two cars over in an old barn where my Uncle Jimmy Iron Jaw lives. "It's been in that old barn for years. Little boy who used to play with it is almost a man now and he wouldn't want it any longer. Why don't you get it, why don't you?"

"Oh, yes, General," cried the Lady of Fashion. "Let's do it."

"Are you quite sure, Benny, that no one would care if we took it and gave it to Tommy for Christmas?" asked the General.

"Oh, positively! Positively!" exclaimed the mouse. "It's powerful dusty and might take some fixin', but I think the folks who own it would be glad if you gave it to that little boy for Christmas. Awful nice people who own the train. Never set out traps or poison or anything. Mighty nice people. No cats in the house. Fine folks. I'll take you over and show you where they live."

As the place where the folks lived who owned the train was some distance from the shoe house, it was decided to wait until the next day, so arrangements were made to meet in the morning.

Before the Teenie Weenies had finished their breakfast Benny was at the shoe house, and in a short time several of the little people set off to see the train.

It was a long, hard tramp, for there was snow on the ground and the tiny folks were forced to wear their snow shoes, which made walking quite difficult.

When they arrived at the barn Benny soon led them to the place where the train stood, and after the little men had cleaned the dust away they found an iron engine and two iron cars. The engine needed some repairs and the whole train was much in need of paint.

"We can fix this train up and make it look just like a new one," said the Turk, who was quite a mechanic.

The next day the little men loaded a tool chest and two thimbles full of paint onto a sled, which Jerry the squirrel very kindly pulled over to the barn for them, where they set to work putting the train in shape.

After the repairs had been made the engine and cars were painted and the Teenie Weenies were quite satisfied with the work, for the train looked just like a new one right out of the store.

It took a great deal of pushing, pulling, and shouting to get the train into Tommy's house, but with the help of Jerry the squirrel and Benny the mouse they finally finished the task.

On Christmas morning Tommy found the train, and you can well believe he was a very happy little boy.

How to Use Patterns.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

PATTERN No. 9,252 is an excellent pattern, and is intended for a full figure.

A reasonably heavy muslin will be best, and if you wish to take real comfort in it, be sure to shrink the cloth thoroughly before cutting.

It buttons down the front, and there are no under arm seams. There is a seam each side of the front and back. The flatest, best seam will be the felled one; basting and stitching the seams, then trimming off one edge of each seam, not too close to the stitching, but leaving a safe margin, and then hemming the other edge down over the trimmed edge. Have your seams an even width when finished—say one-eighth of an inch—and do the hemming down by hand.

The neck and armholes can be finished with narrow bias strips, stitching in a narrow seam on the wrong side, then clipping the edge at intervals, so it will be possible to turn the facing down on the wrong side. Baste and stitch close to the edge. Of course, the front hems should be put in before doing anything with the neck facing. Sew the peplum to the bottom of the waist, having the seam come to the right side, and be sure the peplum is set on a little fuller than the bottom of the waist. If both edges measure just the same the peplum will not set well. It has a more or less circular edge, and is sewed to a reasonable straight one, and it is necessary to allow a little ease. Turn the seam up towards the waist and cover with a narrow band, stitched over the seam and stitched to the corset cover on the upper edge. Before stitching the band on turn it in neatly at each end and overhand to the corset cover. It makes a much better finish than can be had by simply basting.

Pattern No. 1,205 is pretty for an apron or house dress, whichever you choose to call it.

The skirt part is in two pieces, with the seams coming on the sides and with quite gored edges. This makes less fullness at the waist line and allows a comfortable width at the bottom. For size 36 the lower edge measures 1⅞ yards.

The waist part is cut with sleeves and waist in one and is joined to the skirt. There are straps each side of the front and back through which the sash is to be slipped.

One or two materials can be used in making—a plain colored and figured percale, chambray, chintz, or gingham making a decidedly attractive garment. If two materials are used the neck and sleeves can be finished with facing and cuffs of the skirt material.

If you care for novelty why don't you make this dress of black sateen and trim with something in contrast or some gayly colored embroidery?

Pattern No. 1213 is one of the fashionable long waisted blouses. It can be made up to finish a three piece costume or be simply a pretty blouse to wear with separate skirts.

There are a back and front and vest—sleeve, cuff, collar, cuff and band pieces to the pattern. The blouse is to be closed on the left side of the front and the band is attached to the lower edge of the waist and fastens at each side.

One or two materials can be used in the making The pattern shows the edges of the front, collar, and cuffs finished with a binding; this will give a smart tailored look. It would also look well to do some embroidery on the band at the waist, choosing some conventional pattern and using bright colors in contrast to the color of the blouse.

The design is suitable for almost any material, heavy or light—crêpe, silk or satin, charmeuse, velveteen or wool jersey.

Liked His Profile.

Mother decided I should accompany her to a southern town, to assist her in superintending the erection of a brick building.

There were only two places where we could order stone sills, and when we went to give the order no one was in attendance at either place. Next day I went to the nearest place again and ordered the stone from a young man who did not even look toward me to answer the questions I put to him. But somehow, though, I knew nothing of that man, not even his name, I felt that I had met my fate, and his profile haunted me continually.

Later, my mother sent me to pay for the stone, and I had to call at his store eleven time before finding him there, and by that time I was so disgusted with their business method that I gave him a piece of my mind about attention to business.

He took the criticism good naturedly and we had a long talk, which ended in his inviting me to attend a musicale at the home of the mayor.

Eleven days later we were engaged and were married after seven weeks more had passed, to have lived most happily together for the last twelve years.

C. E. G.

Sorry for Him.

While attending college I was one of a party of students taking a hike. That particular day there happened to be a band concert, and we grouped ourselves near the players.

I noticed a lone young man seated near by, a sad and forlorn individual in the midst of so much gayety I made so many comments upon this that finally my escort exclaimed, "If you're so sorry for him, why don't you console him?"

The young folks immediately took it up and offered me a dare. This I took, and found out he was from a near-by technical school, had recently lost his mother, and was, indeed, sad and lonely.

The woman awoke in me and I longed to mother him, and my sympathy attracted him. The result was a speedy marriage that neither regrets.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, The Tribune, Chicago Please write on one side of the paper No manuscripts returned.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Over the Dashboard.

I recall a Sunday evening at a little cross roads country church in northern Missouri. The service was over. I strode gallantly, the envy of all eyes, with a most estimable and much sought after young woman toward my spick and span new horse and buggy.

I placed the girl in the seat of the shining vehicle with the pride of a monarch. Unhitching the horse from the rack, I climbed in beside her, gathered the reins in one hand and, with whip in the other flecked the spirited horse. He plunged forward and I went to the road, with whip and reins still in hand, where I was dragged some fifty feet or more before I could bring the horse to a stop.

Covered with dust and grime—seething with humiliation and indignation—I tied my horse to the buggy, tore off my coat, and challenged the man who did the trick to come forward at the risk of his life, for I realized, during the loud guffaw that followed my humiliating exhibition, that some one had played the not unusual joke of untying the horse's traces.

Although I finally drove the girl home, I was a much more humble and wise man.

G. J. T.

Whooped with Joy.

One day while waiting for some friends I sat on a railing which was quite high from the ground and surrounded a small plot of grass and trees When I sighted my friends I gave a whoop of joy and, losing my balance, turned a complete somersault over the railing. I found myself on the ground, gasping. Some boys across the street were doubled over with laughter. I didn't wait for my friends to get to me. I got into the house as fast as I could. It was terrible.

C. B.

A Sad, Sad Tale.

I am a freshman at the college and find it necessary in the ten minute interval between classes to run from one building to another, which is about a quarter of a mile away. On the day of which I speak the weather was anything but pleasant, as a heavy rain was falling and the walks slippery.

As I was running along, spurred on by a desire to reach my class on time and also by a strong aversion to getting wet, I spied a girl of whom I thought a great deal. Desiring to impress her by a display of my ability in the way of speed, I quickened my pace with a view of passing her in the best of style, that she might gaze thereon and wonder.

Alas! I had reckoned without slippery walks. Just as I was passing the cause of all my speed my foot slipped and I found myself reclining on my back, directly in front of the object of my affections. As my height is over 6 feet, I make anything but an impressive figure while lying on a wet sidewalk.

I would not, however, have minded the chuckles of all the other spectators had I not heard her say with merriment in her voice, "O, Slim, how funny you do look!"

L. M.

Stonewall to the Rescue.

My last appearance in amateur theatricals was capped with a most embarrassing experience.

We had arranged a realistic performance of "Barbara Fritchie," and I was selected as the star. After much difficulty in procuring the proper attire—consisting of a colonial dress and a becoming cap, the fatal night arrived.

Barbara was mounted on a pile of boxes at one end of the stage. She leaned out of the window, waving the flag. Stonewall Jackson's army halted beneath. A shot rang out.

Barbara exclaimed in dramatic tones, "Shoot, if you must, this old gray head, but spare your country's flag."

The boxes toppled, and Barbara fell full length across the stage. Stonewall arose to the occasion and carried her out.

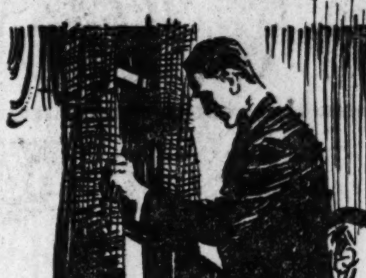
A BLANK WITHOUT HER

BELOVED Hazel: It is dusk. The cold shadows have crept silently over the earth and have wrapped the great outside into dreary darkness. As I look from my room out into that cold realm of nocturnal tranquillity which separates us I think, dear, of my own life, which seems equally as full of darkness as that. And why?

You can easily guess. Here I have toiled all day and have thought constantly and solely of you, but when my few leisure hours have come what do they bring? They are useless to me and unsoothing to my aching soul. My life is filled with nothing but broken hopes and lonesomeness, and will continue to be so until you can return to me. Now, darling, can you realize why I say my life is so?



I am glad to hear you are enjoying your trip. I hope you will always enjoy life, dear; but each passing day is as a month to me while you are away from me in that far off world of sunshine and pleasure.

Won't you say you will return? Please! For what is life without the one you love and worship? And there could never be any one else. There can be but one like you in this whole, wide universe. God must have made you and lost the pattern. Not once in all my many wanderings have I met one so lovely, so divine, and so innocent!

Your absence, Hazel, has given me a glimpse of life without you. Who could think one little soul could change one's existence so! I tremble when I think of what could really happen. I have found it would be absolutely impossible to try to live without you.

Distant one, I stretch out my hands to you through the still darkness. Won't you grasp them and deliver me from this life of lonesomeness and torture?

Good night; may you have the best of everything.

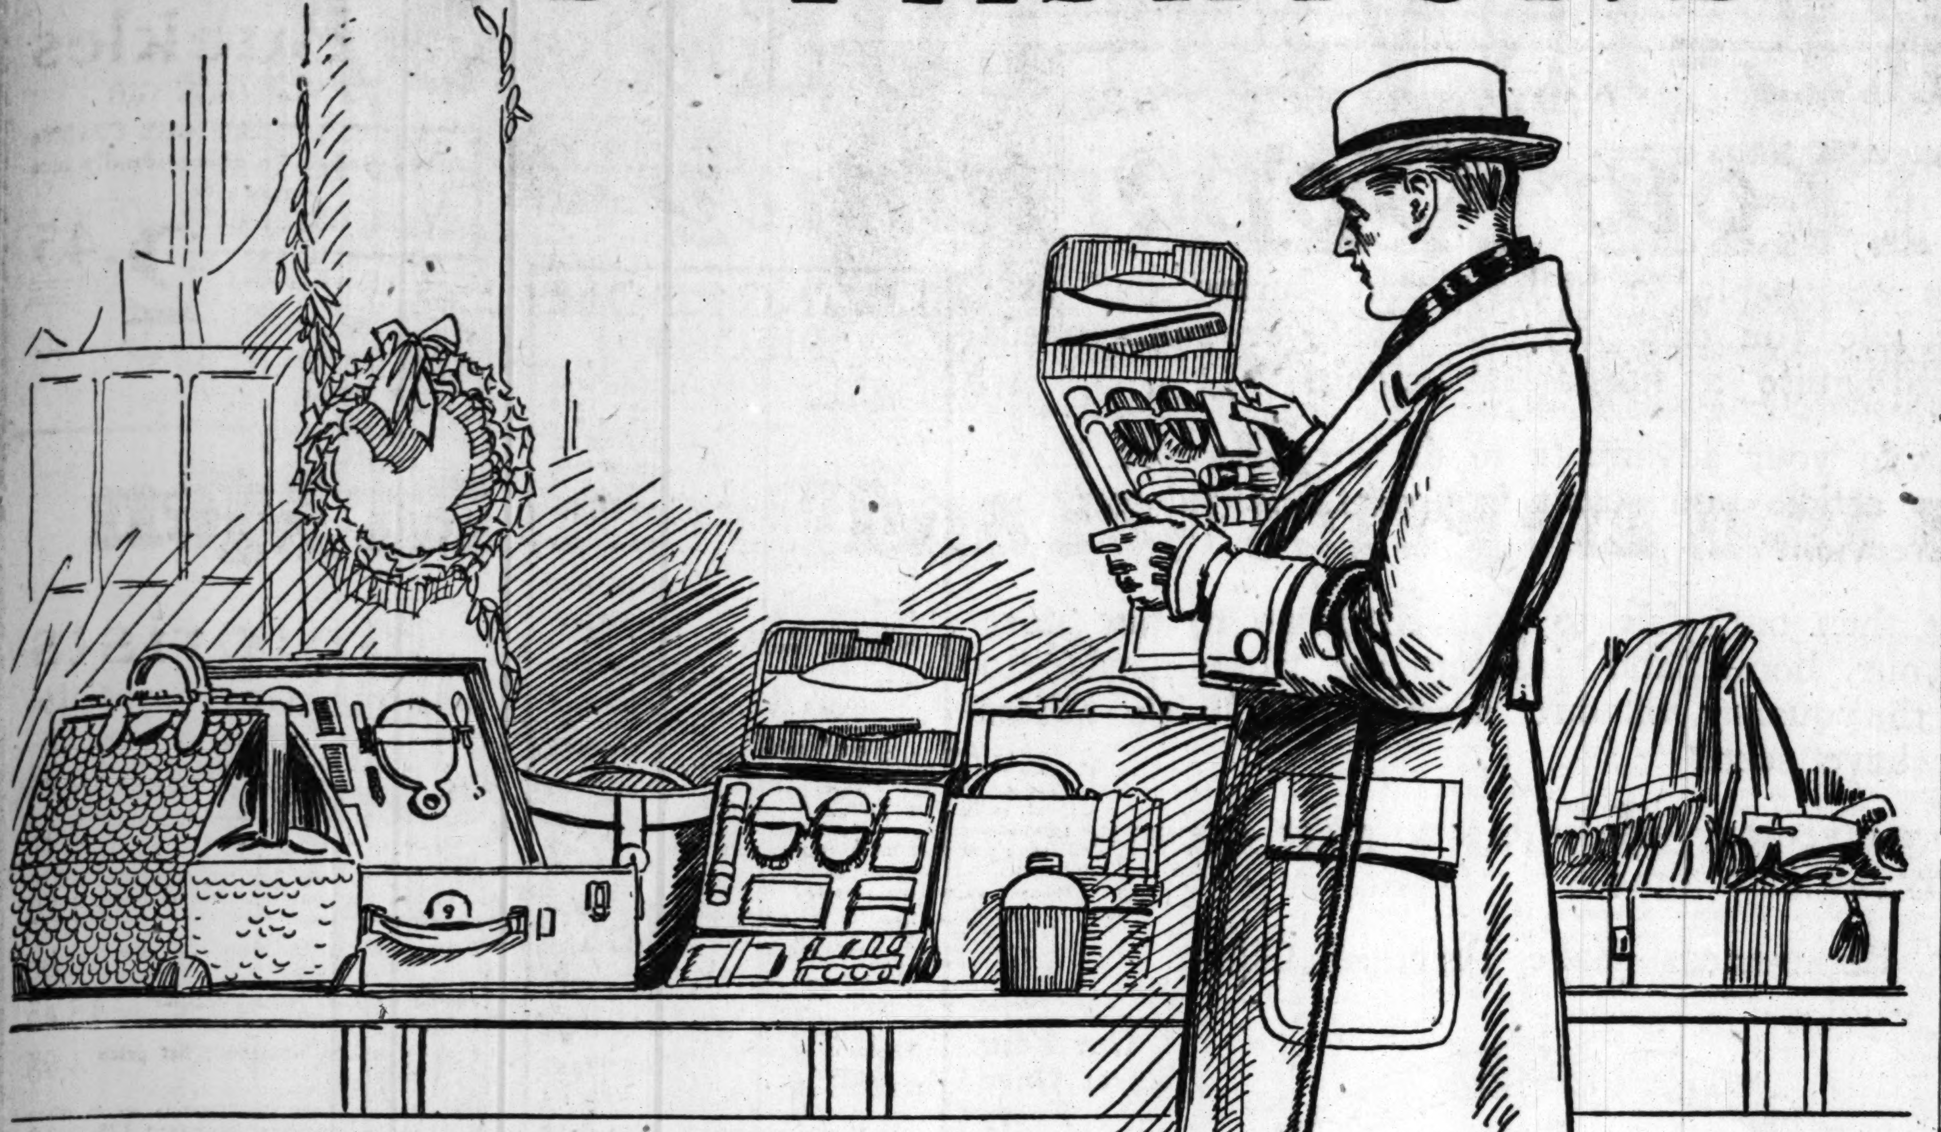
MEN'S FASHIONS



Alligator Skin Satchel for the Traveling Man. A Suitcase Fitted Out with Toiled Accessories. A Traveling Case Is a Most Useful Gift.

LEATHER COUNTER HAS GIFT FOR EVERY MAN.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK—[Special Correspondence.]—Christmas is but a week distant, and you are probably still wondering what to buy your father, or your brother, or your husband, or cousin, or uncle, or some male who must upon this festive occasion receive material proof of your love or friendship.

The other day I overheard two puzzled women discussing the dearth of Christmas gift possibilities for the men members of their families. There should be no reason for this predicament. Almost as many suggestions for men's presents are displayed in all the shops as there are for women. Some of these things I have already spoken of, such as neckties and mufflers and dressing gowns.

But the possibilities do not stop there by any means. Man does not live by ties alone, and if you step into any department or novelty store and look around you will be surprised at the number of articles that can be given to men and that they are sure to like.

Many men are hard to please, but I am willing to wager that there is a present for every man on your list among the leather goods of any store

Love of the smell of new leather is almost universal. Any one is glad to have a piece of leather in some form or other, and the forms in which leather is to be found are so attractive and so varied and useful that your selection is a wide one.

For example, look at the counter in the drawing. Going from left to right we see an alligator skin satchel, a suitcase fitted out with toilet accessories, a traveling case, a leather incased flask, and a binocular case. The average man is called upon rather frequently during his life to travel, either for business or on his vacations, and at these times there is nothing more satisfying than good looking baggage. A suitcase or satchel or a hat box is a most desirable possession. Some traveling men are in the habit of writing on the train, and for them an excellent gift is a writing case, which may be found in handsome leather colored blue or green, or black or red.

The man who travels is not the only one who may be given a pleasant leather surprise on Christmas morning. For there is another group of men which uses leather to a marked extent. This consists of the out-of-doors man and the sportsman. For him you can buy the leather covered flask, or the binocular case. If he likes to shoot he would like a leather gun case. Or if he is one of those human beings possessed of the golf habit, he would doubtless be delightedwith anew leather golf bag.

All men do not travel and all men do not indulge in sports or seek amusement in the fields and woods. But all men have one desire in common—they like to be comfortable, especially when they are loafing around the house. One good road to this much sought comfort is a pair of soft leather house shoes or slippers which a man can substitute for the heavy articles he has to carry around on his feet all day. Slippers come in various styles, and as they are something that wears out with constant use, can safely be presented, even though the recipient already owns a pair. You can get them either in plain leather, or if you want them extra cozy and warm, get some with fleece lining, and Christmas will be a huge success for some man.

Another leather article which is a daily necessity in a man's life and which every now and then needs replacing, is a pocketbook or a bill fold. This can be a more inexpensive gift than some of the other things I have mentioned. This is also true of a less necessary but none the less useful article, a leather collar bag. This is good for traveling or for use in the home. Unless a man keeps a special drawer in his bureau for his collars, there is large opportunity for the collars to become soiled or crushed. But if they are put into a collar box or bag which just fits them, this difficulty is disposed of. I saw some attractive collapsible pigskin boxes, lined with silk or satin, which would look well on top of a bureau. And there are bags that can be hung in the closet or put into a drawer or for travelling would fit well in a suitcase.

By no means in this list of Christmas suggestions must we forget the man who smokes. The subject takes me out of the province of leather, but the sight of some leather cigaret cases the other day reminded me that the presentation of smoking accessories is always a wise move, if the man in question smokes.

The present vogue in cigaret cases is one which holds cigarets on both sides. It is unusually smart in pigskin. But the silver case will doubtless always be used. If the man does not smoke cigarets, but carries a pipe and tobacco, he can always use a tobacco pouch. Pipes are not made of leather but they are, nevertheless, a welcome gift for any man who smokes them and may be found in many forms and prices. But in selecting a pipe it is advisable to find out what kind the man prefers, as pipe smokers are extremely fussy, and usually have definite and unchangeable ideas on the subject of their pipes.

Other flifts for the man who smokes may be a humidor, or a smoking table fitted out with ash trays and match lighters. These can be decorative, and are an attractive addition to a man's den or the family library.

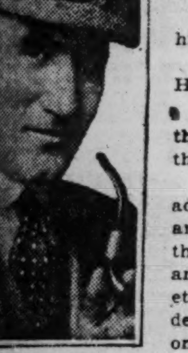
By Mae Tinee.

SUNDAY morning's the time you're supposed to have sermons preached to you, isn't it? Well, then, you listen to this what's what:

Don't you dare treat "The Bonnie Brier Bush" like you treated "Sentimental Tommy"! I think I've told you this before, but it won't hurt you to hear it again:

A big loop motion picture house booked the latter picture. Advertised it widely. Stuck posters out in front. The crowds came along, gave the posters the o.o., and marched off with their chins in the air. By the time I got around, the film had been taken off and—Fatty Arbuckle, I think, was playing.



DONALD CRISP

"How come?" I asked the manager. He rubbed his chin.

"I thought this was on for a long run," I said. He shook his head.

"So did I," he said, "but the people didn't like the kind of collars the hero wore. They looked at the posters, and wouldn't even go inside."

Now it's going to be awfully too bad if posters advertising "The Bonnie Brier Bush" are put where anybody can find them. For the people figuring in the story are supposed to have lived somewhere around 1870, I believe, and the collars, hats, skirts, etc., according to present day standards, are, my dears, well, too, too——! Nothing LIKE them is seen on the Boul Mich.

The picture, though, which has been shying around the outlying theaters for some time, is one of the most delightful screen offerings of the season. It was made in Scotland, and some of the scenery is almost too beautiful. The acting, though done by people most of whom are strangers to us, is—or should be—a treat to us. The whole thing has the sure, mellow tone of a Corot.

If you don't know the story, you're going to see the picture to find out about it. Anyhow, I'm not going to tell you, because—I want you to see the picture!

Honestly, I do.

CLOSEUPS

They tell me Harold Lloyd is to be quite pathetic in his next comedy. We wish he wouldn't—so many s. c. comedians are.

The Gentleman at the Adjacent Desk (to borrow a Line o' Type or Two) is awfully curious. He wants to know WHY:

If D. W. Griffith is really keen on doing something, why he doesn't make a film of Dumas' series of historical romances on the French revolution. These cover the period from the moment Marie Antoinette sets foot on French soil till the moment her head falls under the guillotine. He wants to know WHY:

It's "D. W. Griffith's ''Way Down East'" and "William Fox's 'Over the Hill'" when everybody knows Griffith and Fox had nothing to do with writing either. (I said credit was given the writers on the screen.) He wanted to know WHY:

It shouldn't be given them in electric lights.

HAROLD LLOYD
[National photo.]

The Gentleman at the Adjacent Desk also wants to know WHY:

Criminals in the pictures are "allowed to get away with it; because they don't, you know, with the exception of Tommy O'Connor and an occasional policeman." He wants to know WHY:

The military discipline is maintained on the part of the ushers toward the paying public at certain neighborhood theaters. He says he feels like a citizen of Thrums, being herded by English red coats. He—(O, he can't take up all our space this morning, you know!)

Charlie Ray attended a benefit performance at the Casino theater in New York. He was sitting in the audience just as meek and unostentatious when somebody yelped:

"Yoo, hoo, there's Charlie Ray!"

Nothing for him to do then but to take his hat and go up and down the aisles taking a collection.

One occasion, I bet you, when he wished his name wasn't Ray and nobody liked him enough to call him Charlie!

Lloyd Bacon, son of Frank Bacon, who really IS "Lightnin'," is writing stories for Lloyd Hamilton.

Heard this one? Who is the most finished actor of the screen? Answer: Roscoe Arbuckle.

Wonder if this is old stuff?—Victor Herbert is to lead the orchestra at the New York Strand. You know the old saying of the movie spiders: "Sooner or later, one way or another, we gettem all."

A critic of the drayma as it is spoken declares that Theodore Roberts and Lawson Butt are "wasted" upon the silver sheet. He says that both have marvelous voices, and reminisces over Mr. Roberts in "Arizona." He brings to mind the fact that Mr. Butt is brother of Clara Butt, one of the most famous contraltos of all time.

[Sarony photo.]

Gareth Hughes is in Mexico now, taking scenes for Metro's coming production, "Stay Home." They say he is studying Spanish, and sends all the natives to cover when he calls "Carramba!" so vigorously does he roll his r's. Further press reports are that he associates with natives only.

Recently, relateth the p. a., he became lost. He wanted to get to the city hall. He wanted a taxicab. So he spoke to a sombreroed gentleman after this fashion:

"Donde esta—taxi—seguro——???????——! !"

Several times he repeated his request, at last becoming, so they tell me, violently excited. Then the sombreroed one spoke:

"O, slow up! Park your machine! Where the blank did you say you wanted to go?"

ASK ME! ASK ME!

WRITER: If your idea is original, you can sell it without the aid of a photoplay bureau. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and we'll mail you information as to how you should submit your idea. Believe us, it's not much trouble. But original ideas (as you have probably observed) are as rare as hens' teeth. If you haven't observed the fact, forget about writing a scenario. You're disqualified.

NUF CED: You're a dear! Tell me something. On the other side of your paper there is a line, "Lily smiled happily as she slipped on the georgette waist she had bought especially for her date with Terry." Were you writing a scenario? And which is worse—to slip on a georgette waist, or a banana peel?

G. K.: Thank you.

OBSERVER: You speak words of wisdom. One never realizes how many people read their "stuff" until they misplace a comma or call a mandolin a guitar. Aren't it the truth, Observer? (Now watch 'em come across!)

BUNNIE AND BETSIE: Much as you will probably regret to hear the news—I am not a man. And I don't know "whole lotses" about Cullen Landis. I do know he's married, however, which will probably cause your tears to

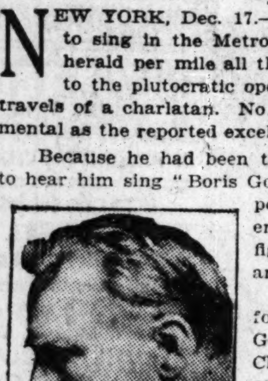
Chaliapine So Great One May Forgive Even Press Agents

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Chaliapine, the Russian, managed to condescend to sing in the Metropolitan. His approach, heralded at a rate of one herald per mile all the way from the Soviet Opera house of Petrograd to the plutocratic opera house of Gotham, seemed suspiciously like the travels of a charlatan. No excellence, one reasoned, could be quite so monumental as the reported excellence of Chaliapine.

Because he had been too skillfully preceded, I imagine, thousands went to hear him sing "Boris Godunoff" at two guest performances in the Metropolitan last week with mental reservations. By the end of the first act all those of little faith were figuratively on their knees to one of the greatest artists of his time.



FEODOR CHALIAPINE.

Chaliapine is so superlatively great that one may forgive him his press agents. Henceforth "Boris Godunoff" cannot be imagined without him. Minus Chaliapine it is a wheel without a hub, a deck without aces.

There is no work of the theater which gambles quite so recklessly as this Russian drama by Pushkin, with music by Moussorgski, on its principal interpreter. It is an attempt to stage an historical epoch—a confused epoch which has suffered the additional confusion of much incorrect report of its events and more incorrect appraisals of the qualities of its people—and it centers an almost inextricably involved plot about one foreigner, a czar of primitive Russia, who shall serve, in a way, as a sine to solve its many angles.

The Drama of a Nation.

There are eight scenes—acts, they might be safely called—to "Boris Godunoff." Their most important business is not the drama of "Boris" at all, but the drama of a nation's upheavals during a time of strife of its rulers. For purposes of illustration, not comparison, the Pushkin play may be compared to Griffith's film, "The Birth of a Nation." It has the same divisibility of theme, dealing with a dozen lives which are related only because they are contemporary, being contributary to the final catastrophe.

Of these eight scenes, four, at the most, deal directly with the fate of the Czar Boris. These four contain entire an unusually rich drama, similar in some of its aspects to the Shakespearean drama, "Richard III." As did Richard, Boris strangles a child, the son of his brother, to clear his way to the throne. He is coronated and left to himself in a palace to reflect on his crime. The loneliness of kings is his undoing. There is no adventure in all the business of ruling quite engrossing enough to chase the visions of his remorse.

The explanation given to the public of the disappearance of the murdered heir is that he has been kidnaped, and, in the course of time, a scheming monk from Lithuania travels into Russia with a tale that he is the missing czarvitch, rightful czar of Russia. The credulous populace believes the tale, and "the false Dimitri" advances at the head of a victorious rabble to the walls of Moscow, the capital.

There are partisans of the pretender in the duma. To save the throne for his own son it will be necessary for Boris to confess his old crime. He does, and dies.

Where Interpreter Comes in.

But none of this explains the rest of the drama, which deals with many affairs of the nation. At one time the spectator is in an inn on the Lithuanian frontier, overhearing the gossip of politics, wars, and prices of the mistress of the inn with drunken clients.

Again there is a scene in a Russian forest during a gathering of the peasantry. This act is a beautiful bit of irony on the wooden-headedness of masses, but it takes a powerful effort of the imagination to assimilate it to the main matter of the drama. The peasants, ignorant and without direction, bewail their wrongs, ascribe them successively to a local magistrate, a wandering madman, two luckless Jesuits who pass on the road, and whatever else they can find which they do not understand. And the astute pretender, Dimitri, passing at the head of a small escort, gathers this mob under his standard without effort with two well chosen words. Then, as unreasonably as does the "cut-back" of a film, the action lurches a thousand versts away to acquaint us with an irrelevant amour of Dimitri with a Polish Juliet.

ALEXANDER PUSHKIN.

None but a great interpreter could uncover this discursive play's essential simplicity. Its digressions are simply the digressions of the circular ripples on still water when a stone it thrown into it. "Boris Godunoff" is simply a completely inclusive demonstration of the great effects of an act. Where most plays work inward to a concentrated and essential solution of the original problem, it works outward to embrace the entirety of the problem. But it sorely needs a directing personality.

The Dominating Chaliapine.

It sorely needs Chaliapine. He is something of which the spectator is in a state of constant consciousness. It is not so much when he is on the stage as when he is not on the stage that his greatness is manifest. In three scenes in which he is present he so stamps the mark of his genius on the opera that his Boris, like Napoleon, rules while he sleeps.

Chaliapine accomplishes this feat of complete domination of a stage without extravagant eruptions of acting and vast vocal effort. Principally the trick is done pictorially. His gesture is prodigiously kingly. Even when Chaliapine fights, a craven and demented criminal, with his hallucinations, he remains regal. It is a great actor who can always remember who he is for the evening and not once remember he is an actor.

Chaliapine achieves some startling effects with two handkerchiefs. One is red, the other white. While he is proud, a conqueror, and a successful despot he carries the red, and you know what the knouts are doing in all Russia. And when his rule is swaying about him, and the little leak under his heart widening, until, at last, it lets the life out of him, the kerchief is white, abject and surrendering. Chaliapine knows what to do with his hands, but to actors who do not I recommend handkerchiefs.

The singing is rich and "talkative." By that I mean that it has the quality of dramatic meaning, and in its richest tones always carries a still richer significance. This characteristic of Chaliapine's singing was very evident in the several recitals he gave before he consented stiffly to perform in opera. He is tremendously concerned with the words of his songs, and uses all he knows about tone in the abstract to give concreteness to the sense of songs.

New York's Emotions Mixed.

He has been received with mixed emotions. This is the scene at the end of each of his opera performances:

The silk stockings in the $11 seats disperse lamely after the final curtain, clearly stirred beyond their customary capacities for enthusiasm. Then the cotton stockings of the upper galleries—their capacities for enthusiasm have not yet been plumbed—who have been scurrying down the opera house stairs like a subway rush, invade the sacred parterre, and something like a new and different performance starts.

These people are as voracious for "seconds" as an infantryman, and they stand and clamor until the lights go out. Mostly they are Jews. All are Russian in their heart of hearts, and they take their countryman lovingly to their bosoms. Ex officio, Chaliapine is representing his soviets in this country exceedingly well, and any one who, seeing these post-performance receptions wherever he sings, doubts it believes that everything is always settled in Washington and that propaganda is something that invariably drops out of balloons.

MODEST P. MOUSSORGSKI.

Clare Kummer's Great Dane.

Her sentiment was once Clare Kummer's pet puppy, an amusing little beast which she allowed on her stage at moments, and only for moments, and so manageable that she could easily toss it out of the nearest window whenever it showed a tendency to relax its house manners. Now, in "The Mountain Man," which has come into Maxine Elliott's theater, her sentiment is a voluminous annoyance, a great sickly Dane, damp with tenderness and fat with pathos. Omnipresent, it waddles and slobbers among the bric-à-brac of Miss Kummer's still rare and happy fancy, lunging its dead weight disastrously into her brightest scenes and dimming the luster of her most radiant whimsies with its hot and steamy breath.

It is difficult to rescue from the deluge of honey hokum which inundated Miss Kummer tonight the few sticks and straws of the best and brightest

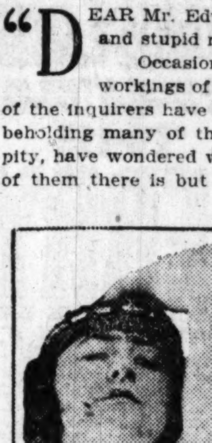
In Which the Music Critic Is Instructed as to His Plain Duty

By Edward Moore

"DEAR Mr. Edward Moore, musical critic: Surely you are not so dull and stupid not to observe how——"

Occasionally I hear a desire to know something about the inner workings of the curious profession known as musical criticism. Some of the inquirers have been good enough to express envy at the opportunity of beholding many of the famous figures in music. Others, perhaps with more pity, have wondered whether it did not get to be a good deal of a bore. To all of them there is but one answer. Musical criticism is a business like other businesses, and unless its practitioner likes it well enough to enjoy it for its own sake he is not justified in remaining in it.



MARY GARDEN
as Salome.
[Photo Copyright: Matzene.]

There is one interesting side of it that few on the outside suspect. That is the vast number of communications received by mail that point out how completely I am wrong in theory, practice, observation, and general good sense. Let me but express an opinion, no matter how cautious and guarded, and I am quite certain to be severely castigated by letter for not having expressed another. Sometimes I wonder how I have escaped with my life all these years. It would seem as though I had not wit enough to avoid being run down on a street crossing.

Occasionally these flagellatory epistles are signed. Frequently, like the one at the head of this column, they are anonymous.

I did not quote beyond the opening greeting of that one because it seems to me that a certain degree of good manners should attach to even an anonymous contribution. Vox pop. requires signature and address to all its communications. No such requirement has been made for the musical column. But at that this particular one seemed to be to a certain extent lacking in the polished urbanity, the suave amenity that is customary in letters. So when I got that far, like Paolo and Francesca da Rimini, in that page I read no more that day.

"Dear sir," writes "A Lady Opera Patron" indignantly—as I live by food, people do sign their communications that way sometimes—"I am indeed surprised at the poor compliments paid Dr. Richard Strauss and Miss Schumann by you. It almost seems that you were not present. Let me say to you the Auditorium was filled with talented people, and according to the applause given these two artists certainly did not share your view."

Questions of grammar apart, that is of a sufficient pungency. But, dear Lady Opera Patron, I was there and I saw a good many talented people. In fact, I named about a dozen who were in easy reach of my eye. As to the applause given, if every one shared my opinion there would not be the slightest need of my expressing one.

Once this season, for reasons of lateness of performance, lack of space, and early hour of going to press, an opera review was omitted. The omission brought a sharp rebuke, signed this time. "I can realize where the director can play favorites and show partiality, but for a paper like THE TRIBUNE to condescend to such pettiness is beyond my comprehension." The point is not to be argued.

Much Ado Over Little.

"The crying need in the musical world of America today is constructive instead of destructive criticism," begins another letter without so much as initials wherewith to bless itself. "The constant harpings of the critics and their passing lightly over programs by our greatest artists, not even mentioning one song as rendered acceptably, is most disheartening and discouraging to music students or even near celebrities."

All this because I happened to mention that the artist in question was on that day several points off her best form. Like the letter just before, this is beyond my comprehension. Why should a student or a near celebrity lose heart because an artist in a particular performance was not at his or her best? Some one with more insight than I possess will have to answer.

AMELITA GALLI-CURCI
[Matzene photo.]

"You might have said that she sang our old ballads very beautifully," it goes on. Yes, I might—if I had heard them. That recital was one of a number of others on that day, all going at the same time and distributed over wide territory. This being the case, I took pains to state with some exactness just what I had heard. It was my misfortune to miss our old ballads, but apparently that part of it escaped the correspondent.

More in Sorrow Than in Anger.

But this was a veritable hornet among letters, carrying its sting in its tail. "It must be awful to be a music critic and show how bored one can become listening to so much beautiful music and admit that one's soul is not large enough to find at least one song in every concert to enjoy."

After that I could only stagger feebly to my feet and reiterate my timid belief that apparently constructive criticism consists chiefly in the reckless use of adjectives denoting praise, the more adjectives the more construction.

But apparently I have not always erred on the side of severity. I am led to infer that sometimes I have been much too lenient. As long ago as last summer I was informed, more in sorrow than in anger, that the opera performances at Ravinia were by no means all that had been claimed for them, especially when the Chicago Opera association existed.

The Chicago Opera association itself has been the occasion of appreciably swelling the mail headed this way. Once I had occasion to use the words "nearly an ideal cast" when referring to the performance of "L'Amore dei Tre Re." This was one reaction:

EDITH MASON
as Manon.
[Matzene photo.]

"The ideal cast should include Edward Johnson, not Muratore. The Chicago Opera company has given other nearly ideal casts this season, 'Monna Vanna,' 'Samson et Dalila,' 'Madama Butterfly,' and 'Le Jongleur de Notre Dame.' Too bad 'Aïda,' 'Boheme,' 'Tannhäuser,' and 'Rigoletto' have not done so well. Too bad also that Mme. Garden insists on doing 'Carmen,' the one rôle she can neither sing nor act. You must admit she is the very opposite of the ideal Carmen in looks, action, manner, and, most of all, voice. Ye gods!"

And there you are.

I have never claimed to be infallible in judgment, and the chances are that it will be a long time before I do. In one respect, however, I have it on some of the correspondents I have just been mentioning. I sign my name to my opinions. Occasionally in leisure moments I indulge in the hope that some day I may meet an anonymous letter writer face to face.

I have a bit of curiosity to know what such a person looks like.

Coming Joys of Opera.

After an extended period of running on its own momentum—there have been two additions to the répertoire in three weeks—the Chicago Opera association will resume its task of presenting other operas to a public that has been responsive this season as never before.

"Salome," by Oscar Wilde and Richard Strauss, is billed for revival with Miss Garden, Lucien Muratore, and Hector Dufranne in the chief rôles. It has been unheard here since the first season of the company in 1910.

Galli-Curci, the well beloved, is back with the company on what is hinted to be her last season here. She will be associated with that finest of all Italian lyric tenors, Tito Schipa, twice a week for a period. Her Violetta in "Traviata" and the name part of "Lucia di Lammermoor" are the first announcements, with "Sonnambula" and "Lakme" listed among forthcoming joys.

Edith Mason, the outstanding success among this year's newcomers, will have a new rôle, Manon in Massenet's opera of the same name. Mr. Muratore will be associated with her as the Chevalier des Grieux. The same great pair are to be heard later in "Romeo and Juliet."

Just enough of an audience to use all the seats in the Auditorium was disappointed by the nonappearance on Dec. 4 of Féodor Chaliapine, who, although a popular idol in most of the world's capitals, remains, vocally, a stranger here, where the rewards of success in song are higher than anywhere else on earth. Mr. Seidman, to whom fell the unpleasant duty of refunding something like $7,500 to the disappointed audience of the 4th inst., will seek to appease his patrons and reimburse himself, he says, by bringing Chaliapine back for a recital in the big opera house in the evening of New Year's day.

The big Russian's failure to appear was not at all an occasion for some

New Year's Eve at the Play: A List for Theater Shoppers

By Sheppard Butler.

FEW items of American literature are more stimulating in their possibilities of hope and despair than the sterling compendium known as the shopping list. In the pleasant frenzies of the pre-holiday period, it is the indispensable center of much necessary storm and stress—a varying record of success and failure, according as you do or do not get what you want. It nearly drives you crazy, but you can't do without it.

MISS JULIA MARLOWE
as Portia in "The Merchant of Venice."
[Schwarz Photo.]

Adding to the worries of its customers is no proper function of this department, but tradition, this morning, seems to make it a duty. From time immemorial the dramatic editor, as winter approaches, has submitted a list of possible destinations for New Year's eve, with a solicitous reminder that you must decide what play you will see. For, of course, one always sees a play on New Year's eve.

Here, then, is the list. Many good entertainments, some grave and some gay, will be with us at the end of next week, and what may be classified as serious drama will be rather noticeably in the majority. Of this description are:

"The Merchant of Venice" [Great Northern]—Edward H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe in an entirely new production of Shakespeare's comedy, conceived, as to stage settings, in the modern manner and enriched by fine, authoritative acting. The schedule for the Sothern-Marlowe engagement has been altered since it was printed in these columns last week, and "The Merchant of Venice" is now listed for the first seven performances.

"The Return of Peter Grimm" [Powers]—Mr. Belasco's beautiful and appealing play about life after death, with David Warfield again appearing as its central figure, a part he first acted ten years ago. The players include seven members of the original cast.

"Daddy's Gone a-Hunting" [La Salle]—Miss Marjorie Rambeau, vividly remembered for her performances of "The Sign on the Door," in a new play by Zoe Akins, author of "Déclassée."

"The Woman of Bronze" [Princess]—Miss Margaret Anglin and her associates in a much revised drama of French origin, presenting some of the best acting of the year.

"The Skin Game" [Central]—John Galsworthy's thoughtful study of life as it is lived in an English small town.

In Lighter Vein: Comedies and the Shows With Music.

Of what are popularly regarded as comedies, in distinction from the more serious plays, there are:

"Lightnin'" [Blackstone]—Frank Bacon's whimsical variant of the Rip Van Winkle theme—a well beloved characterization that seems to have nearly all the elements of popular appeal.

"Nice People" [Cort]—Rachel Crothers' sparkling play about the wayward younger generation, with Miss Francine Larrimore having pretty tantrums and falling in love at the end.

"Enter Madame" [Playhouse]—Miss Gilda Varesi in a colorful impersonation of a fiery prima donna, confronted with amusing perplexities by an errant husband.

"The Bat" [Grand]—Dark deeds, baffling mystery, false clews in bewildering succession. The best of the current thrillers.

MISS FANNY BRICE
in the "Ziegfeld Follies."
[Monroe Photo.]

If you prefer that delectable form of entertainment known as the revue, you have the choice of:

"Ziegfeld Follies" [Colonial]—Mr. Ziegfeld's annual pageant, sumptuous and alluring as always, compounded in about equal parts of stately scenery, brilliant costumes, lovely women, and droll comedians.

"Greenwich Village Follies" [Garrick]—A gorgeous procession of impressive stage pictures serving as background for an uncommonly lively melange of song, dance, and fleet nonsense.

"Elsie Janis and Her Gang" [Olympic]—A naïve bit of diversion, pleasantly informal, providing Miss Janis with the occasion for a dazzling display of her many sided artistry. Miss Janis is now at the Illinois, but will move at the end of this week.

Finally, operetta and musical comedy are represented by two widely divergent productions:

"The Merry Widow" [Illinois]—Franz Lehar's tuneful success of former days, presented in elaborate revival, with new scenery by Joseph Urban.

"Under the Bamboo Tree" [Studebaker]—Bert Williams at his best, surrounded by a cast of capable entertainers.

Hard Times Bring "Theater Holiday"; Many Producers Quit.

Dismayed by the vicissitudes of a season in which more than fifty out of a hundred new productions have already met failure, a majority of the New York producers have declared a theater holiday, somewhat after the fashion of the naval holiday discussed by the pundits in Washington. Among those who have announced definitely that they will make no more productions this season are Wagenhals & Kemper, George Broadhurst, Morris Gest, Brock Pemberton, and Marc Klaw. In addition, John Golden, Edgar Selwyn, Winthrop Ames, and Max Marcin have abandoned their production plans for the remainder of the winter.

That the theatrical times are out of joint is evidenced daily by new reports of playhouses closed and actors stranded. In the smaller towns many theaters are "dark" and the condition is spreading to the larger cities. In Philadelphia, two theaters will be untenanted this week. In Boston, the prospect is that three will not be open during the holidays—an unprecedented state of affairs. As for the stranded actors, it was in their behalf that the Equity ball was held at the Congress into the wee, sma' hours of this morning. The proceeds will be used to send the shipwrecked players home, as was done in the case of "Love Birds," the ill-starred venture at the Studebaker, whose performers received $1,400 in loans from the Equity.

News and Views (Mostly News) About the Stage and Its People.

This column reported recently a more or less futile search in the theaters for something that would provide wholesome enjoyment for children. There is something now. They have established a children's theater in the Playhouse, where, on Saturday mornings, Miss Alice Gerstenberg is directing performances of "Alice in Wonderland"—a revival of the delightful play by Miss Gerstenberg which was produced on the same stage in 1915. The first performance was given yesterday, with a cast composed of members of the Junior league. Six more Saturday mornings will be devoted to "Alice in Wonderland," and then, if the patronage warrants it, other plays for children will be staged.

Otis Skinner's itinerary has been arranged with Chicago as an objective point, and he will arrive at the Illinois on Feb. 5, to play the flamboyant toreador in a footlight version of "Blood and Sand," one of the many novels by Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

Mr. Ziegfeld gives assurance that, during the forthcoming engagement of his "Follies," all tickets will be sold through the box office window of the Colonial theater. There will be, he says, no dealings with the agencies, sometimes referred to irreverently as the "scalpers."

Miss Gilda Varesi's London appearance in "Enter Madame" has been appointed for Feb. 13 at the Royalty theater. She will close her Chicago engagement on the last night of 1921 and will play a fortnight on the road before embarking for England.

"The Whirl of New York," recently a tenant of the Great Northern, has been called home from its travels and transformed into a vaudeville act. It started its new career last week with, they say, a cast of sixty-five people, which is a great many for vaudeville.

Subscribing to the belief that actors can do their own producing, a band of players of some renown has taken possession of the National theater in New York, vacated last night by the departure of "Main Street." They call themselves the National players, and their roster includes Wilton Lackaye, George Nash, Miss Charlotte Walker, Maclyn Arbuckle, Harry Mestayer, Edmond Lowe, and Ignatio Martinetti. Repertory at low prices will be offered, with a revival of "Trilby" as their first production.

Charles Cherry, who was to have played with Miss Grace George in "Marie Antoinette" but didn't, will return to activity this week in "The Dover Road," something new by A. A. Milne, author of "Mr. Pim Passes By." Also present in the Milne play will be Miss Winifred Lenihan, recently at the Central in "The Detour."

When Miss Ethel Levy finishes her vaudeville visit in this country she will go back to London to be starred in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," now being played in New York by Miss Ina Claire.

"Sally" is a year old in New York this week. The musical comedy, according to its sponsors, has brought in nearly $2,000,000 in gross receipts and has paid $155,000 to its authors in royalties.

Barney Bernard, quickly through with "Two Blocks Away," has been approached on the subject of acting Potash again. A reunion with Alexander Carr is not impossible.

Harold Bell Wright has written a play. It is called "The Salt of the Earth," and they say Miss Emma Carus will act in it.

Miss Yera Michelena, who left the "Ziegfeld Follies" to play in "Love Dreams," one of the season's failures, is back in the "Follies" and will be among those present at the Colonial on Christmas night.

"Charley's Aunt," a hardy perennial of former years, has been revived in London.

Leo Ditrichstein will open the new 49th street theater in New York on the day after Christmas, playing his new comedy, "Face Value." This is the piece to which he gave some experimental performances at the Studebaker last summer. He called it "That Homely Henriquez" then.

The third production of the French Modern theater's season will be revealed at Kimball hall on Tuesday afternoon and evening. The play is "Miquette et sa Mere," by Robert de Flers and G. de Caillavet.

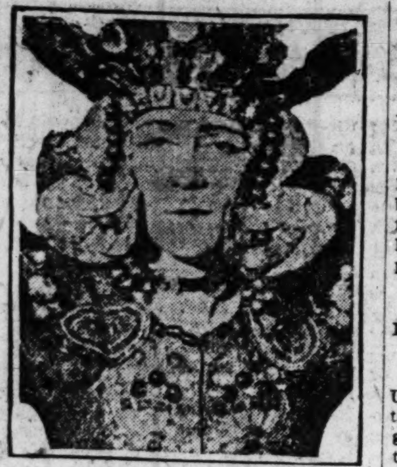
now. And Wallace Reid is 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 170 pounds, and has light brown hair and blue eyes. Yes, dears, all young girls (and most other people) are "crazy at some time in their lives." You trot right along to high school. I bet Bunnie's the blonde. Yes?

KALAMAZOO: Nature takes care of things like that in her own good time. The wounds are often a long time healing—but if they don't kill pretty quickly, they DO heal. That's worth thinking about, isn't it? If I only had your address I'd write you a personal letter. Anyhow, I'm thinking of you and hoping for you.

ELEANOR: Herbert Rawlinson is the man in "Conflict" that you refer to. His sweater does fit him like the paper on the wall, doesn't it!



Serge Oukrainsky, premier danseur and ballet director of the Chicago Opera association, specializes in the colorful and bizarre in his public appearances. The cut above represents him in the guise of a Hindu god in the ballet occurring in the second act of Delibes' opera, "Lakmé."

ELEANOR: Herbert Rawlinson is the man in "Conflict" that you refer to. His sweater does fit him like the paper on the wall, doesn't it!

NEAR BEER: One case of the nearer you are, the farther you get, isn't it? I think you mean the Fairbanks twins. They were with Thanhouser in the good old days. Address Bebe Daniels, care of Realart, Los Angeles. Y'wekkum.

CAROLINE: Yes, Lloyd Hughes has an engaging manner. He was born in Bisbee, Ariz., 1899. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 150 pounds, has dark hair, and greenish-gray eyes. (Telephone 598438.)

BELLA DONNA: I don't mind. Rather see you mad than indifferent.

LENA D.: Yes, Frank Mayo is with Universal. They do say that he's getting mighty tired of fight pictures that get him all banged up. His first picture was made with Edna Flugrath, known now as Viola Dana.

MRS. A. M. G.: It was nice of you to notice the column's absence. Thanks for your kindly interest. You know, I can't agree with you about Pauline Starke and Percy Marmont. Both happen to be favorites of mine. Didn't notice the discrepancy you mention. Reckon I'll have to see the picture again. Sometimes you fans are loads more observing than I. Do write again.

JOHANNA: I won't laugh at you—but I cannot give an opinion on your scenario.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

MUSINGS.

(The birth rate in this country has increased 16 per cent.—News Item.)

The birth rate has increased, no doubt,
But what is that to crow about?
Exhibit A: The Human Race,
Observe it, please . . . we rest our case.
(You look at me . . . I look at you . . .
"Let's wipe it out and start anew!")

Some people's brains are very tall
And others have no brains at all,
And yet a couple of centuries hence
'Twill make but little difference.
When plans in fruitless effort halt,
It's always some one else's fault.
But if a small success is ours
We say it to ourselves with flowers.

Some people work and get their due,
Some people loaf and get it, too.
And others whine aloud in prayer . . .
Does God, I wonder, really care?

Sinister shadows—creaking stairs—a hand on the door knob—a terrified girl! Edgar Allan Poe might have written "Conflict."

A pampered society bud against the great North Woods! Man against man! Woman against woman! Man against the elements! That's "Conflict."

Thousands of logs—rushing, crushing, with torrential violence down the flooded ravine—"Conflict" is an epic of the timber country.

A mad race with the flood—dare-devil leaping from log to log. See Priscilla Dean in her breath-taking rescue scene in "Conflict."

"A Prince There Was"

From Geo. M. Cohan's celebrated stage hit. A pleasure-loving rich man—a wonderful girl—a little orphan slavey. New York, seething, surging; pulling them together into its swirl.

That's the story that gives Thos. Meighan, a big, fine human role that blends life's strength and tenderness as only he can do. Full of the spirit of a Christmas Samaritan, it is just the picture you and the kiddies will thoroughly enjoy.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

School Set Has Center of Stage During Holidays

By Mme. X.

So long has my little typewriting machine been hammering out the fabric which goes to make this weekly contribution to history that it knows more than I do about what is going forward. Today it fairly nudges my elbow in its effort to remind me there is a new sound of commotion in the air or in the offing. It is the clamor of hundreds of youngsters returning from various schools for the Christmas holidays.

For the next fortnight society will take—somewhat involuntarily—a back seat. Such shrines of good cheer as the Casino and the Saddle and Cycle club will be largely given over to the dinners and dances gotten up for these lads and lassies. The Drake and Ambassador hotels and the Opera club will also be popular rendezvous for this vigorous element.

At the last named place Mrs. Frank G. Gardner and Mrs. A. L. Drum will be hostesses next Thursday afternoon at a tea dance for Miss Dorothy Gardner, Miss Eunice Smith, and John Drum. The following afternoon the Casino will be the setting for a tea dance given by Mrs. George Packard and Mrs. James W. Morrisson for Miss Polly Packard and Robert Morrisson.

On the Monday after Christmas Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. Viles and Mr and Mrs. Charles Dewey are entertaining the young friends of Miss Suzette Dewey and Miss Glee Louise Viles at an evening dance at the Casino.

Outlook Is Bright and Gay.

The following afternoon Mrs. J. W. Beckwith is giving a tea dance at the Drake for her daughter, Miss Mary Anna Beckwith, and the latter's guest, Miss Addie Clark Harding. Still another tea dance will bring the young people together the next afternoon, when Mrs. William C. Boyden and Mrs. Stephen Foster are entertaining at the Ambassador for Miss Margaret Boyden and Miss Rachel Foster. In short, it is a promising outlook from the point of view of the youthful terpsichoreans of the community.

In one particular it is somewhat different from the programs of other years, and that is that on the invitations the hours do not seem so health menacing or devastating as formerly. Prospects are that not so many young wrecks will turn up at the mills of learning when the disciples return after the New Year. Perhaps this old world of ours is experiencing one of its periodical moments of temporary reform.

All the Christmas cheer is not, however, for the children. There is to be a birthday party next Thursday afternoon down at the Old People's home, at 4724 Vincennes avenue, which, in the writer's estimation, vies with anything we know of in appeal and importance as a social event. It is the one hundredth birthday of Mme. Lucie D'Episy, a Frenchwoman who has been living in the home since 1901. Born in Paris in the year in which the great Napoleon died, she came to this country with her husband, a doctor, so long ago that she is not quite sure in what year it was, though her mind is as clear as most minds of half her age.

As it is not often that one has the privilege of visiting any one on the brink of the second hundred years of life, and, furthermore, having a special interest in those who have entered that quiet, lonely valley called old age, we gladly accepted an invitation from Mrs. Henry Hoyt to visit the French centenarian and her neighbors in their beautiful home in Vincennes avenue.

Sitting in Contemplation.

It is a fine looking building, with spacious, airy rooms on the ground floor, consisting of an office, an attractive dining room, a spick and span kitchen, a large sun parlor filled with green and tropical plants, and several well furnished sitting rooms. On the second floor is a chapel and other sitting rooms, while on this floor, and on the two upper stories, long corridors, each a study in perspective, stretch away in different directions.

Over everything hung a deep hush. Yet opening out on each side of those long, neat halls were pleasant little rooms, and in each one sat a little old lady, silent, patient, seemingly infinitely tranquil. Occasionally a silvery head would be lifted to enable the failing eyes to peer out at the passerby. For the most part, however, they all seemed to be sitting in a contemplation as profound as that of any disciple of Buddha. It was the epitome of old age.

A peculiarly peaceful, dignified, and dainty figure was the especial object of our visit, Mme. D'Episy. She, like all the others, was sitting silent, motionless, apparently gazing at the neat white bed near by. In reality she is sightless, but she turned her worn-out eyes on us with a radiant light when we spoke to her in French. Her trembling old hands reached out and clasped ours as if so glad to have contact with a receding world, nor would she let go until the visit was over. She wore a pretty cap, under which her snow white hair lay soft and thick.

A Cake with 100 Candles.

Next Thursday the home is going to make a festa of her century birthday such as has never before been held in that place of many ripe birthdays. There is to be a program of songs in the chapel. M. Barthelmy, the French consul, will make a little speech. And, furthermore, Mrs. Henry Farnum is having made at the Drake hotel the finest birthday cake ever turned out which is to carry 100 candles. The object of all these festivities accepts them with the calm of a hundred years of experience of life joys and sorrows.

As we walked back down the corridors from all the rooms emerged the frail and tottering occupants, each with an eager greeting, a question, holding out shaking, thin hands to clasp ours as if to get in touch with a world which they had left behind them long ago. There are 151 inmates of this home which is one of the oldest of the many institutions run for the welfare of the dependent in the city.

Although it was incorporated in 1873, it had been in existence some time before that, having started in a little house not far from where it is now with twelve old ladies. Today it has a waiting list of over a hundred.

The payment of $500 [it used to be $375] admits an old lady and insures her the tenderest, best care for the rest of her life. Up to a few years ago these payments, with certain endowments, sufficed to provide food, lodging, and clothes for the inmates. But now that the price of living has so increased it is not enough, and for the first time in its history the home is making an appeal to the public for support.

In Memory of Their Mother.

For one thing it is offering to those who want something for their money the second night of "Little Old New York," which opens on New Year's day [which is a Sunday] at Cohan's Grand, so that part of the public disinclined to Sunday theater is asked to make Monday, Jan. 2, the gala opening of the engagement.

The home might well be called a shrine to mothers. The main building was given by Martin Ryerson in memory of his mother; the two wings are similar gifts, one from A. C. Bartlett, and the other from James A. Patten, also in memory of their mothers.

Robert McDougal is president of the board of trustees, James A. Patten is vice president, George A. Tripp is secretary and treasurer. The trustees are Charles L. Hutchinson, Chauncey Keep, Frederick T. Haskell, Chauncey B. Borland, William J. Watson, and Noble B. Judah Jr. William J. Watson is president of the board of managers, Mrs. Henry W. Hoyt is vice president. Mrs. E. A. Lancaster is recording secrestry, Mrs. Henry Blair is corresponding secretary, and Miss M. E. Otis is treasurer.

Best Opera, Bar None.

Never has Chicago had so brilliant a season of grand opera as this one we are now enjoying. Whether it be that final flare which all blazes give just before expiring, or whether it be the beginning of new and even greater achievements, achievements which shall put Chicago at the top of the list of world capitals as a center of music and dramatic art, remains to be made manifest by the ultimate result of the campaign for the remaining 252 guarantors which are needed to make our opera a permanency.

Today we are producing better grand opera than any other city, not barring even New York. In this the final year under the old, royal, generous patronage of the present board of guarantors, and of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick especially, there is an almost too prodigal splendor in the manner in which the great works of the past and the present composers are presented. They satisfy the eye as well as the ear.

The ballet, under the direction of our two Russian dancers, Pavley and Oukrainsky, is more dazzling than ever before. In "Samson and Delila," in "Aida," and in other pieces requiring a corps de ballet this feature of the opera has been of peculiarly interesting and significant quality, more brilliant than anything of its kind done at present in Gotham—at least, so say Chicagoans who return from that metropolis. Our stage settings and costumes are also fresh and well designed. Our stars are "facile princeps," and have now trained us to such a high standard that we are likely never to be contented with anything less perfect.

The Clamor That Thrills.

Also we are acquiring such a confidence in our own judgment that we will accept only our own verdicts on the artists who come before us. We discovered Rosina Galli, at present the Metropolitan premiere danseuse. We first recognized Galli-Curci's marvelous coloratura on a Saturday afternoon four years ago when she was singing Gilda's part in "Rigoletto." We have cherished and admired the unrivaled talents of Muratore, the greatest dramatic tenor of his time. We have realized the many sided genius of Mary Garden, and given it a scope never before accorded a prima donna.

In short, we have proved our right to have opera established here as a permanency. For opera is not merely a matter of artistic production, it is even more a question of intelligent and critical audiences. Our full houses and discriminating applause prove us to be both. To listen to the hand clapping start, as it does, high up in the topmost galleries, where our most musical and appreciative opera habitués gather nightly, to note it gathering force and volume as it rolls down those steep and densely peopled heights until it spreads like a giant flood of sound across the parquet to beat against and drown the orchestra, is to shiver with that unqualed thrill that inarticulate, tremendous clamor always evokes.

Is this unrivaled union of high artistic accomplishment and ardent appreciation to be permitted to disappear from our civic life because of lack of support from the average citizen? It is up to you, and you, and you to decide and it must be a speedy decision.

Thursday Nighters Vexed.

Up to now we have not had any new operas this season. Two Russian pieces are in the offing, however—Prokofieff's "The Love of Three Oranges" and Rimsky-Korsakof's "Snegourotchka" [which, unless I miss my guess, means "Snow Maiden"]. Tomorrow afternoon in the Elizabeth room in the Congress hotel Lazare Saminsky, late director of the conservatory of music at Tiflis, will speak on the subject of Rimsky-Korsakof and his opera. This is under the auspices of the Friends of Opera.

The Thursday night boxholders were somewhat chagrined last week to have "Madam Butterfly" substituted for something else. It is the second time this season that this opera has been given on a Thursday. As Thursday nighters always feel that they do not get the cream of the opera, it seems a pity to have done this to them. "Madam Butterfly" is a charming performance as given by our company, but no one wants even the most delightful piece given twice on his or her subscription night in one ten weeks' season.

Tomorrow night Strauss' famous opera, "Salome," is to be given for the second time in Chicago. The first time it was presented here our then mayor, Carter H. Harrison, thought it not a seemly thing to be offered the Chicago public, and asked the company to cut it out. We have grown older and more tolerant. It is considered a work of genius abroad, and has been a regular production in Munich and Berlin for years. It is not probable that it will be looked upon with the disapprobation which first greeted it.

A Baroness from Poland.

Before 1914 travelers from older countries used to come to our shores with much the same feelings that we carry with us when we go to visit the South Sea islands. They felt as if they were forsaking civilization and its many comforts to study the manners and habits of a strange and half barbaric race. Today they come to us seeking the light of a civilization which has fled from Europe.

From one of the most sorely stricken lands, Poland, comes the Baroness Hélène de Bisping, a Polish great lady who has given her fortune and her strength to her unhappy country since 1914. She served as active head of the Polish Red Cross during those harrowing times when Poland was overrun again and again by warring armies. Much of the American aid to her country people passed through her hands. She has seen little but sorrow and suffering for the last seven years, so, as she says, she has come to America to get a glimpse of happiness and to bring the thanks of Poland for all that we did for that nation. She is the guest of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson for this week, after which she will be with Mr. and Mrs. William C. Boyden of Winnetka. Both Mrs. Ryerson and Mr. Boyden knew her in her native land, where they worked in the Polish relief two years ago.

Luncheon at the Ryersons'.

Mrs. Ryerson is giving a luncheon for her today. Mrs. Ryerson's Sunday luncheons in her lovely house in Lake View avenue are a feature of Chicago's social life. Many of her guests, if the weather be fine, like to walk through the groves and byways of Lincoln park on the way to her hospitable door. Her Georgian mansion stands on the northwest confines of the park, and has a charming outlook across lawns and through a slim growth of trees to the lake. It is like a promenade in London or Paris to go there on foot.

When she built there hers was to be merely one of a group of houses run more or less in community fashion. Her neighbors were to be George Porter, Abram Poole, David Adler, Frederic Bartlett, and the late Harry Dangler. Mr. Porter never built there at all. Mr. Bartlett's first wife died before he began building, so he sold his land to Ambrose Cramer. David Adler did not build, either. Abram Poole built a delightful house, but after his marriage to Miss Mercedes da Acosta of New York he let his lovely little home to the E. I. Cudahys Jr. on a long lease and went to live in Gotham. Harry Dangler's health broke down soon after his marriage to Miss Ruth Davis, so they left their most attractive home and went west in search of health. There he died, and she has never returned to Chicago since. The house is rented unfurnished. The Ambrose Cramers have also given their house, a most exquisite dwelling, to tenants and are living in Paris, where he is studying architecture at the Beaux Arts.

So of all that group, who made such friendly plans to found a neighbor-

Marcia Dear—
I was in Hall's today to select some extra Christmas cards to fill out my list—and what a wonderful assortment of counter cards they do have.
I had five girls still on my gift list and what to get them has preyed on my mind for weeks—so while in Hall's today, I spied a perfectly exquisite box of stationery. Here was a combination of daintiness, beauty, and usefulness.
Why, just the thing! I thought. Thats what we were saying cholused a group of ladies behind me—and Good Heavens! Marcia, I had been thinking out loud.
Anyway, I selected five lovely boxes which completed my Christmas shopping.
If you run out of ideas while Christmas shopping don't forget the address—Hall's, Social Stationers and Engravers, 8 Michigan Avenue South—near Madison.
Fondly,
Elenor

Alice and the March Hare.

Did you go to see the Junior leaguers in "Alice in Wonderland" yesterday morning at the Playhouse theater? It was a delightful performance given with spirit and dash. There were Alice, the March Hare, the Mad Hatter, the White Rabbit, the Gryphen, the Red and White Queens, the Knave of Hearts, and all the rest of that delightful, preposterous galaxy which has for half a century captivated young and old of the English speaking races.

The young women who, under the direction of Miss Alice Gerstenberg are presenting the piece will continue to give their Saturday mornings to it for several weeks. The money raised by the ticket sale will be devoted to the many charities which annually benefit by the entertainments gotten up by this energetic, well organized body of young women. Besides their yearly performances, the members of this league give much of their time individually to good works, no amount of gayety being allowed to interfere with this self-assumed duty.

That wizard in palm reading and character analysis, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, is giving her services for the next two or three weeks for Tuesday afternoons, to the smart little shop which the Mmes. Potter Palmer, John H. Winterbotham, George Higginson, and John Borden are running at 615 North Michigan avenue. The net proceeds from this "magazin de luxe" are devoted to the support of that excellent institution, the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, so all that Mrs. Lewis makes by her delightful talent will go to finding homes for these needy youngsters.

Have you attended the great civic Christmas Tree festival at the Coliseum which opened last Wednesday? If not, you've missed an exhilarating spectacle. The show is one of the best ever given in that temple of big shows and the spectators are even more interesting to the observer.

To be told that over 4,000,000 organized women are behind the massmeeting being planned for Sunday evening, Jan. 8, at the Auditorium to discuss the reduction of armaments is most impressive. That is a great many women, and if they all decide at the same moment to do away with all the paraphernalia of battle and set about accomplishing this, it looks serious for the great god Mars. I've noticed a decided pallor lately in the planet which bears his name. Mrs. James W. Morrisson is the Chicago chairman for this meeting.

Women in Revolt.

It is said that on the same day in London and in Tokio there will be held similar meetings representing still more peace-loving women rising in protest against a world that does not have enough gumption to do away instantly with so disastrous an instrument as war. These enthusiasts recognize no obstacles as being insuperable. In this they resemble William Lloyd Garrison in his fight against slavery seventy-five years ago. Let us wish them as speedy and complete a victory.

The 4,000,000 represented here are the National League of Women Voters, the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Women's Trade Union league, the Parent-Teachers' association, the National Farm and Garden association, the Chicago University women, the Women's Board of Missions, and the Eastern Star, besides many denominational associations representing different churches and religions.

Among the women aiding Mrs. Morrisson in getting up this meeting are Mrs. George A. McKinlock, chairman the boxes; Mrs. Robert B. Gregory, in charge of hospitality to the speakers; Mrs. Warren Bullock, committee on the program; Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, in charge of the music; Mrs. Ignace Reis, committee in charge of the tickets. Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Henry Solomon, Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, Mrs. Annie Kenney, and the Girls' Friendly society have been among the first to secure boxes for the evening.

Those Who Give Excuses Only.

Nothing so displays human nature in all its nakedness as to go from door to door soliciting subscriptions to even so great, so splendid a charitable organization as the United Charities. In a building sheltering about twenty-two families supposedly rather better off than the average, both as to brains and incomes, about $25 was collected, and of this $15 came from one person.

The men who were asked for subscriptions either said, "My wife tends to those things for me," or "My firm subscribes to it."

One's business firm is not oneself, nor are subscriptions from that source entered to one's credit on the ledger by the recording angel. One resident said she could not subscribe because she had been solicited by the Good Fellows that day. Now, as the Good Fellows make no door to door canvass, that excuse bore the mark of Ananias on its face.

The fact is that most people are like the darky who said:

"Ma wife she done ask me for money all de time. Dis mornin' she ask me fer a dollar. Dis afternoon she asked for 50 cents. And dis evenin' she asked me for a quarter."

"How much did you give her?" was the response.

"I done gib her nothin' at all."

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Christmas Cheer at Settlements for Old and Young

By Kate Webber.

CHRISTMAS week is looming as a series of bright, happy pictures in the minds of the little children who know the various settlement houses as havens of refuge and help throughout the year. To quote the heading of the Chicago Commons program, "If ever 'one touch of nature makes the whole world kin' it is the divine touch of human nature we all feel at Christmas time. Could anything be more human than the service rendered the common life with which we come in contact at Chicago Commons? To see is to believe; to believe is to feel and be touched.

So the Chicago Commons Woman's club will start the festivities with a Nativity play to be given this evening. Tomorrow afternoon the children and mothers of the infant welfare clinic will have their celebration and the boys' party will take place tomorrow evening, as will that of the Polish Mothers' club and their children.

Tuesday will be given over to the kindergarten, Little Neighbors, and the evening girls' party. On Wednesday the afternoon boys' party, the young Italian mothers, and the men's English and citizenship classes will celebrate.

The Chicago Commons Mothers' club and the Rug club and its children will have a party on Thursday and a play will be given by the children's workshop.

On Friday at 3:30 a neighborhood party will have as participants children from some of the families of the visiting nurses, the United Charities, the Catholic charities, the Juvenile Protective association, and the pension and probation departments of the Juvenile court.

A Friday Night Men's club party will conclude the week's affairs, and a tabernacle Sunday school party on Monday evening and the Italian Mothers' club on Wednesday afternoon will constitute next week's events.

The opening Christmas program at Fellowship house, 831 West 33d place, will be held on Wednesday evening, when the tree will be brought over from the Faulkner school, where it is supplied each year, together with the ornaments, by the pupils. The Rosebud and Bluebird clubs will have a party on Thursday afternoon, and that evening several of the clubs will have a joint party. On Friday the Rangers, Busy Builders, and Brownies will meet.

On Tuesday, Dec. 27, there will be a luncheon and frolic at which the head resident, Mrs. Sallie Allen Davis, will be hostess to the board members, interested friends, and neighbors.

The largest affair of the holiday season will be the party on Thursday, Dec. 29, given by the Fellowship House Woman's club, for the grandmothers, children, and grandchildren. The 165 members of the club take great pride in making this annual party one of their nicest achievements.

At Emerson house, 1906 Emerson avenue, the plans are a bit disarranged owing to the contemplated move into the new quarters at Grand avenue and Wood street, which will take place early in the new year. Several affairs will be given, however, under the direction of Miss Katherine Levine.

On Wednesday evening children between the ages of 7 and 11 will be guests at a frolic given by girls from the Reformed Episcopal church. The kindergarten party will be held on Friday morning, when each little tot will receive a box filled with toys and sweets from a group of young women who have raised a fund for this purpose.

The Lake View High school will entertain the children of the neighborhood on Friday afternoon, when 200 filled stockings will be distributed. The Camp Fire Girls will give a party and program on the 27th, and other affairs of informal nature will fill up the week.

A full week is in store for the University of Chicago settlement house at 4630 Gross avenue. Starting with a children's party to be given this evening by the Bohemian Woman's club, there will be plays, boys' and girls' parties, old people's parties, and celebrations by various committees. Miss Mary McDowell and her assistants give personal service and consideration to the members, and programs of unusual interest are the result. Among the features will be a kindergarten party on Wednesday, a Christmas play on Thrsday evening, a girls' party on Friday afternoon, a Christmas entertainment on Sunday afternoon, and a calendar of parties for the following week.

MISS CORDELIA CARPENTER.
[Moffett Photo.]

A holiday matinée which will interest the young people of the city and also benefit the coffers of the Girl Scouts of Chicago will be given on Wednesday, Dec. 28, at 2:30 o'clock, at Orchestra hall. The first release of "My Boy," starring Jackie Coogan, will be shown on that date, for which tickets may be secured at the box office or at the Girl Scout headquarters, 225 North Michigan avenue.

Miss Cordelia Carpenter, Miss Elizabeth Baker, and Miss Elizabeth Carpenter are on the committee in charge.

The Girl Scout movement is growing to the extent that there are now 8,000 members in Chicago and Cook county. The girls in every troop are busy at present with their Christmas work among the less fortunate. One of the first lessons taught them in their manual is to help others, and through the guidance of their captains they live up to this ideal thoroughly.

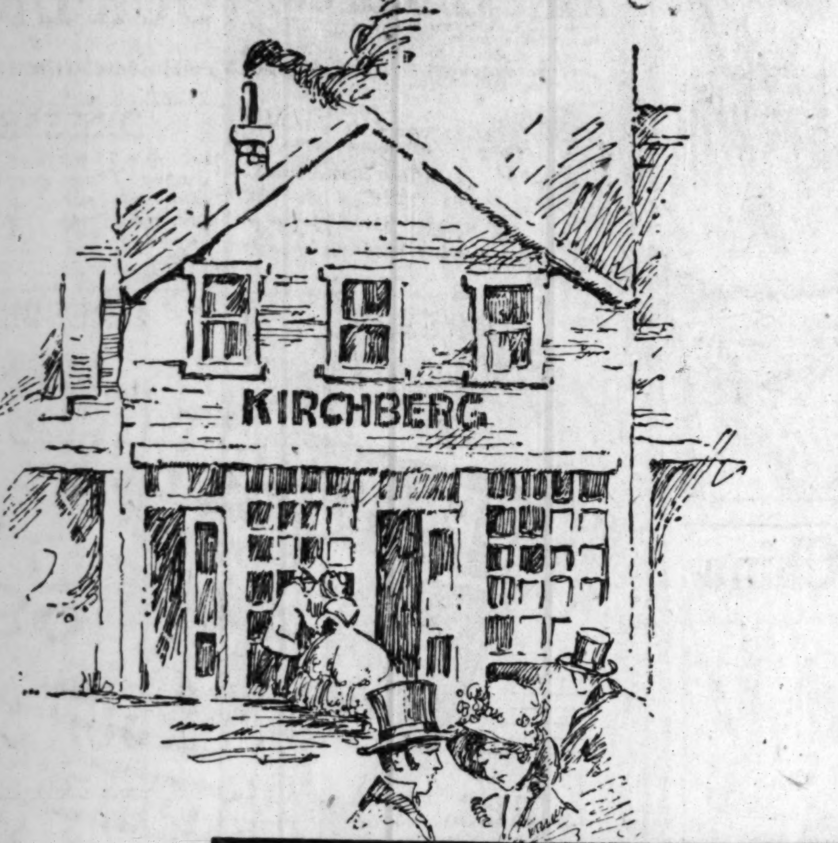
ON SALE—DAYLIGHT BASEMENT



ON a bright, sunny day in 1867 there appeared above the door of this small building on Clark street, between Lake and Randolph, the one word, "Kirchberg." Many are the names of Chicago's first families on our books today whose equally prominent ancestors were on the Kirchberg roster fifty and more years ago. The name of Kirchberg has thus reflected an honorable part in Chicago's history. "Long John" Wentworth, Joseph Medill, Arthur Dixon, Peter Schuttler, Melville Stone, and others were among the first customers; Volunteer "Fire Boys" and their hand-pump hose carts were in their last days; paved streets were coming into existence; modern sidewalks radiated in every direction; horse cars ousted the Parmelee and Walker omnibus lines (the forerunners of today's motor busses).

Then came the "Great Fire." Kirchberg's was destroyed. A few days passed. Kirchberg's arose again at 240 West Madison Street. Business flourished. In 1890 Kirchberg, diamond merchant, moved into more commodious quarters, a few doors west, at 244 West Madison Street.

Business grew still better. The momentum of prestige—faithful adherence to a high standard—literally forced Kirchberg into a larger store. The location at 104 North State Street became the home of Kirchberg's.

From an unpretentious little store, started many years before, there grew "KIRCHBERG'S—THE INSTITUTION.

The Dependable Word of Fifty Four Years

Every one knows the famous banking house of Rothschild's, which sends its roots back to the days of Napoleon. Every one considers it a dependable institution.

Kirchberg's is an old name in Chicago's history. It is a synonym for honest merchandising and honest business principles. Every discriminating lover of good diamonds and good jewelry knows it is dependable.

Prestige is not a mushroom growth. It comes only, as has come the prestige of Kirchberg's, from years of slow, solid growth, thousands of business dealings with customers, a multitude of honestly satisfied customers. Such is Kirchberg's—a monument to service.

The House of Kirchberg is an authority on matters pertaining to diamonds and jewelry. Its word has been dependable for fifty-four years. The value of its word to you cannot be measured in dollars and cents—it is above such considerations. The word of Kirchberg's on every purchase is a bond of protection.

The House of Kirchberg is devoted to the unusual—something really different—exclusive—original—and always artistic. We welcome opportunities for demonstrating our ideas—and yours—in our "Department of Original Designs."

Today, Kirchberg's is under the management of the son and grandsons of its founder. The same principles of honest merchandising, honest values, honest quality prevail.

Now, as in all seasons, this store is stocked with the finest in jewelry, silverware and precious stones. Every desire and need may be most satisfactorily filled and at very reasonable cost.

Those living out of town may take advantage of Kirchberg values by writing for a catalog. Out-of-town visitors always welcome.

ASTRONOMY

THE MOON.

TO the ordinary observer the moon looks to be nearly as large as the sun, notwithstanding the astonishing fact that it would take 27,000,000 moons to make one sun. Their apparent similarity of size is due to the sun's great distance from us and the moon's nearness. The moon is 240,000 miles from the earth, the sun 93,000,000. The moon is 2,163 miles in diameter.

A better idea of our satellite's size is obtained by comparing it with the earth, or better still by comparing it with the United States. If its hemisphere, which is continually turned toward us, were laid upon the United States, one rim would rest on California and Idaho, while the other would be on Florida and New York. Above, it would extend into Canada, and below it would cut Mexico.

We are more familiar with the moon's surface than with that of any other celestial body, because it is nearer and more easily observed. In a telescope the scene is one of frightful desolation, of absolute death; and from the safe vantage point of the eyepiece of a telescope, the view is one of rare fascination, and leaves little for the imagination. In many places the surface is so terribly rough that no safe place for hand or foot could be found on the sharp crags.

Criss-crossing this formidable waste are enormous fissures, deep yawning abysses, sheer chasms that have no visible bottoms and are surely miles deep. These cracks split great mountains from summit to foundation. On this land of hard and tortured scoria, the sun strikes with blinding glare, while every shadow is a splash of midnight black.

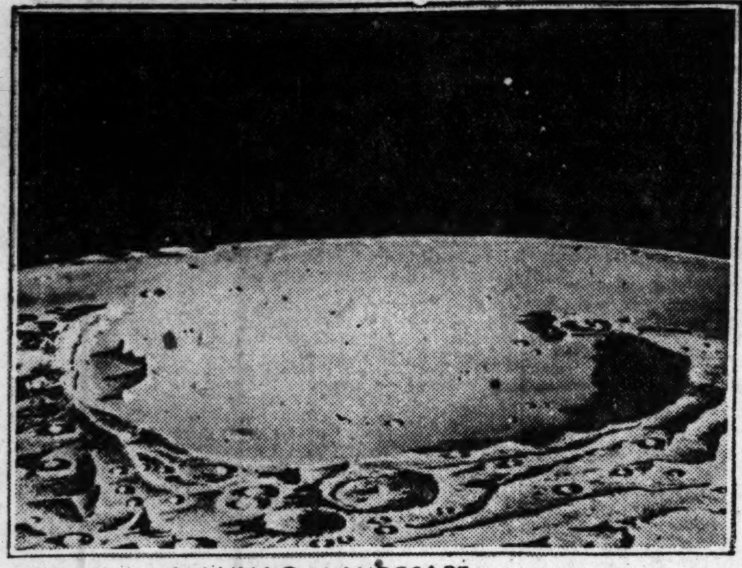
A strong telescope brings the moon near enough to reveal hills the size of houses, and objects smaller than this can be seen if they have much length. You can see a wire easily, where a nail head of the same diameter would be invisible. For the same reason cracks and streaks a few feet across on the moon's surface can frequently be observed.

The moon land is a place of the wildest desolation. It resembles nothing that we know. It is a world of harsh, burned ashes interspersed with frozen sheets of lava.

Most of the mountain ranges on earth run in long lines and often in parallel ridges, but it is not so with the mountains of the moon. Almost without exception they are circular in form, thus bearing evidence of their origin in fire. A large part of the surface is covered with craters, which are so exceedingly numerous in places that they even overlap each other.

If large and small are counted, there are hundreds of thousands of them extending far and wide over the wild landscape. The moon's volcanoes are all dead, so far as evidence has been found. They bear the signs of tremendous fires in the past, but those fires have ceased to burn, and now no lava flows. In the moon's early life it was comparatively free from eruptions. Large tracts of surface are of gray or green basalt-like rock. Here we see the original crust just as it hardened and grew cold.

As the moon cooled from its molten state millions of years ago, perhaps, it formed a surface crust before the interior solidified. The imprisoned gases, deep down, burst through the shell of rock above and became the volcanoes which have left their forms of circular mountains in such great numbers.



A LUNAR LANDSCAPE
RAINBOW GULF LOOKING OUT OVER THE LEVEL SURFACE OF THE MARE IMBRIUM
BY S. F. MAXWELL

On earth, the work of old volcanoes is quickly obliterated by the erosion of water, wind, and frost. With us, no sooner is a pile of cinders ejected than it is attacked by the weather and the process begun that will reduce it to the level of the surrounding regions. Only those of our volcanoes that are still active, or are in deserts, can exist prominently during many centuries. It has been different on the moon, for no wind or weather ever wears away sharp angles there.

The lunar mountains are all high and steep, much steeper than the average mountains on our earth. Our loftiest peak is Mount Everest, 29,000 feet high. The moon has many mountains nearly as high as that. One extinct crater, known as Theophylus, is sixty-four miles across, and the ring mountain forming its ramparts rises nearly four miles above the plain on which it stands. Within the crater is a lake of frozen lava, whose surface is three thousand feet below the outside level. Rising out of the middle of this lake are three peaks, one of them as high and pointed as the Matterhorn.

Make This the Most Wonderful Christmas of All

NO finer thing could any man do for his family at Christmas time than to make the principal gift a

Kranich & Bach Grand Piano

A GIFT that will be a daily source of happiness and inspiration to every member of the household.

EVERY home must have a piano—sooner or later—why let the precious days go by in silence, when you and your loved ones might be enjoying the delights of good music at home?

IN purchasing a high-grade piano, there is no stronger guaranty of merit than the "pride of ancestry" which demands the continuous maintenance of family reputation. The original creators of Kranich & Bach instruments established an extraordinarily high standard of excellence. To their descendants they bequeathed the RESPONSIBILITY for the maintenance of this wonderful reputation.

THE standard of a piano is almost wholly a matter of the standards maintained in the production of its separate parts, and the only dependable way for a manufacturer to insure a uniformly high quality in these thousands of parts is to make them all in his own establishment and under his own direct personal supervision. And yet there are not more than three or four makes of high-grade pianos, besides the Kranich & Bach, that are made in this way.

THE greatest musicians of two continents have given their unqualified approval to this the highest type of piano possible to make. To hear it is to be fascinated by its marvelous tone; to play it is to realize its limitless possibilities for the expression of music in its most glorious form.

Kranich & Bach Pianos Are Available in Five Sizes and Eleven Styles
And Meet All Requirements as to Space and Personal Preferences

If you have an old piano of any style or make, it will be to your advantage to consult with us now, as we have an outlet for a limited number of used pianos at an unusually high valuation. Requesting valuation will not obligate you in any way.

(The plaint of a day sleeper in a hotel. Written while the plumber was inspiring it.)

By Guy Lee.

In times agone I longed to mix
 In literature or science;
I yearned to shine in politics,
 Or form a rich alliance.
And now and then in games and sport
 I sought to be a comer;
I've lost ambition of this sort—
 I want to kill a plumber.

To wreck my system seems to me
 The aim of his endeavor;
He follows me where'er I be
 And pounds and pounds forever.
I cannot sleep or read or think,
 He's got me on the hummer
And likewise wholly on the blink—
 I want to kill a plumber.

Of all the blights that rob the earth
 Of peace and calm and quiet,
Of happiness and joy and mirth,
 Commend me to his riot.
Throughout the fall, throughout the spring,
 In winter and in summer
He never ends his hammering—
 I want to kill a plumber.

Monotony's his forte—his crime
 Variety is lacking;
The same old horror all the time,
 Just whacking, whacking, whacking.
He slams and slams, the while my brain
 Grows numb, and then grows numb-er.
It's certain that I'll go insane
 Unless I kill a plumber.

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

That joke—you laughed long and loud when you got the point, and you galloped around and passed it along to all your friends so they could laugh, too. If you'll sit down and write out that joke and it is published $1 will be paid. Address your letter to the Best Joke Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Searched in Vain.

Our filing clerk is one of these light jazz models whose mind is always out toddling at the last dance or the next one.

One day she came to my desk with a salesman's report on a city customer. The report gave the customer's name and bore the notation that he was "hopelessly ill."

"Mr. Grant," she said indignantly, "I have looked through all the directories and I can't find any city like Hopelessly in Illinois." M. S.

Anything to Please.

"Now that you are earning a bigger salary," said the wife with social ambitions, "surely we can afford a higher priced flat."

But the husband was a man of simple tastes.

"We're comfortable here," he said, "but if you like we will ask the landlord to raise the rent." F. G.

Proof Positive.

An Irishman, Scotchman, and Englishman were brought into court for stealing a cow, horse, and wagon, respectively.

In answer to the judge's questions the Scotchman replied that he had had the cow ever since it was a calf, and the Englishman said he had had the horse ever since it was a colt.

The judge then said, "And what have you to say for yourself, Pat?"

"Bedad, judge, but I have had that wagon ever since it was a wheelbarrow," calmly answered Pat. G. V. L.

ORIENTAL Superstition?—Perhaps so—but at least an interesting relic of Asiatic Antiquity. Alleged by the Chinese to be almost uncanny in its power to bring to the wearer, GOOD LUCK Health, Happiness, Prosperity, and Long Life.

This odd looking ring excites great interest when observed on your finger. An unusual gift. Go to your jeweler's at once and ask to see this odd CHINESE GOOD LUCK RING.

ART AND ARTISTS

Mid-Winter Feast of Exhibits at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

UNDOUBTEDLY all the interest of the last week in the world of art here was centered upon the opening yesterday of a great number of attractive exhibitions in the east wing of the Art institute. It was the customary midwinter feast of exhibits that was set before us. Aside from the familiar collection presented by the Chicago chapter of the Wild Flower Preservation society, in connection with which this year are exhibits lent by the Audubon society and the Illinois State Microscopical society, there are a quantity of new things in both sculpture and painting to be admired.

To run over the list of announcements in brief is all that, for the present, this column can do. Next Sunday the various exhibits will be discussed in detail. The exhibitions include paintings of flowers, pastels by Ray Boynton; paintings by Sigurd Schou, paintings by Leopold Seyffert, sculpture by Alfonso Iannelli, and an erhibition under the auspices of the Friends of Our Native Landscape. The east wing will show these various works until Jan. 18.

This afternoon from 4 until 7 o'clock Robert Eskridge will give an exhibit of etchings and sketches in his studio, 55 Scott street. Mr. Eskridge is one of our most fanciful artists in black and white. His drawings and etchings have the touch of eternal youth about them that is so difficult to capture consciously, but when present makes the thing portrayed irresistible.

Frederic M. Grant is in the midst of a successful exhibit of his paintings in a gallery in Cleveland. Mr. Grant is too well known to the most of us who follow the Chicago exhibits to need a further word here in regard to his particular genius. Perhaps above all one might define him as being a decorator. His paintings are decorative. They are beautiful and full, always, of color. Give him a bowl of flowers as varied as the rainbow in tint, and when he has finished painting it a lazy bumblebee stumbling into the room would like as not brush his nose against the canvas as the real flowers—so exactly and so perfectly will their beauty have been set in paint.

Margaret Anglin, whose recent introduction into America of a Raphael cartoon is an interesting fact, has purchased a painting of flowers by Frederic M. Grant to add to her growing collection of important art work that she treasures in her New York home.

With thoughts of the wounded soldiers in mind, it may be well to mention the exhibition of paintings by a group of ex-service men which was given Thursday and Friday in a department store downtown. The paintings were interesting and in many cases human documents of moments really lived. The soldiers are continuing to exhibit their prowess along similar lines in a shop on Michigan boulevard at the corner of Randolph street. Among the things seen there is an adorable white wicker doll cradle on real rockers and a group of kittens, the best of scratchless playthings for a little child.

"Solitude," by G. L. Anderson, was awarded first prize at the Chicago Camera club. The picture was made at the dunes, where winter has not as yet detracted from the romance of the wide, lonely stretches of sand.

Yesterday afternoon an exhibit of paintings by Frank C. Peyraud was shown in his studios. Mrs. Peyraud was in charge. On Jan. 1 she will close the studios and sail for Europe to join Mr. Peyraud in Switzerland.

Nicholas Roerich, the Russian artist, whose stage settings for "The Snow Maiden" promise to be one of the sensations of the operatic year, is expected in town at any moment. Following up the series of talks which he gave on his last visit, he will lecture to students in the old Fortnightly rooms of the Fine Arts building. The audience is limited to twenty-five painters. There will be three lectures on "Art and Esthetics," each lecture of two hours' duration, for those interested in painting and stage decoration. For further information one may telephone Miss Dupee, Superior 6724.

Several gifts have recently been made to the Art institute. Louis Kronberg's painting, "Grandmother," was presented by an unnamed benefactor. The print department has received eight additional engravings by the Little Masters for the Potter Palmer Collection of Little Masters, and twenty-eight etchings by contemporary English etchers, and thirteen etchings by Wallace de Wolf, as the gift of Wallace de Wolf. Frederic Clay Bartlett has lent an important still life by Van Gogh.

A money gift is the establishing by Charles S. Peterson of the Charles S. Peterson purchase fund from which $500 is to be spent for a painting each year from the annual exhibition held at the institute, the painting to be added to the museum's permanent collection. Another $500 ($250 each) is to be expended on the purchase of two canvases from the Chicago Artists' exhibit. These last are to be placed in the city public schools. As no picture was purchased with this fund from the annual show this year, the accrued fund will make possible the purchase of a $1,000 painting next fall.

Every boy loves boats and trains

LOCOMOTIVES and ships fascinate a boy. Playing with toy trains and boats is the best fun in the world. They never seem to lose their appeal.

Ives trains are wonderful reproductions of originals. There are both steam and electric type locomotives, propelled by springs or electricity, cars of all kinds—passenger, freight, coal, oil, lumber, livestock; with switches, bridges, tunnels, stations, signals, station lights and crossing gates.

Ives boats are made of steel, beautifully painted, with long-running spring mechanisms, propellers and rudders. Real ships were used for models—ocean liners, diving submarines, destroyers, tug boats, motor boats, U. S. Merchant Marine Steamships.

Ives trains and Ives Boats are sturdy American-made toys that every boy would like to own. They are a perfect Christmas gift.

Ives Toys are for sale by toy dealers and department stores.

Chaliapine's Art Is Superlatively Great, Verdict

Kummer which were borne on the flood. One line in her best manner sticks:

"Abraham Lincoln might have become President even if he hadn't been born in a log cabin."

MISS CLARE KUMMER.
(White Photo.)

There shines one of the sympathetic cynicisms with which Miss Kummer used to wreck hypocrisies while she fondled them, and the grief of "The Mountain Man" is that they do not shine more often. The play is called a "love story," and deals in the unwholesome amount of heart throb which afflicted Aaron Winterfield, an uncombed man of the mountains of Virginia, when he entered into a family arrangement marriage with a sweet marceled cousin from Paris.

His simplex grates against her complex on their marriage day, and they separate until, in his cabin among the sobbing pines of the pining hills, she comes softly to murmur that true hearts beat in rugged breasts.

This is sweet stuff, full of accessory sugar plums. The proposing is done at a piano, which puts in motion a heart ballad named "Through All the World." And some of the numerous reconciliations are done at the same piano to the same tune.

With the exception of Sidney Blackmer, who plays the mountain man as nearly like a male adult as possible, the actors are incompetent to mitigate the cloying tenderness of the play. They are probably blameless. For this play is just a thing that happened when Clare Kummer's heartstrings went slack.

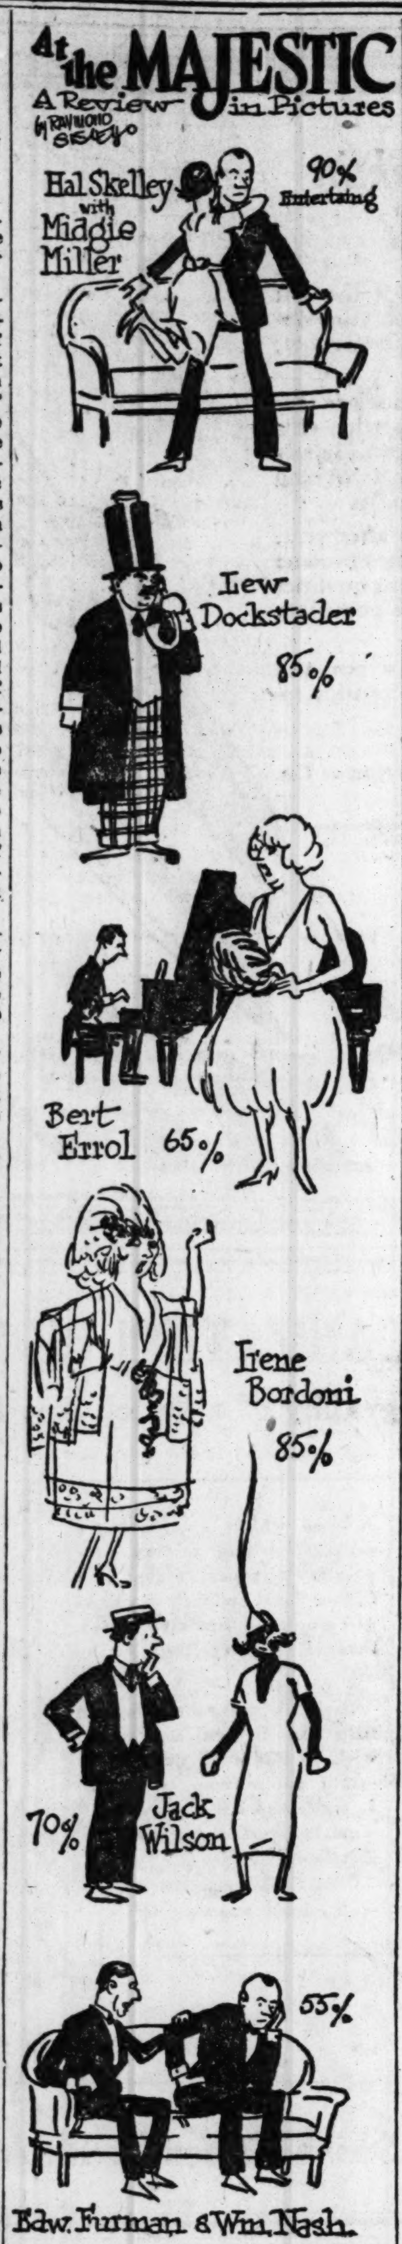
"My Hero," at least, has outlasted its 10,000 grind organs. Miss Tessa Kosta starts into its first measure in the first act of the revival of "The Chocolate Soldier," which is being made in the Century theater, and, though you may be one of those who whistled it before Miss Kosta began her singing lessons, you will feel your skin ripple.

MISS TESSA KOSTA.
(Apeda Photo.)

Any sort of a space, large or small, is a snug fit for the billowing harmonies of "My Hero," which is the most ample melody that ever came out of Vienna, but the rest of "The Chocolate Soldier" finds the vastnesses of the Century a bit overwhelming. George Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man," from which the libretto is taken, remains a fine irony on the military uniform, even when sung, and a house in which Babe Ruth could hit a home run is no place in which to toss a feathery epigram over a slim shoulder.

Everything that is delicate, either Shavian or Straussian, in "The Chocolate Soldier" is damaged in this revival. Rare trifles in the score become entangled in the cavernous echoes of the Century, and the fine fun of the libretto fades in the Century's hugeness.

The producers have immensified the score in many places, placing a brass band on the stage and amplifying the festivities of the second act with some blares created by Max Bendix from Strauss, it is alleged in the program, themes.



Only Real Money in Russia Today Is Bread

By Don S. Day.

PETROGRAD.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is a saying in Russia that nothing is ever lost; that a seeker must look in the "Tolkouchka."

This "Tolkouchka" is the second hand market which is a feature of every Russian city. It is in this market that the second hand dealers and junkmen gather their hoards of salable and unsalable merchandise. Each market is inclosed. They may be likened to small, ramshackle cities, with each house a shop or a booth in which can be sold or purchased anything and everything.

Of course, each dealer has his specialty. One will be a collector of faucets and other bathroom and kitchen fixtures. Another dealer will show you an assortment of locks ranging from the most modern American Yale lock to a ponderous affair with a key weighing two or three pounds which was made three or four centuries ago.

From a casual inspection it would appear that half or more of the goods trafficked in consist of stolen property. The market always contains a score or more of people who are watching for personal belongings to appear on sale. It is a poor day for the police if a dozen or so thieves are not rounded up by these searchers.

For this reason the locksmiths enjoy the most prosperous business of all the traders. No Russian housewife feels safe unless she has two or more locks on each door. And, to cap the climax, each Russian home has double doors. Today when you call on a Russian family you hear a great deal of fumbling, the release of spring locks, and the unfastening of chains from the inner door, and then you are confronted by an eye peering through a crack in the outer door, which is permitted to swing open one or two inches by more chains. Unless your appearance is favorable you don't get in.

A member of the secret police who accompanied me on a tour of the market explained to me that the reason for these precautions is that the Russian burglar often combines murder with his profession. Sometimes a gang of robbers breaks into a house and kills everybody there before making off with the loot.

"The jails are so bad that burglars evidently figure they may as well be hung for sheep as for lambs," explained the Cheka representative as we threaded the stalls.

Sunday is the big day in the second hand market. A survey of the city reveals that approximately half of the population goes to church and the other half attends the market.

The procession of people entering the market is so interesting that one can stand at the gates for hours watching the crowd. Here comes a little, bent over woman—apparently a maid in the employ of some family, for she is wearing good shoes—with a little bundle under her arm. Inside the market, she opens it and displays a beautiful hand worked table centerpiece. The odds are against her making it herself, as is the price that she asks. That centerpiece most probably came from the linen chest of her former or present employer.

Following her tramps an old, uniformed man with a wooden leg. A close inspection of his ragged uniform reveals that he formerly belonged to the Petrograd fire department. He carries a bass horn. It is more of an antique than a musical instrument, and, reading the inscription on it, one finds that it belonged to the Petrograd Firemen's band, organized in 1855. He tells you that it belonged to his father. His price for it is five pounds of bread.

As we talk with him a boy passes with his pockets filled with old school books and under his arm he carries a wash basin.

A mansion could be furnished and a well-to-do family could be clothed from the furnishings that are offered in the Petrograd markets. While money changes hands for the goods, all prices vary with the price of bread. For bread is the real medium of exchange in Russia today.

It is through the agency of these second hand markets that the wealth of Russian art and jewelry is slowly seeping to the outside world. Precious objects are brought there by thieves or by owners who are compelled to sell them for bread. Once sold in the market, they disappear into the hidden caches of the little shopkeepers.

From the shops the diamond, or rug, or statuette, as the case may be, next travels to the Russian border, where it is sold or traded for salt, sugar, flour, or chocolate. From the hands of the border traders it travels to the towns, where it is displayed in the hundreds of stores in the countries surrounding Russia which deal in these objects. The more precious objects are sold privately to representatives of large European concerns, who have their scouts out watching for the appearance of the masterpieces of which Russia formerly boasted.

Second paper on the Bible.

TWENTY years ago the American congress voted an appropriation for the printing and free distribution by the government of 9,000 copies of the so-called Jefferson Bible. This legislation received some praise. It aroused more censure.

The fact remains that if a Christian wished subtly to persuade a fellow being of other faith, or of no faith, to acceptance of "the life and morals of Jesus of Nazareth"—as President Jefferson named his little compendium—that missioner could hardly find in the whole range of literature of Christology an instrument better suited to his purpose. Nor does there exist today a volume better calculated to restore among us average folk, whose knowledge of the Bible, says Dean James S. Stevens of the University of Maine, "has decreased lamentably in the last fifty years," familiarity and sympathy with a grand survey of man's ethical development during a period covering—in the writing of the survey—nearly fourteen centuries. (That is, counting the time devoted to the composition of both old and new testaments.)

Mr. Jefferson's aim, briefly, was to present a fabric of biography and ethics, all extracted from the New Testament, which should be non-provocative. He was a biblical pacifist. Tradition, ever loving the basest view of mankind, has it that he was an atheist. He was not. He was a reverent agnostic and, for his time—or almost any time—an exceptional scholar. His deleted New Testament omits all passages relating miraculous features which the original record declares to have marked the birth and death of the young preacher and martyr and all miracles which it avers attended his tarrying among men. The Jefferson Bible ends with the Scriptural words, "There laid they Jesus: and rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed."

The telling comment to which this passage led the good critic, Edwin L. Shuman, was, "And there Mr. Jefferson leaves the stone."

A high value of the Jefferson Bible for us average readers lies in the short but extraordinarily substantial comments with which Mr. Jefferson, then President of the United States, elucidated his work. They were written in 1803 in a letter to Dr. Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia, a name honored in the annals of American medicine.

A few sentences on the character of Jesus are here quoted, partly because they are seldom seen, but more because of their soft appeal to the kind of readers whom it is not the purpose to "convert" to any kind of literature, but to interest in a very lovely specimen of literature. Those sentences are distinguished by great tenderness, great sense and true reverence:

> His parentage was obscure; his condition poor; his education null; his natural endowments great; his life correct and innocent. He was meek, benevolent, patient, firm, disinterested, and of the sublimest eloquence.
> According to the ordinary fate of those who attempt to enlighten and reform mankind, he fell an early victim to the jealousy and combination of the altar and the throne, at about 33 years of age, his reason having not yet attained the maximum of its energy, nor the course of his preaching, which was but of three years at most, having presented occasions for developing a complete system of morals.
> Notwithstanding these disadvantages, a system of morals is presented to us which, if filled up in the true style and spirit of the rich fragments he left us, would be the most perfect and sublime that has ever been taught by man.
> The precepts of philosophy and of the Hebrew code laid hold of action only. He pushed his scrutinies into the heart of man; erected his tribunal in the region of his thought, and purified the waters at the fountain head.

Such words so make for applicability in the study of the Bible that they are worth a million tracts. They are so free from rancor and railing, from exegetical legerdemain, from pettiness and from partisanship that they search out the heart while they steady the reason. Applicability! Were the body of ethics formulated by Jesus applied by universal consent today a distracted and contentious world would be ready for work that matters. Such, in potentiality, is the applicability of the New Testament; such, in reality it may one day be.

Turning back to the Old Testament there are encountered hundreds upon hundreds of passages fraught with an applicability far less lofty and comprehensive than the code Jesus preached, but coming home to fallible man with a directness at once very winning and very homely.

There was a day, about 3,200 years ago, when an elderly Arabian priest named Jethro, who had married his daughter Zipporah to an energetic Hebrew judge and administrator, observed that his gifted son-in-law was on the verge of nervous prostration—distracted by work and worry and by having throngs of people with petty troubles on their minds constantly pressing around him from morning till night. So the priest said: "My boy, this will not do! You cannot take on everything; besides it is bad for the people that you should try to. Clear away these people who are wearing you out, and you them, quit wasting time on details that any man of reasonable sense, honesty, and industry can take care of for you, bring in some help, and do you save yourself for the big work that nobody but you can do. You listen to me, son; cut out these small matters and you'll find that you'll live longer and do more."

That is no ribald rewrite of the good talking-to the old Arabian priest gave the eminent soldier and statesman, Moses, and it is all set down in the Old Testament book called Exodus. As to the applicability, it is hardly so many years ago as the passage is centuries old that the London Spectator commended prayerful perusal of it to Lord Salisbury, then prime minister of England, as containing a principle of civil administration that he would find helpful. In truth, the Old Testament, although an intensely racial and in parts almost a tribal product, yet has come to speak with peculiar authority to the occidental world. Why? Because it was passionately concerned with human conduct—as passionately, and far more to the purpose, as it was with the development of a rational idea of divinity. That development passed through many grotesque and horrid stages, and it has been a great misfortune to mankind that some of the discreditable phases of the development of the idea got themselves accepted as its permanent definitions. But God, we know now, was not that way—could not have been and been sane. What they thought was God was only a terrific figure set along their groping way to a conception of God. Those strong, passionate, reflective tribal men at times thrust upon other people, and upon remote ages, as valid a god that never existed. But they were groping along the right way and they found—monotheism. Mr. Wells, in the "Outline" dryly and very compactly epitomizes the stages: "There was the belief first of all that Jehovah was the greatest and most powerful of tribal gods, and then that he was a god above all other gods, and at last that he was the only true god." To grip firmly such an epitome of long spiritual and intellectual processes as Mr. Wells here gives, and in the making of which he is usually very expert, is essential to profitable Bible reading. Without such aids the reader is first befuddled, then repelled.

The Old Testament will not repel us average folk if we approach it as a tremendous human document whose people were like us, only not nearly so tamed as we are by the complexities of a social code at once more spacious and more exacting than theirs was. But in essence they were like us. They had, and they explicitly recorded, their scandals that stank in court and temple. They had the curse of graft, against which Jesus inveighed, and they had their little ententes and greater ententes, as when Solomon of Israel and Hiram of Tyre made their agreeable political arrangements.

That passionate, hard-pressed, searching, truculent, acquisitive life they led found voice in a tremendous literature of war-songs, laments, sermons, railings—they raised railing to an art hardy and fine—love lyrics, rhapsodies, riddles, proverbs, prayers, biographies, speeches, and stories.

And stories!

Than them the Bible contains for us average pagans feeling our way into great literature no lure more potent. They are not the forerunners, but the perfect specimens of what we think of as the modern short story. That form the Bible originated, and in that form it excelled. To Dean Stevens this article is indebted for a finding list of twenty of the best short stories in the Bible. Thus it runs:

Joseph. Gen. 37-48.
Balaam and Balak. Num. 22-24.
The Capture of Jericho. Josh. 6.
The wars of Gideon. Judg. 6-8.
Jephthah's Daughter. Judg. 11.
Samson. Judg. 14-16.
Ruth. The entire book.
David and Goliath. I. Sam. 17.
David and Jonathan. I. Sam. 18-20.
Elijah and the prophets of Baal. I. Kings 18.
Naboth's vineyard. I. Kings 21.
The ascension of Elijah. II. Kings 2.
Esther. The entire book.
The three Hebrew children. Dan. 3.
Daniel in the lion's den. Dan. 6.
Jonah. The entire book.
The Good Samaritan. Luke 10: 25-37.
The Prodigal Son. Luke 15: 11-32.
The healing of the lame man at Betheada. John 5: 1-9.
The shipwreck of Saint Paul. Acts 27.

Enter into the Bible through those stories, together with the following books, and you will find it neither wearisome nor very baffling:

Stevens' "The English Bible," Cohu's "Bible and Modern Thought," Rice's "Old Testament in the Life of Today," Sanders' "Old Testament Prophecy," Haven McClure's "Contents of the New Testament," Reid's "A Christian's Appreciation of Other Faiths," Mordell's "Literature of Ecstasy"—all recent and not expensive; Moulton's "Literary Study of the Bible," "The Whole Bible at a Single View," and his "Modern Readers' Bible" (one volume edition). Renan's "Life of Jesus" is essential. Chapter XIX (Hebrew Scriptures and the Prophets, twenty-eight pages) and Chapter XXIX (Beginnings, Rise, and Divisions of Christianity, forty-one pages), in Wells' "Outline of History," provide most valuable framework.

As the Bible brought to perfection the short story, so it may be said to have originated what we are wont to account another extremely modern form—that is, free verse. Whitman now is proclaimed its father in England and America, but Whitman got it from the Bible. So did Heine, and Goethe, and Blake, and Milton.

Thus stylistically is this work an inexhaustible treasury of forms and of the deft, sure manipulation of forms. George Saintsbury, the most fastidious of critics, says that the best example known to him of absolutely perfect English prose is the sixth and seventh verses of the eighth chapter of the Song of Solomon.

Let us pause upon it:

"Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm: for love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame.

"Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it: if a man would give all the substance of his house for love, it would utterly be contemned."

[Next Sunday, "Henry Esmond."]

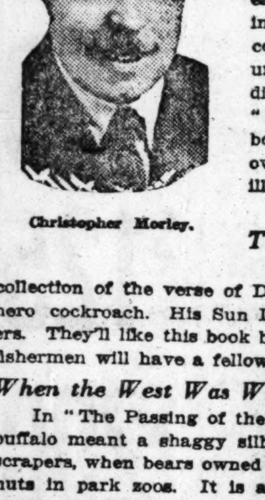
By Fanny Butcher.

"MODERN ESSAYS" is an anthology which is a rarely charming one. It is a collection of—incidentally—many of my, and perhaps your, favorite "pieces," scraps of fine writing, staid but beautiful bits of prose, brilliant flashes of satire. Christopher Morley has done us a service which must have been a pleasure to do. He is not bound by any traditions. He even includes that touching tribute which William Allen White wrote to his daughter—a column in a newspaper, but a column which none of us will ever forget who read it—as one can never really forget the simple beauties of life and writing. Other dear friends are there, Max Beerbohm, H. M. Tomlinson, William McFee, Joseph Conrad, James Branch Cabell, Simeon Strunsky, A. A. Milne, and many others—thirty-three in all—with a brief note about each one of them preceding the essay. If he had included H. L. Mencken his roster would have been complete. Christopher Morley has two other volumes to his credit this Christmas, "Plum Pudding," a collection of his own essays, more like "Shandyfaff"—which is my favorite of all his books—and "Chimneysmoke," an anthology of his own poetry, chosen from his published verse and illustrated by Thomas Fogarty.



Christopher Morley.

The Temperamental Timekeeper.

"Noah an' Jonah an' Cap'n John Smith" is a collection of the verse of Don Marquis, creator of Hermione and Archie the hero cockroach. His Sun Dial tells the temperamental time of New Yorkers. They'll like this book better than most Chicagoans probably, though any fishermen will have a fellow feeling for the title poem.

When the West Was Woolly.

In "The Passing of the Old West" Hal Evarts celebrates the days when buffalo meant a shaggy silhouette on the horizon and not a skyline of skyscrapers, when bears owned the woods and were not ignominiously eating peanuts in park zoos. It is a book to make one a little sick at heart at the extravagant waste of animal life in which our forefathers selfishly indulged. But it is first of all a good yarn about days which are no more.

Four More Discover the South Seas.

"The Cruise of the Dream Ship" is a book made out of those delightful articles by Ralph Stock in the National Geographic Magazine. He and his sister, you remember, bought at second hand a Norwegian boat which was originally designed as a lifeboat for the North sea fishing fleet, and they cruised from Devon to the South Sea islands.

And if you can do with any more South Seas stuff there is a new and very nice book by James Norman Hall and his Lafayette escadrille companion. It is called "Faery Lands in the South Seas."

A Volume of Lovely Verse.

Aline Kilmer has written another volume of lovely verse. "Vigils," it is called. Not so joyous as "Candles That Burn," nor so devoted to the bounties of children, it has a deeper note of suffering in it—and of triumph over it. Aline Kilmer doesn't write much, but what she writes is always poetry.

As Good as a Wilkinson Book—and Like One.

"Westward Hoboes" is the pleasant title of one of the pleasantest books that I have come across for a long time. It is the record of a motor trip which two Boston women made over the unfrequented roads of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Wyoming, and points west, not including California. They set out to "rough it" in a Cadillac eight. Their adventures were not hair raising, nor gaudily unusual, but Winifred Hawkridge Dixon, who does the writing about the trip, has a jaunty, gay way with her pen that is a sheer delight. She adds to the ordinary log a touch of whimsy and a chuckle. The way she tells how every one everywhere said "You are a long ways from home," proves her an artist. Miss (or Mrs.) Dixon is the sort of person one could go to Timbuctoo with and come home better friends. She certainly seems a good one when you've finished hoboing westward with her.

The War Fleet in Pictures.

James C. Russell, Capt. Russell in the world war, our fellow citizen, compiler of that pictorial anthology of America's poetry of power in the Teuton scramble (to steal a phrase from our never-forgotten B. L. T.), has put together another book that we can't be without.

It is like his "U. S. Official Pictures of the World War." This one is called "The United States Navy in the World War, Official Pictures." Most of the pictures are those taken by our government photographers. Some are from British official films where our navy plowed the sea alongside the British fleet. There are a few intimate pictures which are made from snapshots taken by sailors and marines. Yessir, marines.

Three sections of the book are devoted to the marines. During the war these pictures were suppressed. They would have given aid, if not comfort, to the enemy. Capt. Russell helped suppress them, unless I'm much mistaken. Anyway, he is sharing them open-handedly now in a volume that ought to remind us, unless we have passionately shut our eyes and ears to reminders, that only four years ago Christmas was a fearsome time, and holly berries and poinsettias reminded one of the stain of the poppies on the Flanders fields.

Belated but Enthusiastic on Miss Holt.

Miss Isabella Holt's "The Marriotts and the Powells" is a really good first novel, because it has a quality which is rare in American fiction and because its faults are faults which Miss Holt will outgrow. It has leisure. I do not mean that the characters are men and women who are not hurried and harried, but that the author somehow has got into her book a feeling that she has taken time to think things out. The book is not fortuitous—except at the end. Its very previous charm makes the ending, and the few chapters after the boys go off to war betray haste, as though Miss Holt had suddenly gone cold toward her book and wanted to be quit of it. That is its principal fault, and one which is evident in many a first novel.

"The Marriotts and the Powells" is a story of a conglomerate family group of Chicagoans. It is told simply, with sophistication, with kindliness, with a point of view, and with mental leisure. It is not a negligible novel. Miss Holt has a literary future.

MISS ISABELLA HOLT.

Knut Hamsun in Lighter Vein.

"Dreamers" is the latest of Knut Hamsun's books to be available in this country. It was published in England under the title of "Mothwise." It is a sort of combination of its two titles, a fragile tale, half dreamy. It is another love story, like "Pan," though with none of the tragedy of "Pan," and none of the heroic sculpturing of "The Growth of the Soil." It is just a love story, told with a certain daintiness, if one may use such a word for the work of a man who wrote such a masterpiece as "The Growth of the Soil."

Yearning for the Quiet Life.

"Manslaughter" is Alice Duer Miller's latest novel. It is not a suffrage novel! The title is not ironic. The story concerns a beauty, a young woman, firmly established in New York society, who kills a motorcycle policeman who arrests her for speeding, and a "beast," a district attorney. The fact that she is convicted and spends two years in prison adds zest to the tale. Incidentally, if all prisons were as fascinating as Alice Duer Miller makes Lydia's temporary home, a number of volunteers among indigent artists could be found as inmates—plenty of fresh air, sunshine, food, recreation, and leisure for thought. The idea of such a haven of rest is intriguing.

Supports Weak Arches

Because the shank is flexible, and the last modeled to fit the instep, a weak foot is supported in the Cantilever Shoe without resorting to artificial appliances. But the great advantage is that the Cantilever support permits the muscles to exercise in walking, and the blood to circulate, whereupon strength begins to return to the foot.

For exercise is the prime correction of a weak (or fallen) arch. The muscles and ligaments will again hold the arch bones up to their normal position if given a chance to recuperate through exercise and healthful flow of circulation.

Cantilever flexibility is good for the well foot. Every woman who has strong feet should keep them strong by wearing flexible, good-fitting shoes.

And if you are one of the unfortunate sufferers of arch troubles, try wearing Cantilever Shoes instead of artificial supports. You will enjoy the comfort and good looks of Cantilever Shoes while your feet are being strengthened by natural exercise.

A book which is achieving a substantial and lasting success far outranking that of a fiction "best seller." An ideal gift-book—infinitely human, lovable and inspiring.

"His book makes me feel at fifty like fifteen, makes me wish to begin all over again—and come from Holland. It beats the Dutch—by its Americanism, I suppose, this book of Bok's."

BRASS
By CHARLES G. NORRIS

Brass is not an attack on marriage.

Brass is an absorbing story of marriage ties, carelessly assumed, easily broken.

Brass is a vivid picture of conditions which do exist in every American town.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON praises it as "of a very high order. . . . I do not think there is a doubt of the enormous success of the book."

FANNY HURST writes: "I think it rides Norris into the rank of foremost American novelists. His convictions ring and his characters live."

In Which the Music Critic Is Told His Duty

of the cynical explanations heard. He was here the day before and attended the matinée of "L'Amore dei Tre Re," withdrawing after the first act because, as he explained to those who were sitting with him in Miss Garden's private box, he felt laryngeal premonitions.

Traces of the trouble were noted by the reviewers of musical events for the New York newspapers when, in the editions of Dec. 10, they described Chaliapine's first appearance there in the title rôle of Moussorgsky's "Boris Godunoff." Their description ran well nigh entirely to warm praise of the impersonation. While he remains an unknown to most of us on this lake front, there seems to be no reason to doubt that he is a unique artist and that his coming for the first time should classify as an event.

Talk of the Tuneful.

In spite of its comparative brevity "Salome" is so nearly impossible to bracket with another opera that it will be given tomorrow night by itself, the curtain rising at 8:30 instead of the customary 8. Warning is sent out that no one will be seated after the performance begins and that therefore prompt attendance is advisable. Lucien Muratore, who will appear as Herod, "created" this rôle in Paris, and he and Miss Garden appeared together for 100 nights in the work.

One of the new singers who up to the present has been kept on the reserve list of the opera company will get his first chance here this week. He is Vicente Ballester, billed for the baritone rôle in "Lucia di Lammermoor" on Saturday afternoon. Most American cities from Boston to San Diego, except Chicago, know his singing, and, it is reported, like it, for he has visited large numbers of them as a member of the itinerant San Carlo company. Also many of his associates at the Auditorium have sung with him in South America, Central America, and Mexico, and Mr. Polacco has at one time and another wielded the baton in Ballester's performances.

Rosa Raisa has been requisitioned to learn the rôle of Minnie in Puccini's version of "The Girl of the Golden West." Edward Johnson used to sing the part of his near-namesake, Dick Johnson, in Italy, and it was rated as one of his great successes there. It would seem, however, that this rôle will be reserved for the Greek tenor, Lappas, who has not yet made an appearance with the Chicago Opera association and whose American reputation is entirely in the future. It also appears that the first performance will take place in New York, not in Chicago. The opera was not a success when it was given here under a former régime.

Miss Garden has been going through the last week fighting off an attack of illness and attending to her duties as artist and general director at the same time. One of the few instances in which she consented to save her vitality occurred in the performance of "L'Amore dei Tre Re" on Tuesday night. Generally she appears in the last act of the tragedy lying on the bier as the corpse of the strangled Fiora. In this performance, however, she finished her performance with the death scene, and assigned a lesser member of the organization to double as the corpse.

As an aid to the holiday spirit of cheer John Alden Carpenter has constructed a piece for orchestra which he calls "Krazy Kat" and describes as a jazzy pantomime. Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play it this week at Orchestra hall.

The violin recital by Erika Morini this afternoon is correctly bulletined among the good news of the week. Miss Morini made her first Chicago appearance as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra not long ago, and straightway became a sensation. In a season replete with good violinists she more than held her own for the sheer vitality of her playing.

Following a pleasant annual custom, a group of children from the choruses of the Civic Music association will gather in the Venetian court of the Fine Arts building on Tuesday afternoon and sing a program of Christmas carols. England, France, Germany, Bavaria, and Bohemia will be represented, together with a Benedictine chant and some traditional tunes. Miss Anne McPherson, the director, will make her last appearance here on this occasion, as she has resigned from her work with the Civic Music association in favor of a home in California.

The Week in Opera

Operatic performances for the week are thus listed:

MONDAY—"Salome," with Mary Garden, Lucien Muratore, Hector Dufranne, Eleanor Reynolds, and others; conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

TUESDAY—"Traviata," with Amelita Galli-Curci (first time this season), Tito Schipa, and Joseph Schwartz; conductor, Mr. Polacco.

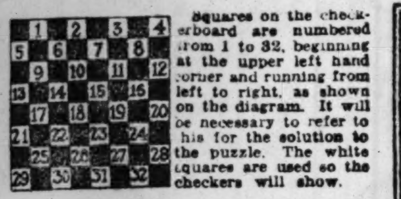
WEDNESDAY—"Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," with Miss Garden, Mr. Dufranne, Paul Payan, Octave Dua, William Beck, Constantin Nicolay, and Desire Defrere; conductor, Mr. Polacco; followed by "A Dance Poem," ballet with Pavley, Oukrainsky, and corps de ballet; conductor, Giacomo Spadoni.

THURSDAY—"Manon," with Edith Mason, Mr. Muratore, Mr. Payan, Alfred Maguenat, and others; conductor, Gabriel Groviez (debut)

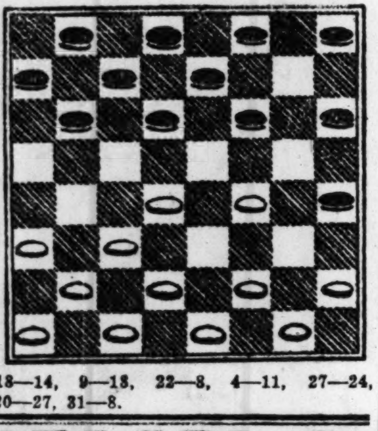
SATURDAY AFTERNOON—"Lucia di Lammermoor," with Mme. Galli-Curci, Mr. Schipa, Virgilio Lazzari, and Vicente Ballester (debut); conductor, Pietro Cimini.

SATURDAY NIGHT—"Tosca," with Miss Raisa, Tino Pattiera, and Georges Baklanoff; conductor, Angelo Ferrari.

Checkerboard Puzzles—By P. H. Ketchum



Squares on the checkerboard are numbered from 1 to 32, beginning at the upper left hand corner and running from left to right, as shown on the diagram. It will be necessary to refer to his for the solution to the puzzle. The white squares are used so the checkers will show.



This one of the quickest wins on the board. If your opponent starts off by moving to the side and does not know it the moves are so plausible he is almost sure to fall into the trap. 11—16, 23—18, 16—20, 24—19, 8—11, and we have the position on the diagram. White to move and win.

White now wins by 19—15, 10—19, 18—14, 9—18, 22—8, 4—11, 27—24, 20—27, 31—8.

De Met's CANDIES

The Night Before Christmas

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house,
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse.
The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of Santa Claus danced in their heads.

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter,
I threw up the window to see what was the matter.
Kris Kringle was there, and his eight antlered dandies
Bore a bountiful sleigh-load of fine De Met's Candies.

As I drew in my head and was turning around,
Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound;
A bundle of toys he had hung on his back,
And Candies galore he had heaped in his pack.

The way he performed, you could tell he was handy,
And he showed he was wise, for he brought De Met's Candy.
His conscience was clear, he knew he'd done right,
When he left De Met's Candies for kiddies that night.

At the door of the house we all gave three cheers
For De Met's, St. Nick, and his eight fine Reindeers,
Then we heard St. Nick cry, as he drove out of sight,
"Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good night!"

De Met's are the Holiday Candies

May the sunshine of Christmas happiness beam on the head of every bonny boy and girl who knows the poem that inspired the one above. Let their innocent hearts thrill with joy when they find De Met's Candies in their bulgy Christmas stockings.

De Met's Candies make jolly good gifts for grown-ups as well. In fact, they solve the gift problem completely. Deliciousness, good taste and utmost value are the compelling reasons which make De Met's so popular the year around.

De Met's candies are made in thoroughly modern shops, where sunshine, scrupulous cleanliness and sanitation prevail. Skilled candy makers, working with the best materials, produce De Met's Candies.

THE POTTERS

By J. P. McEVOY

ILLUSTRATIONS—BY—J. H. STRIEBEL

PROLOGUE.

A gift is usually something you don't want, which you can give to somebody who doesn't want it . . . we are told the giving of Christmas gifts was born of the Magi tradition . . . we are left to surmise . . . one might question their wisdom . . . probably there were no crushes at the gold, frankincense, and myrrh counters . . . Christmas gifts are not expected to outlast the Christmas jewelry about Easter . . . a few people still remain who can recall the true significance of Christmas . . . they are passing with the Yule log and the bayberry candle . . . the Yule log is now a gas log, and Santa Claus has to come up from the basement through the radiator . . .

Scene I.—Ma Does Some Shopping.

When you run out of everybody else there are always a few gross of nieces and nephews to remember, ranging in size from a foot or so in length to ten or twelve hands high . . . Ma believes you should always give books to children at Christmas time, which is fair enough . . . the remainder of the year they can read the telephone directory if they live in the city, or, if they live in the country, they can brighten their brains by poring over a mail order catalogue . . .

SALESLADY: Now, here's a lovely book, I think;
Isn't the cover nice and pink?

("That's a pretty cow, mister," says the city man to the farmer. "Will she give milk?" "Well," says the farmer, reflectively, "she's got a sorter nice disposition, and if she has any I'm sure she'll give it to you.")

MA (dubiously):
It's for a little niece of mine;
She's eight, I think, or maybe nine—
And such a smart child for her age,
She memorizes every page.

SALESLADY: This other one is very new,
It's a very lovely story, too.

(She hasn't had time to read it yet, but it might be at that, and if it might be there's no harm in saying it is—of course, it might not be, too, but that isn't her fault—she didn't publish it.)

MA (looking through the pictures):
I want one now for a little boy,
I think here's one he might enjoy . . .

("This one" being an polychromatic pandemonium that would give any one who loves color harmony the fan tods . . . the very thing, of course, to instill in a youngster an appreciation for better things.)

SALESLADY (helpfully):
For an older child who wants a thrill
Here's the Terrible Giants of Horror Hill.

(There used to be practically only two kinds of stories for children, the two being Jack the Giant Killer, who nonchalantly murdered a handful of giants every morning before breakfast, and Jack the Minister's son, who helped the poor old lady across the street and was left a million dollars next day . . . children are keen critics and they know that poor old ladies don't have a million dollars and if they had they wouldn't leave it to Jack . . .)

MA (selecting handful of books from counter):
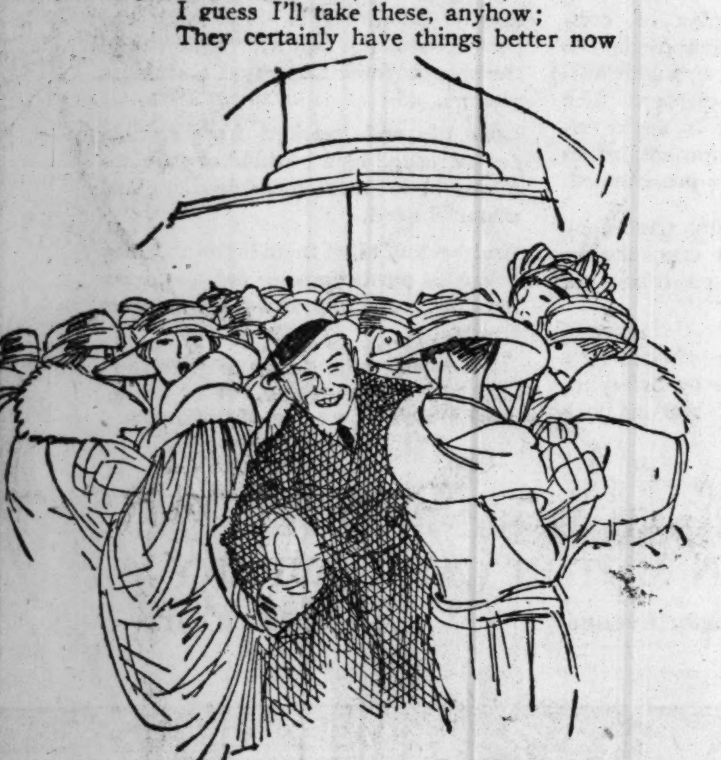
I guess I'll take these, anyhow;
They certainly have things better now



"Stand on my feet if your own are flat."

Than what we had when I was a child . . .
If I'd had these I'da gone plumb wild . . .

(Fade-out scene . . . fade-in, another part of the store showing)

Scene II.—Bill Does Some Shopping.

(The two Walters, Eckersall and Camp, should postpone their All-American football selections until they have had an opportunity to include some lady Christmas shoppers . . . Bill Potter, just emerging from the tenth seething counter rush would like to know what that feller meant when he referred to them as the weaker sex . . . greater love hath no man than that he go Christmas shopping for a gift with which to gladden his lady's heart . . . that's the way Bill feels about Eleanor . . .)

BILL (to clerk):
Ja think a beaded bag would do?
(To shopper): What's s'matter with me? What's s'matter with you?
(To clerk): It's for a girl . . . sure, who 'ja think?
Ja think I was buyin' it for some gink?
(To shopper): Did I hurt your elbow? Excuse my eye.
(To himself): These wild, wild women will kill some guy.
(To clerk): Forty bucks? Say, back to the shelf,
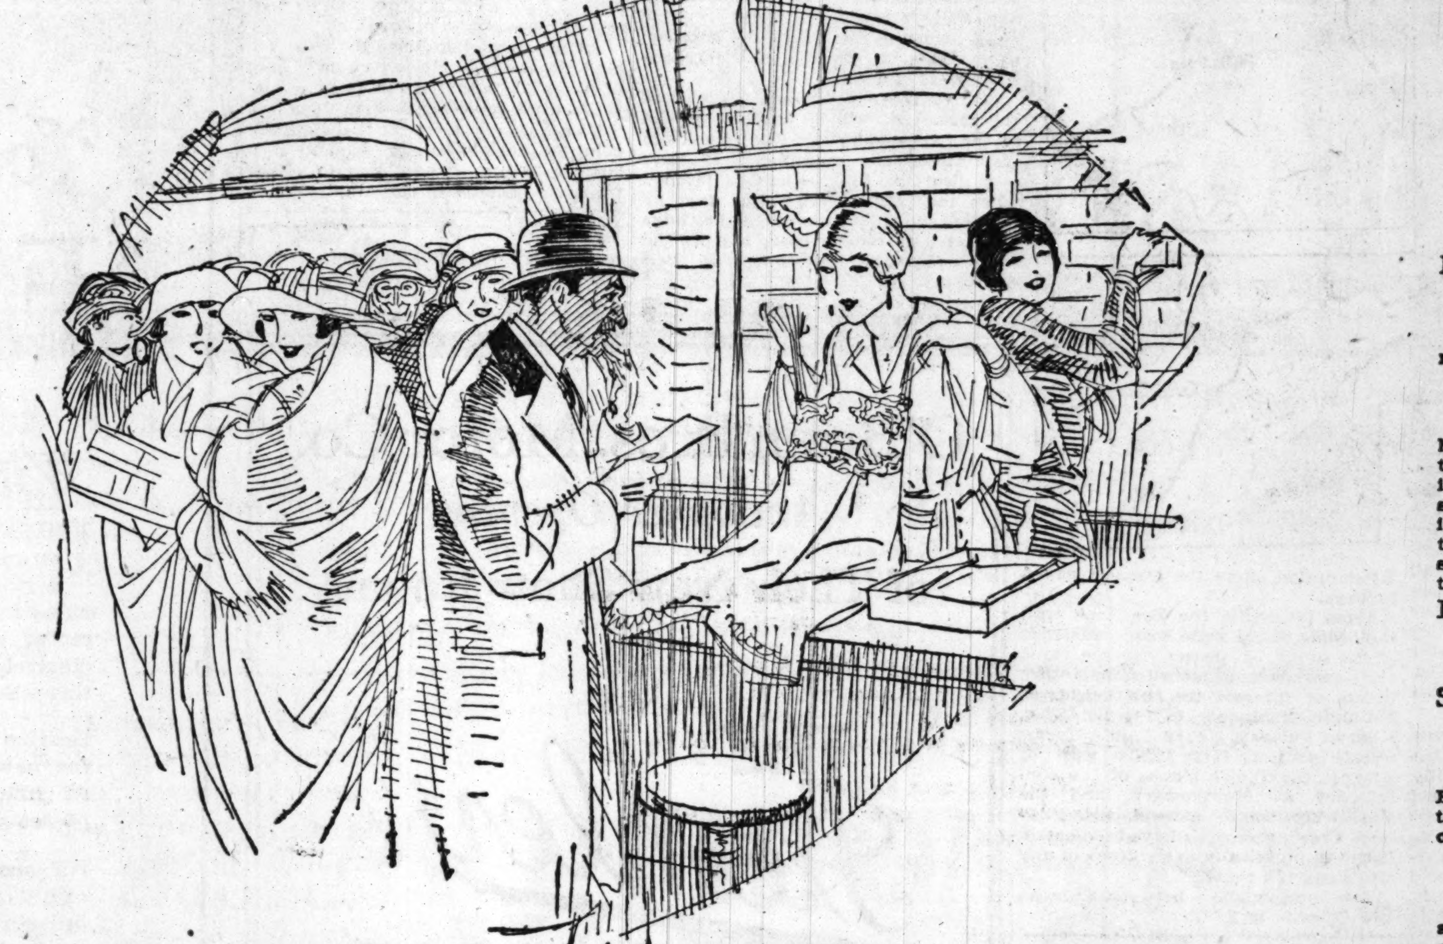
Ja think I print this dough myself?
Forty bucks for a thing like that!



"Is this the size, do you suppose?"

(To shopper): Stand on my feet if your own are flat;
No, that's all right . . . no, I don't care;
I love your umbrella in my hair.
(To clerk): Let's see a bag for about ten seeds,
That's good enough . . . that's all she needs.
(To other shopper):
I won't move on . . . I'll stay right here!
Where do they get that Christmas cheer?
(To clerk): What did you say? Twelve seventy-nine?
Yeh, that's all right . . . Yeh, that's just fine.
(To shopper): As long as that package isn't mine
I wish you'd take it off my spine.

(Fade-out scene . . . fade in, another part of the store showing)

Scene III.—Mamie Does Some Shopping.

(In the movie the Handsome Hero always wears a swell lounging robe in his apartment . . . they look just too stunning for anything, so Mamie has decided that nothing else will do for "Red" Miller . . . she's going to make him a pair of slippers herself . . . "Red" may live long enough to get them, he's so healthy.)

MAMIE (to salesman):
Ja think a lounging robe will do?
I think it's just the thing, don't you?

SALESMAN (who must of necessity be a yesser):
O, yes, and here's the latest shade;
Just look and see how well it's made.

1ST SHOPPER (shrill voice): An' I says to her, I says, you may be a lady, but goodness knows you don't act like one, and she says, what do you mean, and I says, you know what I mean all right, and she says, I do not, and I says, O, yes, you do, you know very well I was going to buy that and you stepped right in and took it from right under my nose. If you call that acting like a lady, all I've got to say is . . .

MAMIE (in thrilled tones):
Yes, we're engaged . . . I think next June . . .
He says it cannot come too soon . . .

2ND SHOPPER (to clerk): Well, I don't see any sense in paying that much for a present for her. Last year I gave her a solid silver mirror (stop your shoving, will you, please?) and she sent me a card that couldn't have cost her more than twenty-five cents (I'd think you'd look where you're going!) So many people are like that—it takes all the pleasure out of Christmas giving. You never know what you're going to get.

3RD SHOPPER (to clerk): There's a spot on it. Don't you suppose the manager will give me something off; I know I can't get that spot out.
(She knows she can.)

CLERK (dazed by countless thousands of shoppers): Yes'm . . .
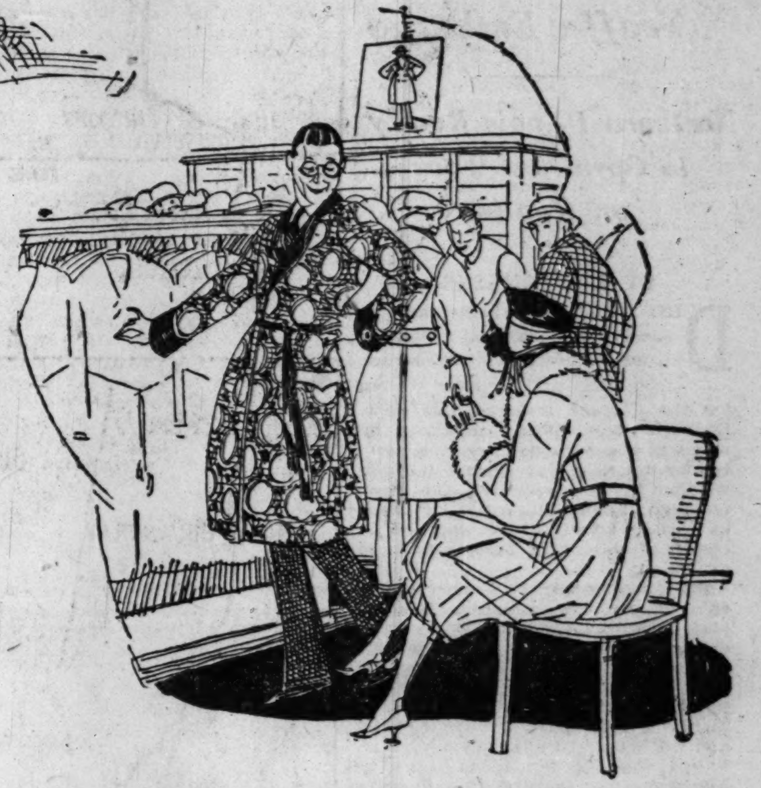
no, mam . . . yes . . . no . . . no . . . yes
. . . I'll see . . . of course . . . yes . . . yes



"Just look and see how well it's made."

. . . I mean no . . . I mean yes . . . no . . .

MAMIE (in a flutter):
I'm sure he'll like this lots, aren't you?
Be sure and take the tags off, too.

(Mamie says this mechanically, knowing as she does that most of Christmas morning is spent in looking for the price marks.)

Scene IV.—Pa Does Some Shopping.

(Ma had to stay home this particular day, so she gave Pa a list and told him to go and get the various things thereon for her . . . Pa has battled bravely and is doing as well as can be expected . . . some of the items on the list have him baffled, but then he is usually baffled about something, so the experience, while disconcerting, is not new . . . one item fooled him completely . . . "Teddy for Elizabeth" . . . he thought a teddy was a doll, but he discovered it is also something else . . . so now we find Pa at the Underthings Counter, just a trifle pinker than the teddy which the saleslady is showing him.)

PA (blushing furiously):
I s'pose that's right . . . Gosh, I don't know.
Just wrap it up, c'mon, let's go.

SALESLADY (helpfully):
Maybe she'd like a different shade,
Here's one of the newest tints that's made.

(Shakes out a new tint for Pa and holds it up to him to admire . . . Pa's ears begin to burn . . . feels all women shoppers eyeing him . . . thinks he can hear suppressed giggles . . . wishes he could get out of there):

Here's a lovely nightie, too,
This lace insertion's very new.

(Pa doesn't know whether lace insertion is new or whether it is being appliqued on the bias . . . and he doesn't care . . . he wishes she'd quit exhibiting all these things for him . . . but he can't stop her . . . discovers he's the only man in the section . . . tries to get out . . . can't.)

SALESLADY (holding teddy up to her):
Is this the size, do you suppose?

PA (afraid to look and yet afraid not to):
I . . . I . . . wuh . . . wuh, well, Lord only knows.

(All women shoppers in section have ceased their activities to watch Pa buy the teddy, or so it seems to Pa . . . wishes heartily that Christmas lists and Christmas shopping were in Hades . . . Saleslady calls his attention to even more voluptuous contraptions . . . begins to dig up camisoles and things . . . Pa gets ready to make one despairing dash for liberty if he has to kill eighty-seven women in the rush . . .)

SALESLADY (wrapping up pink teddy):
There's some lovely things in crepe-de-chine,
You might want to buy that you haven't seen,

(Flaunting soft filmy wisteria thing-a-ma-jig in front of Pa's crimson face):

She'd like to have this, too I know . . .

PA (desperately):
Wrap up my stuff, I wanta blow.
C'mon, let's go; c'mon, let's go.

GEORGE WASHINGTON ESSAYS BY BOYS AND GIRLS

Other George Washington essays entered in this contest are printed every day in The Daily Tribune.

Not a Book Character.

What is your idea of a superhuman being such as Thor and Odin that the old Norsemen believed in? Think of them. Then think of George Washington. In many ways they are alike. But do not gain the idea that Washington was some strange being far apart from this world, sent down by God to lead America to her freedom. He was a human being as much as any of us, although he was a wonderful example.

Some people think of him only as a character in a book. They read of his deeds, thinking of them only as they would some fiction story. Do not let yourself ever fall into this strain of mind.

The titles "first in war" and "first in peace" were justly given to him. He loved his country and was willing to fight for freedom. The qualities which he showed at Valley Forge in the year 1777, in the second year of the revolutionary war, were those which made him "first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Washington was a true American, and my heart swells with pride every time I think of our great good father, and what he did for me and for all the other people of this great nation.

Washington and Napoleon.

George Washington is a character of history who occupies a warm place in the hearts of all true spirited Americans. Washington was an American, who had every opportunity for becoming a society man. He could have been a rich and much sought man of leisure, who looked upon bravery and heroism as secondary in importance. Contrary to this, he had a keen sense of honor and justice. He was taught to be upright. His will was very strong, which his parents left to develop.

George Washington can be well contrasted with Napoleon Bonaparte. Napoleon did not use his cleverness and cunning to the best ends. Washington gave a fair chance to all and inflicted trouble and injustice upon none. Napoleon conquered with the motive of obtaining power which was not rightfully his. Washington conquered with the intention of freeing a liberty loving people from bondage with no unjust glory for himself.

Throughout the warfare of Napoleon is seen a greed for power and a desire to be worshiped as a god above all others. Washington claimed no greater privilege than to be respected, honored, loved, and obeyed. He wished to be thought of as a man to a man, not as a slave to a master. Yet Washington was the victor. He is the one whose name has been revered during the generations. His modest aspirations and his love for his fellow men placed him higher in the thoughts of man than did Napoleon's greed for conquest and supremacy.

Loved by a Nation.

George Washington—what a great feeling we have when the name is said! It calls to our mind the enthusiasm and courage the settlers must have had so as to plan a home and government for us.

George Washington was born in Virginia in 1732. When seven years old he started to school. He learned from a book called "The Young Man's Companion."

At the age of 20 he wished to become a sailor, but this was not his vocation. While the English were waging war upon the United States Washington was made commander of the United States army.

After the war was over George Washington was elected President. He served two terms. The people wanted him for the third term, but he refused, saying that one man can hold the office eight years in succession.

He retired to Mount Vernon, where he died in 1799, loved by the nationwide. But the English considered him a traitor, for he was of English descent. And they thought he ought to be loyal to England and not help the United States win her independence.

A Man Who Had Visions.

George Washington was an American soldier and statesman, the first President of the United States, and the greatest figure in America in the eighteenth century. Washington stands as a type, and has stamped himself on the world's imagination.

In the progress of time he has become more or less mythical, and the real Washington has become almost lost to sight. He has been pictured as a lonely figure of lofty intellect and tremendous moral force who had about as much warmth as an ancient statue.

It is true that this myth has some reality. In Washington there was something of greatness, of majesty, or whatever people choose to call it, which held men aloof. It was difficult to make his acquaintance, and he was not so easily understood. Though he wrote many letters, speeches, and messages, scarcely one of these reveals anything of the man. But behind this myth is a real man, a man of thoughts and emotions, a man who had visions of the future as well as sharp, vivid pictures of the present.

He was great as a soldier, equally great as a statesman, greater as a leader of men, but greatest of all merely as a man.

And he who fails to see the humanity of Washington fails utterly to grasp the meaning of his life.

He Lives Today.

A character of singular purity, the name of George Washington is to American independence what the name of Jesus Christ is to Christianity.

The father of his country gave himself to the cause of the weak and oppressed; he left a home of comfort and luxury to give himself to years of hardship and care, that all men might enjoy the blessings of righteous freedom.

Washington knew the value of silence. To him, words were ships to carry golden thoughts, and he never employed them to idle uses.

In his hours of greatest peril and distress, he sought his Gethsemane; when his men were discouraged and defeat seemed certain, alone he stood, with courageous heart and steadfast spirit, trusting in the might of righteousness.

The life of the man was a revelation of truth, simplicity, fidelity, fortitude, and perseverance. His modesty, always apparent, kept him free from any suggestion of self-glorification.

As commander in chief of the army and first president of the United States, he was called to bear the cross of responsibility, while in the closing years of his administration his political adversaries wove for him a crown of thorns.

He lives today! His loving disciples, numbered by the hundred million, acclaim him, as he was acclaimed in 1799, "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen!"

Like Joshua of Old.

George Washington, a man to be always immortal to any boy or girl in America. "The father of our country" is in reality the greatest man since the beginning of our beloved nation. His greatness, goodness, and nobleness was and will be reverenced by our nation forever.

Franklin once said of him as follows: "George Washington, like Joshua of old, he commanded the sun and moon to stand still, and they obeyed."

Washington displayed the very highest qualities as a teacher of men, as a military chieftain, and as a statesman. He shrank from no duty, his patience and perseverance overcame every obstacle, his moderation disarmed all opposition, his courage, physical, mental, and moral, was of the kind which knew no fear whatever. In the case of obstacles which would discourage other men he knew how to conquer by waiting until victory should come.

He stood first among men, not only in the eyes of his countrymen, but also in the opinion of the world. As his fame was bounded by no country, so will it be limited to no age whatever.

EBBA KJARULFF,

Labored Under Difficulties.

Washington was a brave warrior, an excellent statesman, and a true friend. It was he who, when the nation's welfare was at stake, defied the terrors of the colonists and kept bravely on regardless of the dreary prospects. He and he only could have used the strategy and tact to mislead the British generals as he did.

To him is due the success of the revolution, and without the success of the revolution what would our nation be today? Washington gave our nation a strong foothold, and it has prospered steadily ever since until today it is the pride of the world!

The world has seen many great men. Yes, Napoleon, Julius Cæsar, and the rest, but the question arises—under the circumstances of their day and age was it as difficult for them to become great as it was for Washington?

I would answer—no! They were the leaders of great peoples and great things were expected of them, therefore, their people stood back of them. They led the people to victory, it is true, but it was not wholly through their own genius. They had strength in their armies. They came, they saw, they conquered.

But Washington had to win the confidence of his people. He did not have great armies with which to fight his battles. He had to use strategy, tact, and it took a great deal of thinking on his part to fool the British generals, who were much stronger than he.

LORETTA WUBBEN,
Galena, Ill.
Senior, Galena High school.
Superintendent, Mrs. Myrtle Heer.

Thorough to a Fault.

Washington was not a brilliant man. He was not even particularly gifted. But he was industrious without being a slave to work; he was thorough to a fault; he had a deep appreciation, the courage and manliness to live true to his highest thought, and the broadmindedness to compromise with those who differed with him where anything but honor and principle were concerned.

He was not a genius, but he was a master of common sense, neither was he an impossible hero, but he was a severely tested human being who conquered himself; he was not the greatest hero that the world has ever seen, but he was certainly the most unselfish and probably the most successful statesman known to history.

It is for these human qualities, revealing the possibilities that lie with us all, that Washington is honored throughout the world. It is in recognition of this that each state in this mighty union, and many of the nations of the earth contributed a stone to the majestic shaft that forms his monument today.

It is in remembrance of this that America has preserved Mount Vernon where the presence of the man is felt, and his spirit breathes an inspired benediction over the land he loved.

Hero of a Mighty Nation.

As we gaze upon the American flag George Washington, the brave maker of our nation, rises before us. It was he who fought bravely for America, his fatherland. His great accomplishments have been a wonder of his day and ours. As he was the first president of the United States, he served his purpose well and carried out all his aims.

When a boy his character was that of a good child, obedient and faithful, honest and trustworthy. When he was but 22 years old he led the English army on to battle against the French. The men under his care fought bravely and sturdily, but on account of lack of food and ammunition they were forced to surrender. A number of battles followed, George Washington taking part in each, meanwhile keeping in mind the motto, "Work hard and play hard."

Our gaze is still fixed upon Old Glory; the visions of our first President pass through our minds; he still stands before us as a true hero of a mighty nation, and the people of this day still think of him with honorable admiration.

Gave Best to Nation.

Washington was a real, true hearted American. In his youth he was what we consider a real American boy, normal in every degree—athletics, studies, spirits, and a desire for the open places.

Early he entered military service, serving England nobly in the French and Indian war, and just as nobly he fought against her that we might today be free Americans.

He was broad minded, self-sacrificing, brave, patriotic, and above all God fearing. In the dark days of Valley Forge and the New Jersey retreat he sought relief in prayer, not that he might be relieved of his duties, but that he might be spared and given the strength to wrest victory from defeat for his country,

Even after seven years of the hardest life that a man can go through with, he did not retire, but, believing it his duty to become the pilot of our new born nation, at is unanimous request, he continued in service for eight more years of strenuous toil.

Then, and only then, when he felt he could do no more, he retired, after fifteen years of the best service any man ever gave his country, to live in peace the few remaining years of his life.

Washington was the example of a true American, of which there is so much need today.

MOTORDOM

Chicago Drivers Freed from Snow Traffic Embargo

Northern Illinois Ready to Open New Work on Roads.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

DRIFTING snow, another ancient enemy of practical highway transportation, will be struck from the list of winter terrors for the Chicago motorist this year. Connected trunk lines throughout Illinois will also be kept in service twenty-four hours a day during the bad weather if the coöperative plan given northern Illinois authorities last week by George Lamb, district engineer in charge of state work here, is followed generally.

Five county highway superintendents of northern Illinois, including Maj. George A. Quinlan, Cook county chief, attended the state conference and pledged their aid in keeping the lines open. They will be responsible for that portion of federal aid pavements in their particular jurisdiction and will see that traffic moves regularly over the important trunk highways this winter for the first time in state road history.

Employ Patrolmen.

This new maintenance work, which will add to the annual efficiency of scores of truck fleets and remove one of the main drawbacks from winter driving for thousands of passenger car users, will have as its basis an organization of fifteen state highway patrolmen assigned to the northern district. Each operates a truck and grader which is part of the maintenance equipment turned over to the states by the war department following the war.

Plans to date include consistent snow removal along Roosevelt road and the Lincoln highway running west from Chicago to the Mississippi river; on the Chicago-Waukegan-Milwaukee federal aid road which enters Wisconsin north of Zion; on the Dixie highway which runs south from Chicago through Chicago Heights to Danville, and on the Chicago-Peoria-St. Louis highway which uses Ogden avenue and Archer avenue south and west through Joliet. It is believed that efficient work on these federal aid roads will result in an enlarged maintenance organization to take care of all paved roads and heavily used highways.

James T. Voshell, federal district engineer in charge of government inspection work in the middle west, declared yesterday that, in his opinion, all government road equipment can now be used on state roads as well as along the connected federal highways.

Removes the Lid.

"The government has turned over 900 trucks as the Illinois highway quota," he pointed out, "in addition to a number of tractors that can be used for heavier work. In the bill passed by congress in November provision is made for the use of this equipment on state roads as well as on national highways. In Illinois, Michigan, and neighboring states this equipment should usually be sufficient for snow removal. Snow plows can be rigged to the trucks and tractors can be brought to bear on the bad drifts."

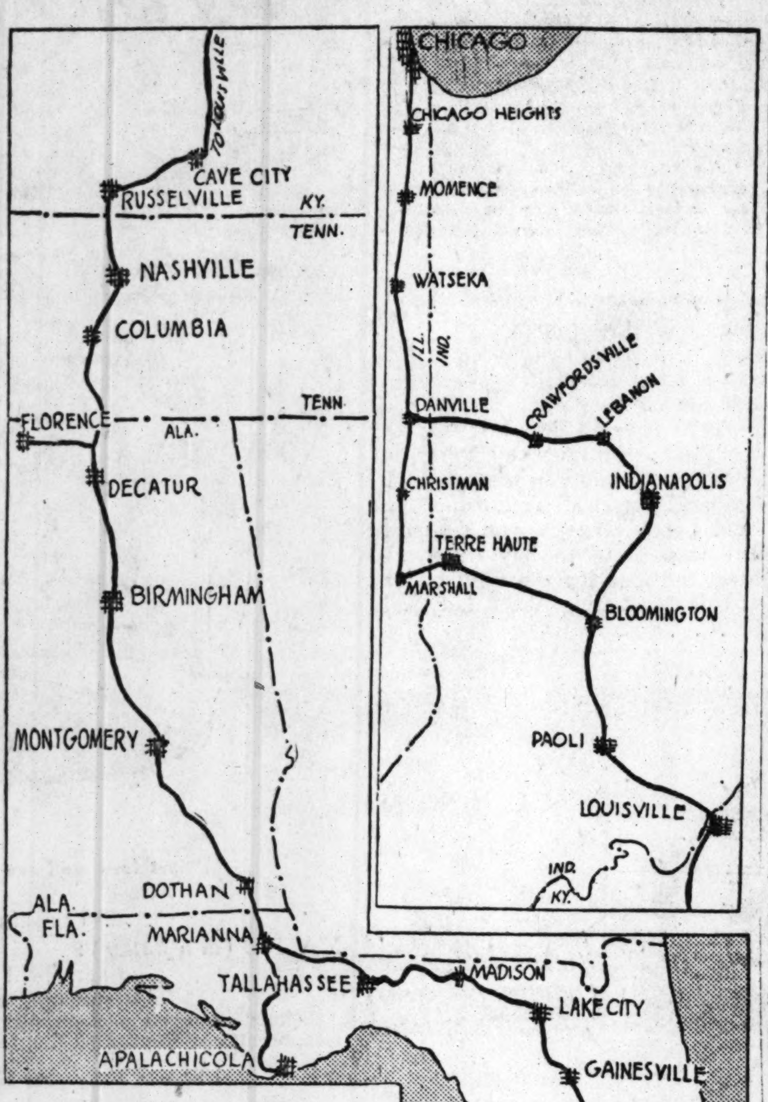
Illinois engineers expect to profit directly from the development of snow removal work and maintenance achieved by the Pennsylvania state highway department, whose maintenance engineer has established winter depots at strategic points along the system. Arrangements have been made with the weather bureau to notify the department the moment government experts detect signs of a coming storm. This news is telegraphed to department representatives in every part of the state and maintenance crews are dispatched to the various stations. When the storm breaks the state organization is prepared to meet it and clear away dangerous drifts before they can halt traffic.

Clear Great Pass.

Another example of progressive maintenance cited to Illinois authorities in urging state-wide snow removal this winter is that employed on the mountainous drifts in famous Snoqualmie pass on the Sunset highway in Washington state. This road, one of the scenic features of the west, is on the main continental route, but until this year has been practically impassable from the first heavy snowfall until July.

The pass was completely choked early last spring when county commissioners organized to combat the age old barrier and free the huge volume of traffic piled up there. A thirty-two ton shovel of the "merry-go-round" type was employed in the first attack, but it could not be used before all highway bridges had been reinforced to carry its weight. The shovel was started from the east side of the pass on April 9, and it was not until May 12 that the last bank was removed from the road and hundreds of automobiles were allowed to go forwrd. The work opened the Sunset highway two months earlier than ever before and saved King and Kittitas counties at least $5,000 from the usual maintenance expenditure. Great drifts of snow lay on either side of the road until after July 4, but traffic moved steadily during the two forbidden months. A like method will be used this winter in Washington and in clearing the roads of Rainier National park.

A WINTER TRAIL TO DIXIE



BEE LINE HIGHWAY.

SEVERAL years of steady improvement along the route of the famous Bee Line highway which runs from Chicago to the "Land of the Sky" via Birmingham and Montgomery, has made the interesting trail passable this year over its entire length, according to reports from the Alabama association. Approximately 500 miles of the route from Nashville to Orlando, Fla., is now hard surfaced. The remainder is made up of fair graded dirt and sand roads.

Western avenue takes the route south out of Chicago, following the concrete through Watseka to Danville. There the tourist may either turn east through Crawfordsville to Indianapolis and follow the Dixie highway south to Louisville or continue on the new pavement through Paris to Marshall and there turn east through Terre Haute, joining the Dixie at Bloomington. The latter option offers the greatest paved mileage.

From Nashville the Bee Line trail taps some of the prize scenic offerings of the south. It passes through three state capitals and touches among other points of interest the battlefield of Franklin, birthplace of the Ku Klux Klan at Pulasky, Henry Ford's Muscle Shoals project, forty miles west of Albany, the White House of the confederacy at Montgomery, and the storied beauties of Alabama and Florida. Free auto camps have been established in practically every town of any size along the route.

The total mileage between Chicago and Orlando is 1,377.

Motordom's "400" Groomed for Huge National Display

Cheaper and Better Cars to Mark Chicago and N. Y. Shows

PREPARATIONS for the national automobile shows in New York and Chicago give assurance that the displays will be the biggest and most comprehensive the country has ever known. The New York event, the first half of the show, will be held in Grand Central Palace Jan. 7 to 14, and the Chicago event, the second half, in the Coliseum and armory Jan. 28 to Feb. 4.

S. A. Miles, manager of both displays, has been in New York for some days conferring with decorators for the Palace exhibition, and while he is not ready to divulge his program in this respect he promises it will surprise visitors. It is also known that car manufacturers throughout the country are coöperating from every possible angle to make the shows the greatest ever. This is reflected in the record number of exhibits.

One of the outstanding features of the 1922 show will be the new values in the cars displayed. Ever since the war motor car manufacturers have been profiting by the lessons learned when the plants were being used by the government. As a result they have been able to reduce costs and at the same time show betterments in their products.

Automobiles are improving every year; the automobile shows reflect this. For the most part, however, the betterment has been noticed in body designs, coach work, and finish, both interior and exterior.

There will be ninety-four car manufacturers exhibiting on the four floors of the Palace in January, as against eighty-eight last year. This record number of exhibitors means that there will be nearly 400 different models shown to the motoring world.

Eight new makes of cars, including two foreign ones, will be shown at New York. These are the Bouronville, Handley Knight, Rickenbacker, Wills St. Claire, Kelsey, Itala, and Vauxhall. The last two named are the foreign makes that will be on display.

This year's exhibition will also show to the public the biggest display of accessories that has ever been located under one roof, in spite of the fact that it was impossible to find space for many who applied for booths. In New York the accessory booths number 233, and they will show a most varied line of devices and appliances that go to help the motorist. Every year something new can be depended upon from this phase of the exhibit, this branch of the trade having grown to vast proportions in the last few years.

One of the features of the show week will be the many meetings, both business and social. These have not all been arranged, but it is certain that the "Old Timers' club" will have one of the big parties of the week.

SAFETY SECRETS

HERE are some sound safety hints issued by the Automobile Club of Southern California:

When you give an arm signal for a turn, look behind before turning.

Don't drive away from the curb without giving an arm signal and looking behind.

Do not park your car partly on the highway when stopping to change tires or make repairs.

Do not alight from a parked car on the left hand side without looking to see if any one is approaching in a machine.

Do not back out of any public or private garage on a main thoroughfare.

Do not fail to look to both left and right when approaching a street intersection, regardless of the fact that one has technically the right of way on all cars approaching from the left.

When driving in the mountains and approaching a railroad crossing do not rely upon the wigwag or bell, as they often fail to work. Use your eyes and ears.

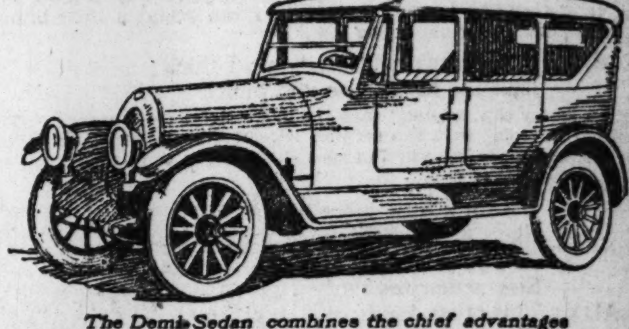
Do not pass machines going in your same direction at a highway or street intersection, as it is dangerous as well as being against the law.

Remember not to drive too close behind the car in front of you, as it may be necessary for that car to stop suddenly without giving a stop signal.

Do not race a street car to a stopping point in order to squeeze past it, as a large majority of accidents to pedestrians are caused in this way.

PISTON PIN KNOCK.

The knock produced by a loose piston pin is considerably lighter than a crank shaft knock and is most noticeable when the engine is running idle with the throttle nearly closed. The only cure for the knock is to repair the pin or bushing or both, though fortunately this knock does not indicate as dangerous a condition as a crank shaft or connecting rod knock.



The Demi-Sedan combines the chief advantages of enclosed and open cars, and creates others of its own. 100% adaptable to every season of the year. Quick-removable, non-rattle glass panels, permanent top, 4 doors, for 5 passengers. Price $2750. f. o. b. Syracuse

These Oakland Features Make Possible
The Special Guarantee

The new and remarkable features embodied in the Oakland engine—features which have made possible the sweeping Oakland guarantee—are causing considerable comment throughout the automotive industry.

Oakland's special design and construction of cylinders, pistons and piston rings have supplied the much-sought-for means of eliminating an annoying trouble familiar to drivers of motor cars—"oil pumping".

Just how fully Oakland engineers have solved this problem for motorists—particularly in these times of low grade fuels and oils—is best proven by the terms of the Oakland 15,000 mile written guarantee against "oil pumping."

Read this unusual guarantee—when you come in to inspect the five attractive models on exhibition.

The Christmas Gift every Car Owner Wants

VERY practical and attractive is this novel device which fits on radiator cap or fender. It warns of an overheating motor. A green light glows within the Warn-O-Meter when the motor is running at normal temperature. As the motor's heat nears a dangerous degree, a brilliant red light flashes on to warn the driver.

The Warn-O-Meter is accurate in its heat indicating. It takes the motor's heat direct from the motor itself, not from the water in the radiator.

The car owner will appreciate a gift like this. It will save him many motor repair bills. It will dress up his car. After he receives it he won't rest a minute until he puts it on his car to see how it looks and operates.

There are two models. A De Luxe Warn-O-Meter, beautifully finished in polished nickel with silver-etched dial set behind a heavy beveled glass, sells at $12.50.

The Standard model, exactly the same in mechanical design, but with a standard finish of black enamel and nickel; sells at $10.00.

A model for Ford cars is also finished in black enamel and nickel. Included with the Ford model is an attractive radiator cap. Complete, $10.00.

MOTORDOM

Mentor Blazes a Way to Cheerful Winter Driving

Crank Case Dilution Is Chief Cold Weather Trouble

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE cold days of winter force certain obligations upon the car owner careful of his machine, especially if his car is not to be laid up for the cold weather. Year around driving in the northern climates is no longer what it was but a few years back, when it was customary as soon as the first signs of winter came to place the car high and dry on jacks and strip it of the equipment assumed perishable.

Without doubt the lubrication of the car is most seriously affected by cold weather. Our gasoline of today, which is more correctly termed motor fuel, is a combination of many different fuels, some of which are quite volatile—that is, easily evaporated—and others of which are rather heavy.

The comparative manner in which these fractions are designated is by reference to the temperature to which the particular fraction must be heated before it will ignite. When the igniting temperature is reached the fuel is at its "flash point." The various flash points of the different fractional components will vary between approximately 125 degrees Fahrenheit and 500 degrees Fahrenheit. This last named temperature is called the end point of the fuel, and since a goodly percentage of our present fuel is composed of the fractions having high end points we are of necessity forced to use the choke a great deal when starting in cold weather. The reason is plain.

Only the fuels igniting easily are the ones to first take fire when the engine is cold. The other fractions having high end points do not ignite, but collect in the combustion chamber, and leak by the piston rings and pistons to the crank case, thus diluting the lubricating oil. It takes but a small amount of fuel dilution to destroy the lubricating value of the engine oil, and after this has happened irreparable damage can be done the interior of the engine in a short while. So it is easily seen that frequent attention to the lubricating oil and its condition is highly necessary during cold weather.

If I recommend that the oil be changed as often as every 400 miles during city driving in winter I might be accused of being in league with the lubricating oil makers, but with the foregoing as cause for making such a recommendation it is believed that no criticism will be voiced.

Records from the cylinder regrinding industry show that where engine lubrication is not given the attention it deserves mileages of 15,000 are exceptional. At the end of this distance it becomes necessary to regrind the cylinders, fit oversized pistons, new piston pins, and new piston rings. But where lubrication is given deserving attention mileages of 35,000 are not unusual, before this regrinding process is necessary. Here are cold figures which show the importance of lubrication.

A frequent changing of the lubricating oil is not the only phase of the subject to be discussed, for while changing the oil helps a great deal in bettering lubrication, this operation does not aim at the elimination of the cause of the dilution. We have seen how the high end points of the fuel necessitate violent choking of the engine to keep it running until it is warmed up.

Herein lies the remedy within the car owner's control. Obviously it is not within the power of the car owner to control the chemical structure of the fuel he buys, so he must learn how to get along as best he can with it and the equipment. The secret of the whole subject is in a judicious use of the choke or strangler valve. If the choke is so used that it floods the engine with a heavy, dense mixture consisting of large quantities of unevaporated fuel there is going to be an excess of crank-case dilution.

The wise car owner will choke the engine just as little as possible in order to keep it running until brought up to the proper operating temperature.

At this point a word or two might be said of the valve and piston rings. Good compression means more complete combustion. A carbonized valve loses compression, and produces incomplete combustion, resulting in an increase of crank case dilution.

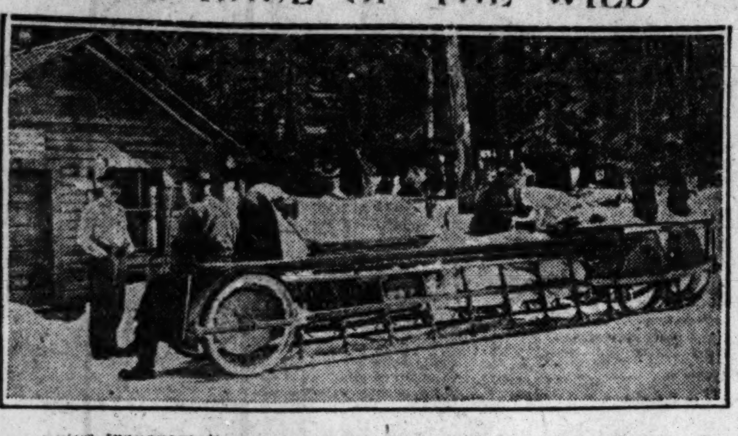
Piston rings, or the valves of the piston, play an important part in this trouble of the modern engine. The chief consideration governing a well fitting ring, one that will hold back as much as possible of the liquid fuel from the crank case, are that the rings have an equally distributed pressure around the wall of the cylinder, that it be accurately made, and that it fits the grooves of the pistons with absolute precision.

As an indication of just how seriously this problem of crank case dilution is being considered by the engineers of the automotive industry, mention is briefly made of the many devices that are being daily placed on the market to overcome the difficulties of the situation. Automatic radiator shutters, opening and closing to keep the temperature of the cooling water well up toward the efficiency range of the engine, are being offered. Carburetors with heating elements to provide a vapor fog for starting rather than a slug of raw gasoline are valuable contributions. Dash regulators for carburetors, giving a control of mixture without choking, help the problem materially. Oil meters have recently been placed on the market which tell the viscosity of the fuel and indicate when dilution has occurred sufficient to warrant a change of oil.

CARELESSNESS.

Never pour water rapidly into the cooling system when a motor is hot. Cold water, when striking the overheated cylinders, is likely to cause them to crack, because of th rapid contraction which takes place.

THE HAUL OF THE WILD



Motor transportation is taking the far north by storm. Here is the latest motor sled, capable of thirty miles an hour speed and equipped for a 200 mile journey, recently invented by Frank Horner of Alaska. Its owner has demonstrated that he can take the sled over any route covered by dog teams.

NEWS OF THE NEW

FOR SAFETY.

The latest "stop" signal on the Chicago market not only flashes the usual red warning when brakes are applied but also indicates a right or left turn by showing a glowing arrow which automatically replaces the "stop" dial.

STOPS THE SKID.

Among claims made for the "skidless" tire chain, the latest addition to motor protection against slippery streets, are elimination of side skidding and easy installation. The non-skid features consist of staggered steel points arranged in rows to give traction and prevent side slipping, and a patented lock which takes up slack in the chain at all times.

Worst Road Fades.

The twelve miles of the West Michigan pike, near South Haven, once termed the "worst road in the world," has been paved with concrete and is now open to travel. Closing this gap opens the entire West Michigan pike from the state line to the Straits of Mackinac to the motoring public without any detours, giving one of the finest roads in the United States for motor travel. The coming spring and summer it is expected will see motorists from all over the country using this route to the heart of Michigan's resort region.

Rust Remover.

Make a solution of one part sulphuric acid to ten parts water and dip in it the parts from which it is desired to remove rust. Next dip them in a bath of hot lime water and keep them in it until they have become so hot that they dry immediately on being taken out. Then rub the parts with dry bran or sawdust and they will be found to be perfectly clean and may be painted with fireproof paint, blued, or nickeled.

Only Early Birds Can Escape Crush of Road Traffic

If you are going on an automobile trip and want to avoid all possible traffic you should go on Tuesday or Wednesday. Such is the conclusion reached from a study of a traffic census taken recently by the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, on one of the most traveled roads in the United States. If you want to go at an hour when there will be the least traffic start between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning.

Traffic increases in amount steadily from Wednesday to Saturday, the census shows, and then jumps into big volume on Sunday. The volume on Sunday is about twice that on Tuesday or Wednesday. On Monday there is a decided drop from the Sunday figures and on Tuesday the lowest ebb is reached.

There is less traffic on the road between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning than at any other time of day. From 3 o'clock to 5 there is a slight increase, then a steady climb until 11. Between 11 o'clock and 1 there is a slight drop, and then an increase again until the peak is reached between 2 and 3. After 3 o'clock traffic drops slightly until 7, when the decrease becomes more pronounced. By midnight traffic has almost reached its lowest point.

Ninety per cent of the day's traffic, the census shows, rolls over the road between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. and 52 per cent between 1 p. m. and 8 p. m.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Question.

What do you think of women drivers?

Where Asked.

Jackson and Dearborn streets.

The Answers.

Elmer C. Kelsey, 5832 Chicago avenue, contractor—With few exceptions women do not compare with men drivers for headwork and safety. As a rule I am glad when I am past them. I have met many good woman drivers, it is true, but one cannot foretell what they are going to do as you can with a man at the wheel.

Horace J. McReynolds, 6539 Newgard avenues, salesman—The point in a policeman's story is my answer, as follows: "At Randolph and Wabash I was frantically trying to signal a woman driver that she was going the wrong way. She nervously opened the door and asked if she had done anything wrong. I remarked stolidly, 'Yes, madam, when you learned to drive that car.'"

A. F. Samlow, 5708 Addison street, engineer and inspector—I believe that women are just as capable to drive an automobile as men. In fact, they are more careful. They are not speed crazy, and they seem to be more considerate of the other driver's rights. Furthermore, the average woman driver is careful about following rules and regulations.

S. W. Richards, Riverside, Ill., engineer and inspector—In regard to women driving cars, I think they have more regard for human life than men drivers, taking them as a whole. My observation has been that they are more cautious, more considerate of the other driver, and are not speeding all the time. I notice I have agreed with my friend, Mr. Samlow. I do not believe in making all of the women suffer for the misdoings of a few careless women drivers.

Harry Pakula, 837 North Washtenaw avenue, salesman—I love the women, but O, how I hate to drive behind them. They should drive as close to the right as possible, so that they will not delay traffic or cause accidents, as they are easily unnerved when they see a fast car coming. O, sure, some of them are alright.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

Demonstrations of motorized fire fighting apparatus, police cars, heavy duty trucks, and light delivery vans equipped with the demountable cushion element and regulation cushion wheel made in Chicago were features last week at the South May street plant of the Morand Cushion Wheel company. Joseph J. Morand, president, announced that indorsement of the wheel by highway engineers and municipal authorities has resulted in new cushion equipment on scores of fire department trucks and other public vehicles in Illinois and the middle west this season.

Bed rock has been reached in tire prices, according to D. M. Mason of the Mason Tire and Rubber company, who told the trade yesterday that slowly rising rubber and cotton markets will make any further drop in retail prices impossible.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker announced last week that the Allison-Rood company has been awarded the contract for distribution of the new Rickenbacker car in the Chicago territory. It will be handled with the Lincoln by the local organization.

W. C. Young of Boston arrived in Chicago last week to organize the distribution here of two new auto accessories, the Electro Radiator and Engine Heater, and the Primo Electric Vaporizer, both cold weather driving aids. Headquarters have been opened temporarily in the Sherman hotel.

The chain store idea of merchandising was adopted by a large number of tire dealers in the Chicago territory, who attended a banquet and convention held Wednesday night in the Lexington hotel. J. W. Glynn, director of chain stores, presided. It was announced that the associated dealers will soon open scores of retail tire stores, all painted a brilliant red, all handling Hall, Dunbar and Michigan tires, and all operating under the name of World Tire Stores. Each establishment will be individually owned but stocks will be bought collectively.

New Club Drive.

A drive to double the membership of the Illinois Automobile club has been launched under the direction of James A. Carter, recently elected manager of the club, and George E. Mason, chairman of the membership committee. Mr. Carter was formerly vice president and advertising manager of the Golfer's Magazine, but for the last three years has been manager of the Olympia Fields Country club, and was principally responsible for the success of that organization.

FARM AND GARDEN

Hens Who Do Not Earn Their Board Are Ordered Out

By Frank Ridgway.

HENS would be assigned to the death pen by the thousands if city and farm flock owners would take the time to familiarize themselves with modern culling methods and eliminate the poor layers. It is not an exaggeration to assume that at least 25 per cent of the hens kept in city and suburban back lots are not laying enough eggs to pay for the actual cost of feeding them. The percentage of loafers in the average farm flock is perhaps even greater than this.

If you are in doubt about whether your flock of layers deserves such severe criticism, figure out the average annual production, and quite probably you will find that many of your hens are not returning what it costs to feed them. Some of them may be heavy layers, while others are poor layers, and the hard workers bring up the average for the whole flock. It is generally considered that it takes about eighty-five eggs to pay a hen's annual board bill.

Detecting the Loafers.

Unfortunately, the mongrels do not have a guilty conscience, and it is impossible to go into the poultry yard and put your finger on the hens that are poor layers, unless trap nest records are kept. Trap nesting is not practiced to any great extent by the average poultry man, so, other and more practical ways are followed to enable flock owners to eliminate the culls and raise the standard of their birds.

Experts have made a careful study of egg production and its relation to the time of molting, body changes, color of skin, body conformation, health of the bird, and breed characteristics. No matter how well a bird may be dressed in rich colored plumage, the experienced culler is able to recognize the marks of a low producer. With these points clear in mind, the practical poultry keeper can go into the pens and sort out the good from the bad with a fair degree of accuracy.

Gives Course in Culling.

Hundreds of low producing hens in Chicago back lots have, no doubt, been locked in the fattening coop to be made into Christmas meat during the last few days as a result of the short course in culling given by Prof. Le Roy L. Jones of Purdue university at the recent poultry show held at the Coliseum.

To make his demonstrations practical he brought two hens with trap nest records from the Purdue poultry farm. One of them produced 97 eggs a year, barely paying a profit, while the other has a record of 197 eggs a year, a difference of 100 eggs. The cost of feeding, housing, and labor in caring for the two hens is about the same, but the difference in profit, using Chicago prices, amounts to about $4 a year. The poor layer produced only a dozen eggs more than her maintenance requirement, while the other hen piled 112 eggs into the basket after she had paid her board.

Measures with Hands.

Every poultryman's flock could be made up of hens similar to the Purdue hen with a record of 197 eggs a year if culling were carefully done according to Prof. Jones' methods. He says that if hens are to be good layers they must have capacity. To determine this he makes certain measurements which indicate the bird's ability to produce His methods are simple and can be followed by any one.

All the measurements are made with the hands, and are relative. Hands, as well as hens, vary in size. Hens of the different breeds, of course, are of various sizes. The poultryman must first become familiar with the measurements of the high laying hens of the particular variety he happens to keep. He often knows one or two hens in the flock that are good layers and can use their measurements as standards in culling other birds.

A hen with a long keel or breast bone indicates capacity and is usually a good layer. For example, the Plymouth rock hen with a record of 197 eggs a year that was used in the show demonstration has a keel bone that reached from the center of the palm of the hand to the tip end of the second finger. The other hen, with the record of only ninety-seven eggs a year, was measured at the same time, and the keel bone reached only to the first joint of the second finger.

Must Have Broad Shoulders.

The second step is to measure the breadth of the back by placing the whole hand—not just the finger tips—on the chicken's back, grasping the shoulders with the hand just back of the wings. The hand is then passed backward toward the tail until the points of the hip bones are directly under the thumb and second finger.

The shoulders of the high producing hens are broad and flat, carrying the width back to the hips. Backs of poor layers are greatly narrowed as the hand passes back toward the tail, showing a lack of capacity.

In the third measurement the body depth is determined. Prof. Jones explains that there must be plenty of room for the lungs, the digestive organs, and the egg organs. A shallow, round bodied bird does not have sufficient capacity; a deep, wide bird does.

To make the measurement he places the thumb of the right hand over the wing and in the center of the back with the second finger back of leg, reaching down to the keel bone. The second

EVERY STEP IN CULLING HENS

1. Measuring length of keel or breastbone. Long keel bone indicates capacity and a heavy layer. Hen in picture laid 197 eggs in year, and her keel bone reaches from center of palm to tip of second finger. 2. Taking measurement of back. Broad back means heavy layer; narrow back poor layer. 3. This heavy laying bird has deep body. Culler's thumb is in center of back and tip of second finger will just reach keel bone. 4. Culler uses both hands, as shown in picture, in determining shape of body, which is deep, slabsided, and blocky in heavy layers. 5. Making pin or pelvic bone test. If hen is good layer three or four fingers may be placed between pin bones. Bones are close together in poor layers. 6. Pelvic-keel bone test. In this heavy layer there is room for four or five fingers between pin bones and keel bone.

finger on an average sized hand will just reach the keel bone of high laying hens that are in good laying condition. With poor layers the finger will often reach across the keel bone until the first joint is reached.

Blindfolds His Students.

Experts consider the fourth measurement especially important. "In measuring the shape of the body I pick up a bird with both hands and try to decide by feeling whether she is a little, shallow, round bodied hen lacking capacity, hence a poor layer, or a deep, blocky, slab sided hen with capacity, indicating that she is a high layer," said Prof. Jones. "I often have this measurement made by students blindfolded in order that the time of molt or the condition of the comb may not influence their decision."

In measuring the abdominal capacity of a hen two measurements are necessary. The fingers serve as the yardstick. On each side of the vent are two thin, flexible bones, commonly called pin bones or pelvic bones. Slightly below these two bones is the rear end of the keel or breast bone. The distance between these bones indicates the abdominal capacity of a hen.

The first measurement is between the two pin or pelvic bones. There is room for three and four fingers between these two bones if the hen is a high producer and is in good laying condition. With the same hen there would be room for five or six fingers laid between the tips of the pin or pelvic bones and the rear end of the keel bone.

Good Layers Molt Late.

The two pin bones will be close together when a pullet starts laying, and the depth between the pin bones and the keel bone will be shallow. With a high producing pullet the bones gradually spread as the laying season progresses and in the spring, when laying is heaviest, there will be room for three or four fingers between the pelvic bones and five or six fingers or more can be placed between the pin and keel bones. Later in the season when she stops laying the bones again close together, returning almost to the position they were before the pullet began to lay. These measurements change from month to month, depending on the intensity of production.

When a hen stops laying in the summer or fall she usually begins to molt or shed her feathers. Good layers molt late and the stage of molting is indicated by the number of new and old feathers on the wings. Once a year every hen has to go to the dressmaker and get a new gown—they drop their old feathers and grow new ones. The wing test is the easiest for the amateur. Spread the wing and count the long feathers. The wing feathers are divided into two parts, primaries, the long feathers on the outer joint of the wing, and the secondaries, the long feathers next to the body. They are separated by a short middle feather called the axial feather.

Take a Short Vacation.

When a hen starts to molt among the first feathers to drop is the first primary next to the axial feather. But a new one soon takes its place. This is repeated until a new row of feathers is grown on the wing. As a rule a hen does not molt and lay at the same time, and the longer it takes to molt the fewer eggs she lays. Hens that molt late in the fall usually molt quickly and are usually much better layers.

Culling is commonly done in August, or September or October, but may be done throughout the winter. A safe rule to follow when culling is done in the fall is to watch for the number of old and new feathers in the wing. The more old feathers in the primary section of the wing the better the hen; she is uslally a high producer and should be kept. On the other hand, the more new feathers found in the primary section in the fall the poorer the hen. Such hens should be discarded.

If you are culling in October, for instance, and find six old feathers in the primary section of the wing, it indicates that the hen is a good layer; while if there were only two old feathers it indicates that the bird is an early molter and likely a poor layer.

Farmers Behind Plan to Make Chicago Seaport

Before many years Chicago will wake up and find herself the seaport and the toll gate of the nation, according to predictions made by John W. Batcheller of Mission Hill, S. D.

Mr. Batcheller is chairman of the tide water project committee of the Farmers' Educational Coöperative Union of America which met recently in Washington to complete the plans by which ocean going vessels can go by way of Chicago and the St. Lawrence to European countries.

"The united farmers are out to put this tide water project through, and in less time than it takes to think about it Chicago will be one of the leading seaports of the world," he said. "Chicago doesn't realize how soon she will be a seaport and the toll gate of a nation."

New York seriously objects to the plan by which Chicago will rival her as a seaport and distributing point for both domestic and European grain. The St. Lawrence project will relieve the wheat tieup in the central west states by taking ships loaded with grain over a new route, cutting off New York's toll and moving goods to and from market much cheaper.

Thirty states and eighteen governors have indorsed the united farmers' plan.

Farm Bureau Meet Jan. 11.

Midwest state farm bureaus will hold their annual meetings during the early part of the new year to outline their agricultural programs, determine farm policies, and give new impetus and faith in organized agriculture for the coming year.

The Illinois Agricultural association, the state farm bureau of this state, with a membership of 100,000 farmers, will hold its annual meeting Jan. 11 and 12 at Springfield.

The dates and places of other middle west state farm bureau annual meetings are: Iowa, Jan. 10, at Des Moines; Wisconsin, Jan. 31, at Madison; Missouri, Jan. 17, at Columbia; Ohio, Jan. 30, at Columbus; Minnesota, Jan. 3, at St. Paul; Nebraska, Jan. 4, at Lincoln.

Chinch Bug Menacing Two-Thirds of State

Actual field examinations show that approximately two-thirds of Illinois is infested with chinch bugs, a common pest that is a serious menace in this state. Chinch bugs have been found in fields this fall from Cairo, in the extreme south end of the state, to Bloomington. In general, they cover the southern two-thirds of the state from the Mississippi river across to Indiana.

In making a survey of the chinch bug situation W. P. Flint, chief entomologist of the state, found the greater part of the southern half of the state to be infested. In many cases the infestation is severe, and threatens to cause serious damage to crops next season. Areas in the immediate central part and the extreme south end of the state are only slightly infested.

According to Mr. Flint, all of the railroads in the infested area have been requested to burn their right of way as thoroughly as possible to help in destroying the bugs. Nearly all of the railroads have expressed their willingness to do this.

Wherever it is possible the chinch bug's hibernating quarters should be burned this winter, advises the entomologist chief. "All the bugs cannot be killed in this way, but every one that is killed may mean several heads of wheat or oats or a good hill of corn more in the fields next year," he said.

"If we are to reduce our grain production next year we want to do it by reducing the number of acres, not by allowing the bugs to reduce the yield per acre, as this does not mean profit to any one but the bug," added Mr. Flint.

Seed Grain Show at Urbana.

Realizing the importance of increasing efficiency in the production of crops, farmers will hold their annual Illinois grain show at the University of Illinois some time in January. The utility score card will be used as a basis for judging at the show this year.

The division of farm crop extension, University of Illinois, Urbana, will have charge of the show.

Good Fellow Work Attests the True Christian Spirit

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY marks the real beginning of Christmastide. Not only has THE TRIBUNE urged the date as the beginning of the "Merriest Christmas week," but a consultation of the subject and musical programs of the churches will show them filled with the spirit and mission of Christmas.

The Good Fellow plan of bringing Christmas joy to the poor of Chicago, which has been promoted by THE TRIBUNE for a dozen years, has in it what we believe to be the essence of the Christian spirit. Good Fellows exemplify what is sometimes called the "new" charity, although in reality it is as old as the sermon on the mount—namely: that of giving without hoping for reward or expecting to receive anything in return.

The Good Fellows do not give in order to benefit themselves, to be seen of men, or for the accumulation of merit that will stand them in good stead hereafter. They give for the sake of helping those who need, and if the poor children, the disconsolate widows, the orphans, and the ill are cheered, their object is accomplished. There is none of the trading principle in the Good Fellow plan. There is nothing of the spirit, "My basket cost me so much, now what kind of a basket will I receive."

There is one law, however, that the Good Fellows cannot help operating. They cannot prevent experiencing the truth of the Scripture statement, "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only (how much more a Christmas basket), in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you he shall in no wise lose his reward."

You Good Fellows of the churches of all denominations, you who have Sunday schools, Bible classes, church members, charitable organizations for whom you feel a responsibility, just take on one more privilege and be a Good Fellow to some one desperately poor whom you do not know personally but who will be blessed by your bringing to them your Christmas gifts and joy.

The Good Fellows accept Longfellow's creed, "If you want a thing well done, do it yourself." They give not only their baskets but themselves, believing that "the gift without the giver is bare." Send your name at once to the Good Fellow bureau, 1602 Tribune building.

Helium Filled Blimp Makes Successful Trip

By Morrow Krum

TEN days ago a United States navy blimp, the C-7, sailed lazily over the national capital. According to the reports coming from Washington the citizens looked casually at the semi-rigid lighter-than-air craft, and saw nothing more than a balloon floating along the air lanes. They saw nothing unusual about the C-7. Residents of Washington see all types of aircraft.

But the flight of the C-7 was one of the most remarkable trips into the sky since men first commenced to navigate the air. The C-7 was filled and sustained in the atmosphere by helium gas.

While the big ship was making sixty-five miles an hour over the White House, the pilot, Lieut. Commander R. F. Wood, was calmly smoking his pipe behind the windshield in the front cockpit. At times sparks from the pipe would fly out into the wind and go skidding along the bottom of the bag. When the ship landed there was no cry from the landing crew to "put out the cigarets." There was no fear of fire around that ship. The bag was filled with helium.

During the various flights, landings, and take-offs from the Anacosta air station the crew of the C-7 were not troubled with the expansion of the gas in the bag. The ship was easily handled.

Helium is one of the greatest discoveries since airmen first used balloons, blimps, and dirigibles. The danger of fire in the balloon is so greatly reduced that it causes no worry whatever. The perfection of helium or the perfection of a blimp filled with helium is a remarkable step forward.

Had the blimp that dropped into the Illinois Trust and Savings bank two years ago been filled with helium—well, it would never have dropped. The same may be said of the ZR-2 disaster in England.

Helium is a gaseous chemical element discovered by Sir William Ramsay, who, after numerous experiments, found that it would not oxidize when sparked with oxygen. It is the lightest of absolutely inert gases, and occurs in the air in the proportion of 0.000056 per cent by weight, or about one volume of helium in 250,000 volumes of air. It also occurs in many minerals, including monazite sands, in the gases of many mineral springs, and in comparatively large quantities in several of the natural gases of the United States.

Commercially pure helium has 92.6 per cent lift of pure hydrogen, and, being absolutely inert, has no deteriorating effect upon balloon fabrics and is safe from combustion under all conditions. It is the all around ideal balloon gas so long sought by scientists.

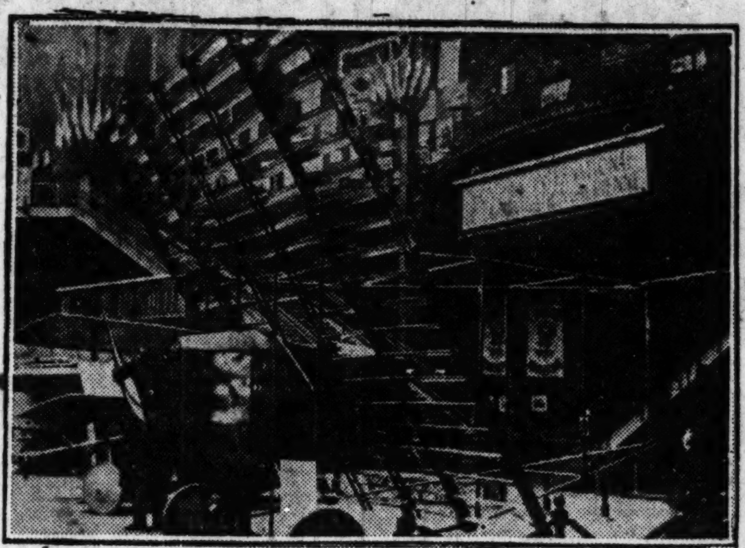
Up to 1918 helium had been obtained only in extremely small quantities—the total amount probably not exceeding 100 cubic feet, at an approximate cost of $2,000 per cubic foot. Now, however, the United States is making plans to secure large quantities of the gas, and it will be only a matter of a few months before all of our lighter than air ships are filled with helium.

Then the lighter than air men can truly say that their ships are safe.

Air Laws.

Denmark is engaged in completing a system of conventions regulating air traffic.

A FLYING SHUTTER



At the recent airplane exposition in Paris the machine shown above attracted much attention. It is entirely different from all other airplanes. It resembles the old fashioned shutter of the New England home. It is said the machine has been thoroughly tested, and will rise almost vertically into the air. Its landing speed is unusually low, the report states.

QULSTIONS ON AVIATION

Questions regarding aviation will be answered in this column of The Sunday Tribune. If a lengthy or personal answer is desired, send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Aviation Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Address.

"Where shall I write to find the present whereabouts of Lieut. E. M. Manzelman, my instructor in the air service? K. M."

If he is still in the service you can learn his address by writing to the director of the air service, Washington, D. C.

Price.

"How much will it cost for me to learn to fly? H. J. K."

That depends upon the length of time it takes to teach you—on yourself, in fact. The average cost ranges around $400.

Stunts.

"What is considered the best all around stunt airplane? L. L. G."

For straight stunting the Fokker D-8 is the best. It is a one place monoplane with a rotary motor.

Salon.

"Will there be an airplane exposition in Chicago this winter? J. B."

None has yet been announced.

Aerial Policeman.

"Has the City of Chicago a flying policeman? F. D. S."

No.

Roumania.

The Roumanian ministry of communications has recently been authorized to open up and exploit the aerial navigation line between Bucharest, Galatz, and Kishinoff, and is authorized to spend 3,500,000 lei on equipment.

In the heart of the Ozarks, with Nature's greatest stimulants for mind and body close by, you will find contentment and rest. These superb mountains, with their wide, peaceful valleys, bubbling brooks and hillsides wooded with the aromatic pine and cedar, offer you complete refreshment from all care.

The Hot Springs
The greatest healing and rejuvenating hot waters in the world are here to benefit you—to give you a zest and joy in life that you have not felt in years. Coupled with a good rest and one of the healthiest of exercises, golf, they offer you a most pleasant way to put yourself in the best of condition.

A Motor Master in each cylinder of your car will give your motor that smooth, continuous action that saves the bearings, the connecting rods, and every part of the car's mechanism.

PHONOGRAPHS.
YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

For years we have manufactured high grade phonographs for the big, well known jobbers, who sold them under their own trade names. They took our entire output, over 100 a day. Many readers of this paper have phonographs made by us, although they bought them from the retailer. They have the same beautiful, hand rubbed mahogany or oak—the same wonderful double power motor. Over a hundred thousand now in use and giving perfect satisfaction. What is more, they paid $150 to $350 for instruments which we are now closing out.

$150 VALUES AT $35.00
$300 VALUES, LESS THAN $100

Be convinced—come to our big factory, 831 N. Wood-st., or our factory branch, 316 S. Wabash, 4th floor. Both places open till 9 p. m., Sundays 10 to 4.

SITUATIONS WANTED—MALE.

Executives and Managers.

IN FEBRUARY, 1919,

after my discharge from the army, I started in business for myself with $2,000 in capital and no organization, employing salesmen to sell a $15 specialty to farmers. My net profits in 1919 were over $9,000, in 1920 over $26,000. My sales in 1921 [until October 1st] were 54% of the corresponding period in 1920, but 140% of the same period in 1919. However, because of too heavy orders placed before the depression set in, I was recently forced into bankruptcy.

While my 1919 and 1920 profits can to a considerable degree be attributed to the boom, nevertheless I believe that the above facts indicate a certain kind of ability which you may be able to use in your business. If you will sketch the position for which you are seeking a man, and if I think I can fill it, I will be glad to send you full details regarding my past history and personal characteristics.

I am now in western Iowa selling washing machines house-to-house. My PAID commissions for six weeks of work so far amount to $728.35.

I am 27 years old, married, Protestant, and a university graduate.

CHALLENGE TO HIGH GRADE SALESMEN
WHO WOULD NOT BE SATISFIED WITH MINIMUM COMMISSIONS OF $100 PER WEEK.

I am building up a sales organization of high powered, experienced, finished men of proved SALES ABILITY. The men who can qualify for this SALES UNIT are going to draw down REAL money regularly. They will be supported by a strictly Chicago concern worth over $300,000, of 15 years' standing. You will not sell stock or any substitute therefor. I am drawing men who have sales records in the stock, bond, real estate and insurance fields. You make the complete sale—you get all the salesman's commission. You also share in big cash bonus every 6 months; purchase contract on partial payment plan. Here is where aggressive energy counts and is paid for. To save your time and mine—no man can qualify for this SALES UNIT who is broke and wants cash advance, or drawing account, or must be driven or babied along with leads. Outside of this you will be supported to the limit. You can make from $100 to $500 weekly. The business is cumulative—in month you should be drawing down $500 or more weekly. Your only limit is your own sales capacity; any man with a good sales record and confidence in his own sales ability should be able to qualify and it will mean more to you than the income you receive to be a member of this 100% SALES UNIT. TRADE SCHOOLS.

LEARN THE AUTOMOBILE TRADE IN OUR REPAIR SHOP. THE STUDENT ACTUALLY DOES THE WORK.

When we say we teach the Automobile Trade by practical methods, we mean that students are taken into our Repair Shops and taught to repair all makes of Automobiles by actually doing the work required on these cars. We obtain our jobs just the same as any repair shop in the city. We advertise our work at extremely low prices—just enough to cover breakage—and car owners bring their automobiles into our shops to be repaired, overhauled, etc. This work is all done by the student, supervised by instructors who act as shop foremen. We do not have a bunch of junk cars that is pulled apart by one gang of students, put together by another gang, pulled apart by a third gang, etc. Ours is fresh, new, clean work, coming in just as fast as we can handle it. When a student finishes one job, another is waiting for him. Fords, Dodges, Buicks, Cadillacs, Hudsons—everything with a gas engine—are taken into our shops, repaired by our students, and sent out as good as new.

The driving also is taught right out on the road, by actual practice. The student is placed behind the wheel, an instructor at his side, and drives up one street, down another, etc., until he actually knows how to drive, NO MATTER HOW MANY LESSONS ARE REQUIRED.

THERE IS NO CHARGE FOR BREAKAGE. The money that the car owner pays for having his work done covers all breakage of any kind. YOUR TUITION FEE IS ALL THAT YOU PAY.

School is in session every day in the week, beginning at 9 a. m., and every evening, beginning at 7. The student comes as much of this time as he can. OUR COURSES ARE UNLIMITED. THE STUDENT STAYS WITH US UNTIL HE FEELS PERFECTLY CONFIDENT THAT HE UNDERSTANDS THE TRADE.

Courses, $15, $25, $30, $45. Can arrange time payments.

We will be glad to have you come and spend a day or an evening with us FREE OF CHARGE, just to see what we do and how we do it. YOU WILL BE UNDER NO OBLIGATION WHATSOEVER, AND WE WILL NOT EVEN ASK YOUR NAME.

HOMESEEKERS, INVESTORS, BUILDERS.

I have subdivided the finest and most desirable located tract in the heart of the most exclusive residential section of beautiful and will immediately offer to those who are looking for a choice, highly restricted home site or investment, large lots 60x160 feet at unusually low prices of $395 to $600, and will sell on very easy terms to responsible parties. There is no other property in Park Ridge for sale at anywhere near these prices, and adjoining property is now being offered at nearly three times my prices. Each lot has a 40 foot building line, $4,000 restriction, and is one of the very few places around Chicago where you are absolutely protected in the future against any undesirable element.

To those who are not familiar with Park Ridge, let me say that it is a completed and restricted community of artistic homes and fine improvements situated on the very edge of Chicago—in the direct path of the city's greatest growth. It is reached by sixty trains daily on the Chicago & Northwestern, only 29 minutes from the loop, and a monthly commutation fare of less than 12 cents.

In convenience, beauty, healthfulness, social life, and everything that makes a home location attractive, this property presents a combination of city and country advantages that cannot be surpassed.

To those who are interested in building, I have a building and financing plan that is unsurpassed. I will build at cost and have over 100 choice plans to show you.

You could want no better, more attractive, more convenient location for a real home, and by buying from the owner you could hardly find a more desirable investment.

The time to buy to the best advantage is now. Write today for map and full particulars.

CADILLAC'S 8 BARGAINS

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, TOURING CAR. Rarely do we have an opportunity of offering one of this series at such a low figure. It is in exceptionally good mechanical condition, has a good set of cord tires, one extra, and bumper. Upholstering and top are in good shape. Considering the price and the general condition of this car it is one of the best bargains we have ever offered and your immediate action will be necessary if you want to avail yourself of this bargain. Price $1,000.

HAYNES SPORT, MODEL 47, 1921. This is a special job and it has individual front fenders, 6 wire wheels, 2 spare tires, bumper front and rear, and nickel plated radiator. Special for this sale, $1,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, SEDAN. This is a small 5 passenger sedan. We have made a thorough mechanical examination of this car in our shops, and it will carry our standard warranty. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, and bumper. Paint and coach condition exceptionally fine. The velour upholstery shows practically no wear. As this is one of the late series and a car that has not had a great deal of mileage, we are sure you will be pleased not only with its appearance but with the demonstration. Special for this sale, $3,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, PHAETON. This late series car is coming into our hands in practically new car condition. Painted a special color of dust proof gray and the paint shows practically no wear. Has excellent set of cord tires, one extra; clock, etc. We have made a thorough inspection of this car mechanically and it will carry our standard warranty. If you are looking for a Cadillac 4 Pass. Sport model of the late series that we believe to be almost as good as new, this car will surely please you. Price $2,750.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, VICTORIA COUPE. This is one of the popular late series in a roomy 4 passenger coupe and is being offered at way below the market price. We are making a special price on this car—way below what we have ever offered a similar automobile for. In order to avail yourself of this bargain come down here for a demonstration immediately; you will probably never have another opportunity of buying such a nearly new Cadillac coupe at this price of $3,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, SEDAN. This is a double letter and one of the latest of this series. This particular car has been one of the most popular models due to the fact that it has a roomy body, yet it is known as our small 5 passenger sedan. Has excellent set of cord tires, one extra, seat covers, clock, etc. Velour upholstery does not look as if it had ever been used. Mechanically this car will bear most rigid examination and demonstration. If you are looking for a Cadillac sedan that has not been abused and has had advantage of our Service Department for attention and lubrication, this is your opportunity. Special for this sale, $2,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This is a double letter series with a full metal body. We have made a thorough inspection of this car mechanically and will guarantee. We have refinished this car in our own shops a standard Cadillac blue, and all bright parts have been replated, and this car shows practically no wear. It will be very hard to tell this car from a new one. Has excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. This is our first opportunity to offer such an exceptional car at this price. Special for this sale, $2,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, SUBURBAN SEDAN. This is one of the late series that has had most wonderful care. The original purchaser has availed himself of our Service Department and for this reason the purchaser of this car will be able to obtain a Cadillac Sedan in way above the average condition. This car carries our standard warranty. Has excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, etc. The velour upholstery in this car shows practically no wear. Paint is exceptionally good. We are offering this car at a bargain price for immediate sale. Special for this sale, $3,750.

NOTE—When Bird-Sykes says "rebuilt cars," they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes Shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle, measuring or testing parts to determine wear, replacing worn parts with new, rebuilding, adjusting, tuning up, repairing body, refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt car satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Locomobile

Locomobile, late Series 38, special custom built 4 passenger. This car is most completely equipped with Rudge-Whitworth wire wheels, new Goodyear cords, new gray green paint striped in black. The car has just had all the very latest improvements added and it cannot be distinguished from a brand new car. Its mechanical condition is perfect. It is very seldom that a car of this type and condition is offered for sale at any price. This is a bargain in America's finest car at $3,400.

Mercer Touring Sedan, 1921; driven only 2,000 miles by factory officials. This car presents the appearance of a new car inside and out. Carries all necessary extra equipment of the finest quality. Priced considerably below the regular price of a new car of this type and represents a genuine bargain at $3,900.00.

Packard, 3-35, custom town car. A beautiful car of standard make, in most excellent condition throughout. This car has had very little use and presents the appearance of new. A saving of considerably more than half the price of a new car is represented at our price of $3,200.00.

Daniels 7 passenger touring, 1920 model, luxuriously outfitted. This car is in excellent mechanical condition, has been equipped with new cord tires, expensive new paint job, tonneau windshield, trunk, etc. Our price represents a considerable saving in this beautiful and high grade car, which would cost new more than $5,500. Our price, $1,950.

ROLLS-ROYCE
1921 4 PASSENGER
CABRIOLET BODY.

Delivered in June, 1921; has been driven exactly 4,000 miles on boulevards; had best care and has not been driven enough to be broken in properly; owner has not spared in any of the equipment, as he has got every accessory which could be put on to make it the classiest car on the street; 6 wire wheels and 6 Goodyear cords, 33x5, which do not show hardly any mileage; coach work, trimming and paint cannot be told from a new car. Owner has been called away to Europe on important business and for an indefinite time, so rather than pay storage on car he has put this fine European car of English make on the market and in our hands for immediate disposal. A practically new automobile, which cost owner $22,000, and can be had for what the chassis alone would cost and no war tax included. Just think of that. Don't hesitate if you are contemplating the purchase of a high grade foreign car, as you may not have the opportunity again.

EXPLAINS REAL ESTATE TRADING TO STUDENTS

Fred M. Clarke Addresses Y. M. C. A. Class.

Fred M. Clarke, of Hipple & Clarke, lectured on "Real Estate Exchanges" before the realty class of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce on Tuesday. Part of it is given below. There will be a holiday recess of the school until next month, when "Renting and Management" will be discussed on Jan. 3 by a speaker to be announced later.

BY FRED M. CLARKE.

FRED M. CLARKE.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Some one said not long ago that the real estate business is almost a profession. On Jan. 1 next it will, so far as the law is concerned, be raised to the dignity of a full fledged profession. On that date the new state license law goes into effect, requiring certain qualifications on the part of an applicant for license before he can engage in and, I may properly say, practice the real estate profession.

I assume I am speaking tonight to those who are going to, or are, following the general practice of real estate. I assume, of course, that you are all corking good salesmen. But no matter how good a salesman you are, there come times periodically when sales are slow; when commissions, so devoutly to be desired, are few and far between. It is then that the matter of real estate exchanges becomes of importance. Money may be scarce and purchasers hard to find, but there are always men with houses and lots, with farms and ranches, who for one reason or another have a latent desire to convert their property into money if possible, but into "something different" if they must. Here is the real estate man's opportunity.

Speaks from Experience.

I speak from experience. I can recall distinctly several different occasions where I have gone over my various listings, placing to one side those which I knew were open for trade, and then matching up those which I thought met the requirements on both sides of a possible exchange. It is easier to do this now than when I first began the business. Exchanges have become so much a part of the real estate game that every good realtor in listing a property will always inquire if the owner would entertain a trade, and if so of what character of property.

There are probably natural born traders, but I am of the opinion that most well informed real estate men can become efficient exchangers by following a few fundamental principles. First, know thoroughly the property you have in hand for exchange. Convince yourself of its real worth as a trading proposition, of its present and future possibilities. Secondly, make sure of the mental attitude of your client and of the kind of property he will be likely to consider in a trade and then try to find from your own list or from other brokers the kind of property desired.

Real Values Don't Always Govern.

Also remember that exchanges are made frequently as a matter of convenience, and real values do not always govern. So it often happens that one party to a deal will give a decided advantage, simply to put himself in what he considers a more advantageous position. Avoid argument as far as possible as to "actual values," but make no representations as to values you cannot reasonably expect to stand up.

NEW TYPE OF SHOP FOR THE WILSON AVENUE DISTRICT

A shop without a counter or a fixture hinting at such a commonplace thing as business, but with space for 750 people who want to see new gowns exhibited by live mannequins, is planned by Charles Kerman, Herman H. Friedman and Harry P. Friedman, doing business as Kermans, Inc., at 4720-22 Sheridan road.

Milton S. Eichberg and Alfred J. Koetschau are designing one of the most elaborate shop interiors in the country. There will be a stage at one end for the mannequins to appear on and then descend from to the main floor, where customers may study their gowns. Merchandise will be displayed in private rooms, each patterned after a period. David Saul Klafter is architect for the exterior remodeling.

Kermans, Inc., has leased the first floor of the building, 50x150, from Rudolph Lederer, for twenty years at a reported term rental of $645,000, or an average annual rental of $32,250, approximately $4.50 a square foot. Seymour Marks represented Kermans and Willis & Frankenstein the lessor. Kermans also has shops at 32 North State and 1215 East 63d.

"Here You Have It, Boys!" Comments on New Officers

According to A. J. Brockman, a director of the Cook county real estate board, that body's enlargemnet program, interrupted by the election, will now be carried out as planned.

Here's what Mr. Brockman says about Tuesday's election: "William H. Loehde, president-elect, is best known for his long continued and successful direction of the Chicago real estate market. J. R. O'Connor, vice president, is a well known south side operator. James M. Kennedy, secretary, is head of the Lake View Real Estate Exchange. A. L. Riemenschneider, treasurer, while long active in board matters, has not heretofore held elective office."

The new directors elected are: A. W. Stanmeyer, George W. Reinecke and Roy E. Knauer.

ADD TO MASONIC ORPHANS' HOME SITE.

Illinois Masons have secured another square block southeast of their present holdings in La Grange, to be used for playgrounds for the Illinois Masonic orphans' home. This gives them a total of three square blocks for the home buildings and grounds. Richard E. Kropf took title to the last purchase.

West Side Banker Buys $30,000 Evanston House

John J. Krause, vice president of the Home Bank and Trust company, Milwaukee and Ashland, has bought the nine room residence at 814 Michigan avenue, Evanston, from David R. Hopkins, for a reported $30,000. George C. Moore & Son represented both parties.

Otto L. Annoreno, vice president of the F. E. Nellis company, commission merchants, purchased from Edwin Bellows the brick residence at the northeast corner of Estes and Greenview avenues, 100x175, for a reported $42,000, through the same brokers.

Plan Baby Carriage Room as Lure for Old Man Stork

As a special inducement to Old Man Stork to visit the new Gordon apartments at the northeast corner of Oglesby and 70th, as often as possible, a baby carriage room is being installed in each entrance. According to the Greenebaum Sons Investment company, which has made a $275,000 loan on the property, this is a brand new idea. We doubt it, but it's a good scheme and a good story. David B. Johnson is building a fifty-eight flat building to be absolutely fireproof. It will have a large playroom for the youngsters.

Garage to Take Place of Moody Tennis Courts

Francis W. Gould, a teaming contractor at Grand avenue and Cass street for the last twenty-five years, has bought the 152x152 vacant just north of Chestnut on Clark, for a reported $65,000, and plans building a $75,000 garage. The land has been vacant since the big fire, and for years has been used as a tennis court by the Moody Bible institute. Ogden, Sheldon & Co. represented the owners and Robert B. Clark & Co. the buyer.

W. Side Mail Order House Plans Another Big Addition

A new eight story building, the second enlargement to the Philipsborn group of mail order buildings within the year, will be at once erected by that company. The first addition took place last July, when a two story building with a frontage of 150 feet on Paulina street was erected. This will be raised to eight stories, to conform to the main building, and another eight story addition erected.

Build $500,000 Annex to Big Elgin Watch Factory

Elgin's famous watch factory, one of the largest in the world, is having a $500,000 four and five story addition erected from plans and specifications by Postle & Fischer, Chicago architects. George E. Morris of Elgin is supervising construction. It will be of reinforced concrete faced with pressed brick. To be ready Oct. 1, 1922.

PLAN STATE-WIDE DRIVE FOR NEW REALTY BOARDS

A state-wide campaign to organize new real estate boards was decided on at a meeting of the executive committee, the board of directors, and the advisory council of the Illinois Realtors' association on Friday at the Chicago Real Estate board rooms.

E. F. Wilson, a Rockford realtor, was unanimously selected to act as executive secretary of the association and will at once start work on a move to organize all real estate men in the state into local organizations.

Col. Johnson of Danville, past president of the association and also chairman of the real estate licensing commission, is to start a tour, visiting all the boards in the state and explaining the workings of the new licensing law. He also will assist Mr. Wilson in organizing new boards.

The entire state has been divided into five zones, with a vice president in charge of each, and an intensive membership campaign is to be conducted under their direction.

Garlow Idea Spreads; Here's a New Batch of 25

The garlow idea is spreading. Woodrich Bros. have started work on twenty-five four and five room garlows, similar to the ones of Richard Cramer's told about several weeks ago in this department. They are on Drexel and Ingleside avenues, between 73d and 74th streets. They will be ready about the middle of the month and will sell for $4,100. Edward G. McClellan is architect. In case you don't know what a garlow is: it's a garage made extremely livable and constructed so that later on the owner can put a large door in the rear and use it for his car when he builds a permanent home on the front of his lot.

BUYS INDUSTRIAL ACRES.

Gustav Freudenberg has bought from William J. Casey thirteen acres of industrial vacant at the northeast corner of Bloomingdale and Austin avenues, for $50,000. It will be sold for factory sites.

How Blue Sky Law Helps Investors.

Securities laws are here to stay. There are now forty states with "blue sky" laws in force to prevent fraud in the sale of securities, Massachusetts having recently adopted an act based on the Illinois plan. These laws are designed to protect investors as far as possible against offerings of worthless securities. In a previous article we defined the comprehensive meaning of the word "securities" as used in the Illinois law. We also pointed out the remedy which this act provides for the purchaser of securities sold illegally within the meaning of the law. It must be remembered, however, that, although many precautions have been taken in the requirements for qualification of securities, the fact that a company has qualified under this act does not of itself mean that its securities are good.

In order to qualify under class C or class D a statement must be filed with the secretary of state describing securities to be sold; giving a detailed statement of assets and liabilities, income account, analysis of surplus account, names and addresses of officers and directors and trustees and other pertinent facts and data required by the act. This statement is submitted under oath by those interested in the sale of the securities, but neither the state of Illinois nor any officer of the state assumes any responsibility for any statement contained therein nor recommends any of the securities.

The investor should not purchase securities simply on the strength of their having qualified under the blue sky law without a careful investigation. Of course, the fact that a company has met the requirements for qualification places its securities in a position of more confidence, but the securities of each company must still be judged on their own merits.

For those who have purchased securities illegally sold the remedy lies open. Prosecutions for violations and civil actions to recover purchase money may be brought within five years. The facts should be communicated to the secretary of state. It is his duty to forward to the state's attorney all evidence of apparent violations for the prosecution of offenders. Secretary of State Louis E. Emmerson announces that he will be glad to give information through the securities department respecting any security that may be offered in your community.

Chicago to Have New Dye Plant Built in 30 Days

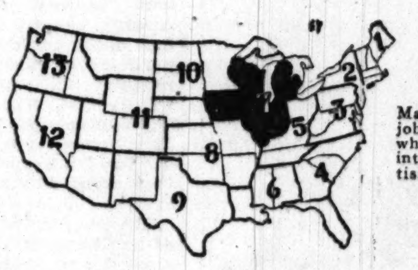
Prior to the last few years most of the dye works of the country were located in the large textile centers of the east. Construction has just commenced on a large dye plant at 4203-19 West Grand avenue, which, it is claimed, will be the largest and best equipped in the middle west.

Work is expected to be completed in thirty days. This seems like high speed, but the architect of the new Schlake Dye works, who is Paul Gerhardt, built a two story plant for the Floyd Manufacturing company last spring in thirty days.

The Schlake plant will front 200 feet on Grand avenue and will be 125 feet deep. It will cost $250,000 and is of common brick laid in the Flemish bond style.

BANK ROBBERY FALSE ALARM.

The patrol wagon and flivver squad from the South Wabash avenue station, the patrol wagon from Englewood, and a flying squad from the detective bureau rushed into the Citizens Trust and Savings bank at 5458 South State street yesterday in answer to a robbery alarm. It was a joke.



Map showing the thirteen jobbing districts, each of which is a logical unit for intensive sales and advertising effort.

CROSS EXAMINATION of a Chicago Manufacturer

Q. What proportion is your output of the total in your industry?

A. About 5%—50,000 units out of a total of a million.

Q. Where do you sell your goods?

A. In every state in the union. I have national distribution.

Q. Is it as easy to sell in any one part of the country as in any other?

A. No. In some places competition is exceptionally severe. In others, the cost of traveling salesmen is high and freight rates are a big handicap.

Q. Does every sale bring you the same net profit?

A. Naturally not, under the circumstances noted in answer to your previous question.

Q. In what part of the country does your net profit on sales run highest?

A. In and around Chicago.

Q. Do you make a special effort to get that high-profit business?

A. Yes, indeed! I travel more salesmen in this territory than any other—cover it much more intensively.

Q. What proportion of the business in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin do you get?

A. About 10%—20,000 units out of a total consumption of about 200,000.

Q. Those 20,000 units sold in the Chicago Territory probably yield as much net profit for you as the other 30,000 which you sell throughout the country?

A. More.

Q. Since your entire production is only 25% of the consumption of the Chicago Territory, why don't you concentrate in this market and sell the entire 50.000 units where they will make you the most money?

A. I am concentrating now.

Q. How do you advertise?

A. In national publications.

Q. Do you realize that if you concentrated your entire appropriation in the Chicago Territory you would have five times as much pressure here as you have had in the past?

A. I suppose so.

Q. Do you know that in addition to having five times as many dollars, each dollar will buy 4 to 5 times as much space in newspapers as it will in magazines?

A. Well, I never thought much about it.

Q. If you used newspapers in the Chicago territory, do you realize that in addition to more money for your best market, and more space for your money, you would be able to co-ordinate your advertising with your sales work and thereby multiply the efficiency of both?

A. It sounds good.

Q. Do you know that The Chicago Tribune has more circulation in the Chicago Territory alone than most of the magazines you use have in the entire United States—a circulation reaching one-fifth of the families in its territory?

A. So I understand.

Q. Do you know that The Chicago Tribune has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars working out methods for the systematic coordination of sales and advertising?

A. I would like to get right down to cases on this! What shall I do?

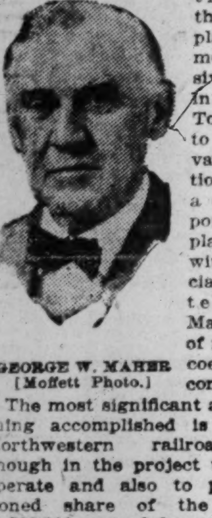
RAILROAD HELPS GLENCOE CARRY OUT TOWN PLAN.

Northwestern Agrees to Depress Tracks.

BY AL CHASE.



GEORGE W. MAHER. [Moffett Photo.]

Just two years ago today this department made public for the first time details of the Glencoe town plan, one of the most comprehensive of its kind in the country. Today we're able to give some advance information gleaned from a copy of a report on the town plan and talks with village officials and Architect George W. Maher, in charge of remaking Glencoe into a model community.

The most significant and remarkable thing accomplished is getting the Northwestern railroad interested enough in the project to agree to coöperate and also to pay its apportioned share of the contemplated $1,500,000 cost of depressing its tracks and erecting nine ornamental stone bridges.

Some of the Things to Be Done.

Briefly here are the important things actually to be done, some of which already are under way, which ultimately will make Glencoe one of the most attractive places to live in to be found anywhere:

The Northwestern to increase its tracks to four, two local and two express, for passenger service only, and eventually to be electrified. All freight to be handled by its branch west of the Skokie.

The Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee interurban to have four tracks and coöperate with the Northwestern in the erection and use of an elaborate union station.

The right of way of both roads to be depressed all the way through the village, with gently sloping banks instead of the usual steep railroad cut, embellished with grass, shrubs, and trees, and a wide strip of park on each side the entire distance.

Green Bay Road to Be Moved.

Green Bay road, now on the east side of the tracks, to be relocated west of the tracks as a 106 foot drive for heavy motor through traffic. Other suburbs are expected to coöperate in making this an important drive from Chicago to Milwaukee.

Sheridan road has been made a state aid road and the county has appropriated $120,000 for widening, straightening and paving it through the village and also has appropriated $250,000 for three artistic bridges where it crosses ravines. The pavement will be 31 feet wide and it will be restricted to light traffic.

All industrial activities have been zoned out of the village to a point west of the Skokie.

All stores and commercial activities have been zoned into a group west of the tracks.

Track Depression Is Keynote.

Of course there are any number of other important features of Architect Maher's town plan, such as more parks, a beach and yacht harbor, new streets, wider old streets, more schools, a community center with a new town hall, library and municipal movie, and many other civic betterments.

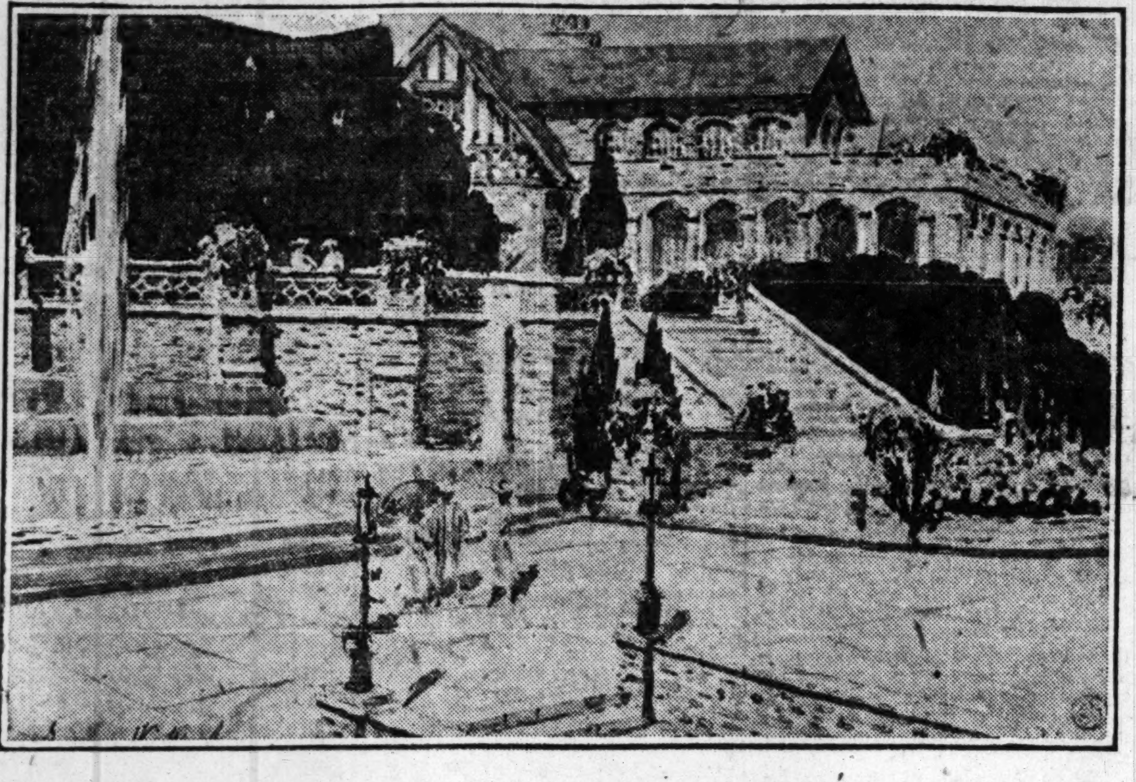
But the outstanding point is that the Northwestern has been given a definite town plan for its engineers to use in studying track depression and that after much study the road has actually agreed to coöperate with the village. The ordinance under which the interurban operates calls for it to do whatever the Northwestern does, so the entire railroad problem of the village practically is solved.

You'll Have to Hurry.

Frederick W. Penfield is president of the village board of trustees and chairman of the Plan commission, the members of which are: Bruce MacLeish, Sherman M. Booth (also president of the park district), Markham B. Orde, Henry H. Brigham, Edward L. Glaser, Otto R. Barnett, Mrs. Alfred Washington, George I. Hicks, Fred J. Sager, J. Fred McGuire, and Paul L. Battey.

If you're thinking of moving to Glencoe, you'll have to hurry. Here's a paragraph from the report on the progress of the Glencoe plan: "Five well known real estate men of our town are sponsors for the statement that there will be no vacant property for sale in Winnetka or Glencoe in a year and a half from now for building purposes."

How Glencoe Is Being Made Into a Village Beautiful



RAILROAD entrances to most towns are painful from nearly every viewpoint. Glencoe believes it can do away with this common municipal failing, and a glimpse at the picture above leads one to think it's going to be done.. Architect George W. Maher, famous for having made Kenilworth one of the beauty spots of the country, has drawn up a Glencoe town plan which has as its keynote a community center west of and adjacent to the proposed railroad union station.

The first thing the Glencoe visitor will see when coming out of the subway and up the steps shown in the foreground, with ornamental lights at each side, will be a fountain with a background of shrubbery and trees. Wide steps will lead up to a municipal building shown on the right of the above picture, and similar steps will lead to a town library on the left of the fountain. More is told about this project in another column.

New Realty Club Head

HENRY GEORGE SLAVIK.

Henry George Slavik has been elected president of the Realty club of Chicago. Newton C. Farr is vice president, and John J. Fischer is secretary and treasurer. The organization has fifty members.

President Slavik, who has been in the real estate loan department of the Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company for fifteen years, will go into the general real estate business for himself on Jan. 3, with offices in the Lumber Exchange; phone Randolph 2316.

Plan Wooded Residential Park at Bryn Mawr Club

Plans have been prepared by Langford & Moreau, landscape engineers and golf architects, who laid out the golf course of the Bryn Mawr Country club at Crawford and Devon, for the development of a colony scheme around the club similar to that at Indian Hill. Several thousand trees are being planted on both the course and the home sites, and shrubbery will be put in next spring. The lots will be from one-half to five acres.

Huntington Hotel Rented for 15 Years, $750,000

A total rental of $750,000 will be paid by Samuel Krackow and R. L. Wolf during the next fifteen years for the six-story, 102-room Huntington hotel at 4526 Sheridan road. Herman Emerman is lessor. The lessees paid a reported $62,000 for the furniture. J. D. Weisberg of Harrison & Riedy represented all parties.

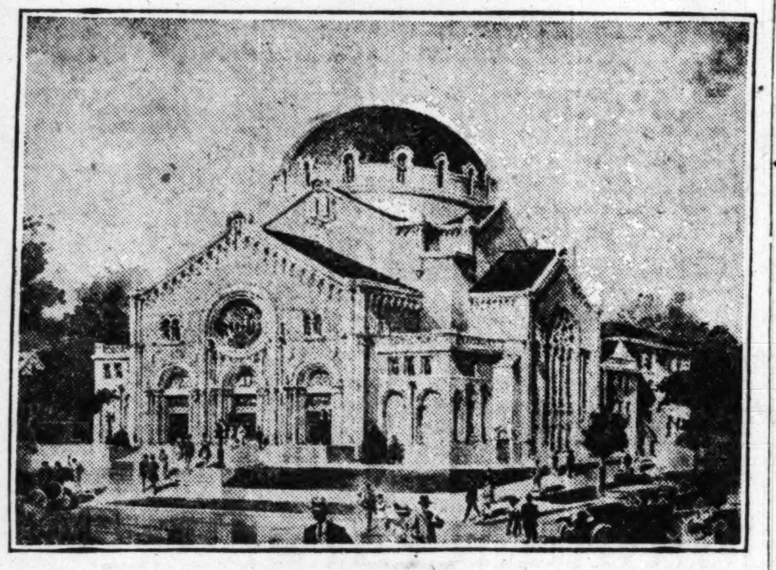
New Jewish Temple for South Side



WORK has begun on the excavation for the foundation of the big Temple of Kehilath Anshe Mayriv congregation at the northeast corner of Drexel boulevard and 50th street, designed by Architects Henry L. Newhouse and F. M. Bernham. It will front 200 feet on 50th and 125 on the boulevard. The temple will seat 1,800 and in the rear will be a community house. It is hoped to open the synagogue in next November on the date of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the congregation, which is Chicago's oldest Jewish organization and the first of its kind in the entire west. Tobias Shanfarber is rabbi.

CHICAGO LAGS IN OWNING HOMES; REASON SOUGHT

Realtor Starts Move to Change Conditions.

Home owning statistics issued by the census bureau of the United States Chamber of Commerce show that only 27 per cent of Chicago's homes are owned by the persons who live in them. While Chicago's percentage is higher than the percentage for New York, Boston, and St. Louis, there are thirty-five of the larger cities in the United States which make a better showing than Chicago.

The building and finance committee of Chicago's second annual own your home exposition has started out to find the reasons for this situation. Joseph K. Brittain is chairman of the committee and Building Commissioner Bostrom is coöperating in the work of ascertaining what conditions favorable to home owning exist in other cities and why these conditions are inoperative in Chicago.

Brittain Starts Inquiry.

The first move in the investigation was made by Chairman Brittain last week when he called on the presidents of real estate boards in the larger cities for a statement of local conditions as they bear on home buying and building.

A subcommittee under the direction of William Zelosky is making a compilation of municipal ordinances and state laws which in any way hamper or encourage residential building. A comprehensive résumé of the committee's work will be available before the second annual exposition opens in the Coliseum in March.

Prizes for Designs.

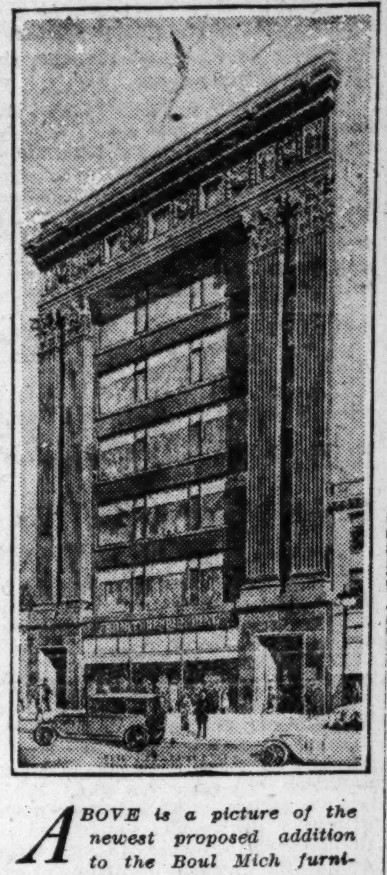
The landscape committee of the exposition, Ralph R. Root, chairman, announces a competitive design for the grounds of a small city or suburban home, the competition to be open to both professionals and amateurs. Awards will be offered for the first four designs selected by the jury as a partial compensation for the service rendered. The winner of first place will receive $75; second, third, and fourth places will be awarded $25 each. The jury is made up of one architect and two landscape architects, the members being Edward H. Bennett, Mrs. Francis P. King, and Noble Hollister.

The competition program was drafted by Chance S. Hill, profesor of landscape design, department of landscape gardening, University of Illinois. The contest closes at noon, Wednesday, Feb. 15, 1922, and the details of the problem on which the designs must be based, together with the conditions governing the contest, may be had on application to Robert H. Sexton, managing director, own your home exposition, 15 East Van Buren street.

Old Commercial Hotel at Last Being Rejuvenated

After standing empty for five years, the old Commercial hotel property at the northwest corner of Harrison and Wabash is being rejuvenated by E. F. Selz. The 160x80 five story building is being completely rebuilt from plans by Schmidt, Garden & Martin at a cost of $75,000 into a high class loft building.

On Boul Mich



ABOVE is a picture of the newest proposed addition to the Boul Mich furniture center, a seven story building designed by Architect Henry J. Schlacks for Paul J. Krez, to be erected especially for the wholesale furniture trade, at 1338-40 on a 65x170 site. John J. Downey of H. J. Ensinger & Co. negotiated the purchase of the site and will handle the renting and management. Work will start Feb. 1.
